London, June 24.—The officials of the Foreign Office yesterday morning sent the United States ambassador, Mr. Choate, a formal memorandum, embodying the temporary agreement reached in the Alaskan boundary on the situation.

Berlin, June 24.—Emperor William has conferred the rank of Count upon the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Von Buelow.

NEAR THE SOUTH POLE.

Dr. Cook Tells of the Belgica Antarctic Expedition.

New York, June 24.—Dr. Cook, who has returned from the Antarctic expedition, when seen at quarantine, said: "The Belgica expedition was organized in part by the Belgian Government and private subscriptions. I accompanied the expedition as surgeon and anthropologist. Briefly, our itinerary was as follows:

"Leaving Staten Land of the Southern Seas, on January 1, 1898, we proceeded directly for Cape Horn, taking soundings directly south from this point to the South Shetland Island, passing through this group to Palmer Land. We entered Palmer Land through Hughes' Gulf, which we found was not a gulf, but a strait, as long as Magellan and somewhat wider.

"We spent about two weeks surveying Hughes' Gulf, and finally emerged into the Pacific, and proceeded along the west border or coast of Graham's Land, until we entered the main body of pack ice west of Alexander Island. We passed through the pack ice about nine miles south, until we were frozen in. The vessel thus frozen in the pack ice remained fast for 13 months, during which we drifted 2,000 miles to and fro, and finally emerged into clear water at 103 west longitude. We then returned directly to Punta Arenas."

Anxiety About Bishop Newnham.

Toronto, June 24.—Toronto friends of Rev. Dr. Newham, Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Moosonee, in the northern district of Ontario, were made anxious last evening by a report from Missanabie, stating that the bishop was six days overdue at that place. Three Indians from Moose Factory, who arrived at Missanabie, June 18, said they passed the right reverend gentleman and his party 40 miles from Moose Factory, but a party of Brunswick Indians, who live 50 miles north of Missanabie, reached the latter point Thursday evening, and said they had not seen or heard anything of his lordship. A party is being organized in Missanabie, to leave to-night, on a search for the missing ones. The bishop was on a regular tour in connection with his work.

May and December Cut Loose.

Columbus, Ind., June 24. — George Wray, aged 103, has been granted a divorce by Judge Hord from Susan E. Wray, aged 80. Wray had been married four times, outliving his other three wives. He said that his last wife came to him and offered to take care of him if he would marry her.

Montreal's New Postmaster.

Montreal, June 24.—It is understood that before Hon. Mr. Tarte left Ottawa an order-in-council was adopted appointing Mr. C. A. Beaudoin, M.P., postmaster of Montreal, although it is supposed the county will not be formally opened until the close of the season.

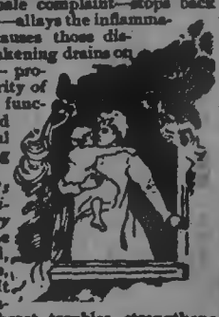
Went Down in Deep Water.

Kingston, June 24.—Capt. Joseph Murray, who commanded the tug Bronson, burned on Thursday at Alexandria Bay, says there is little hope of recovering the bodies of the two men who were drowned, as the water is over 450 feet deep where they went down.

"The night my house burned, several years ago, I was taken with shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart," writes Mrs. Susan C. Tuhan, of Sulphur Mines, Lewis Co., Va. "These grew worse all the time, until a few months ago, when I commenced the use of Dr. Pierce's medicines. Before that I could scarcely eat anything. I could not sleep at night, was not able to do any work, and could scarcely get around the house. I had given up all hope of ever getting well again; but I am well again, and I give Doctor Pierce's medicines all the credit.

"I took the 'Favorite Prescription,' the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets.'"

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a medicine for women only. It cures all forms of female complaint—stops back and side-ache—allays the inflammation which causes those disagreeable weakening drains on the system — promotes regularity of the feminine functions, and makes painful periods a thing of the past.



Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a medicine for the blood, liver, lungs, and nerves. It cures all bronchial and throat troubles, strengthens weak lungs, stops bleeding from the lungs, and builds up the entire system. It purifies the blood, stirs up a lazy liver, and soothes abused, crying nerves.

Neither of these medicines contains any alcohol, whisky, sugar or syrup to preserve its properties, but both will keep perfectly in any climate.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They keep the bowels open and regular. They do not gripe.

When you ask a dealer for these medicines—get what you ask for. Substitutes are not as good. They are, at best, only imitations, and cannot imitate the cures wrought by the genuine.

A Toronto Man is Deluged With Letters.

Wrote to People all Over Canada Asked About Dodd's Kidney Pills—Replies Have Been Coming for Two Weeks—Still They Come.

Toronto, June 23.—Replies to the letters sent out enquiring as to the lasting qualities of certain cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills, during the last nine years, have been pouring in on the gentleman who sent them out, this last week. He, it will be remembered, is the compiler of a scrap-book which contains a great many of the thousands of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills that have been reported from time to time in the daily and weekly press of this country.

The letters come from all over Canada and in some places are from people who were cured as many as nine years ago. All forms of Kidney Disease are represented, including Brights' Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Female Trouble, Paralysis, Dropsy, Bladder and Urinary Disorders, Nervous Diseases and Blood Poisoning. Up to the present no reply has been received which showed that a cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills of any of these complaints has ever been otherwise than permanent.

John McDonald, 130 Langlois Ave., Windsor, was reported in January, 1897, as being cured of Rheumatism and Dropsy of two years standing. He had used several remedies to no avail and finally he tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using but one box he was cured. The dropsical swelling in his legs, which had been severe, disappeared. Mr. McDonald is well known in Windsor and several persons vouched for his case at the time. Mr. McDonald's recent letter reads as follows:

Windsor, May 6th, 1899.

Dear Sir,—I will gladly send you the information you ask for, namely, that I am all right at present as far as my health is concerned. I used Dodd's Kidney Pills and found them to do all that they are advertised to do.

Yours truly,
JOHN McDONALD.

No Signs to Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, eyes, smooth, velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE CIRCUS

FOREPAUGH & SELLS' ATTRACTION PROVES TO BE A WONDER.

The Unloading of the Cars and Raising of the Tents Watched by Many—Fully Fifteen Thousand People View the Parade.

Like the triumphal entry of an invading army, vast in numbers and appointments, was the arrival in Peterborough this morning of the combined Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' circuses. An army indeed it is, but one of peace and instruction, strong in its educative and pleasure-dealing properties. The circus is undoubtedly the event of the year in city and country, and in the present show the fondly-cherished idols are apparently not going to be overthrown.

Although the three trains carrying the show were late in their arrival, the vast outfit was transferred to the show grounds without delay and as if under a magician's wand the lot was soon transferred into a canvassed roofed village with its varied attractions and industries.

Without question the circus in its vastness is one of the best organized shows that ever visited Peterborough. When it is remembered that there are 200 baggage wagons alone to unload, and the multitudious tents to be placed in position to house the show during its stay, the magnitude of the undertaking may be appreciated. However, the combined shows, carrying a staff of 500 attaches and 400 working horses, are in a position to haul the vast concern with despatch and order. The exhibition grounds, where the canvas city was reared, from early morn were thronged with eager onlookers, old and young, to whom the various details and steps in the unfolding and displaying of the features of the shows were a source of continued delight.

The Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' circus has in the elephant line alone 14 specimens. Among the number is the celebrated Othello, which 15 years ago figured as the world-renowned white elephant of the circus world. Othello is now shown in his true colors, but nevertheless is a most interesting specimen. With the troupe is a baby elephant known as Cuba. The junior member, however, appears to have received better treatment and hence to be in a better condition than its island namesake.

There are also camels, sacred bulls, buffalo, hippotamus, etc., in good numbers. Many of them are trained animals and their performance adds greatly to the strength of the show. In the menagerie there are eight lions, five tigers, panthers and numerous other specimens of the cat tribe, besides monkeys, baboons, snakes, etc. The show carries its own cuisine, having two large tents in which the meals are served, the provisions being procured in each town. Every department is complete, including the harness, blacksmith and general repair shops. In the main tent three ring performances will be given as well as a stage entertainment. Counting the menagerie tent, side shows, horse tents, etc., the circus has about 15,000 feet of canvas.

The two days' performance in Montreal was a record-breaker. On Monday the attendance reached the 10,000 mark, the management considering this one of the largest crowds ever got together under a tent. This morning the proprietors were busy superintending operations themselves. They look for another success in Peterborough to add to that triumphant fortnight tour of Canada.

THE PARADE.

Immense crowds arrived in town by the early trains and boats and took possession of every position of vantage from which that most popular attraction, this procession, could be viewed. Both sides of the principal streets were densely lined for a long time before the hour announced and the people waited patiently until the playing of the bands heralded the approach of the expected. The parade was over a mile in length and was voted to be the grandest ever seen in Peterborough. Owing to its length and the size of the crowd traffic was practically suspended and business came to a standstill while it passed through the streets.

A CARD.

DOMINION DAY.

The Event of the Day Will Have Unusual Attractions.

On Saturday, July 1st, Dominion Day, Peterborough will observe Canada's national holiday and all classes will rest from labor. The event of the day, the centre of amusement and entertainment will be the annual picnic on the St. Joseph's hospital grounds. An unusually fine programme has been arranged, including sports, a lacrosse match, quoit match, music, etc. The 57th Battalion will be present and discourse a choice programme during the day. Every one will find amusement and enjoyment on the grounds, where the shady trees and cool breezes will make a pleasant retreat for a warm day.

In the evening there will be a grand display of fireworks. The display will include 12 new electric candles, 12 colored Roman candles, 10 ball, large; 24 colored sky rockets, 6 oz.; 12 colored sky rockets, 1-2 lb.; 6 colored sky rockets, 1 lb.; 6 new colored exhibition rockets, 1-2 lb.; 2 colored parachute rockets, 2 lbs.; 2 tins crimson fire, 1-2 lb. each; 1 tin green fire, 1-2 lb.; 1 tin gold fire, 1-2 lb.; 6 colored Bengal lights, No. 5; 2 packets fire, red; 2 packets fire, green; 2 colored vertical wheels, 10 and 14 in.; 1 set piece, welcome; 3 triangular wheels, 1-4 lb.; 2 triangular wheels, 1-2lb.; 2 triangular wheels, 1 lb.; 2 double rose wheels; 6 large fiery whirlwinds; 3 colored star mines, No. 4; 2 colored star mines, No. 5; 2 colored star mines, No. 6; 1 small floral bomb shell; 1 devil among the tailors; 1 battery of colored stars; 1 set piece, col. diamond star; 1 set piece, palm tree; 1 colored fountain of golden showers, large; 1 col. double triangle wheel; 1 set piece, good night. This will make a grand night display.

The picnic this year eclipses all others as regards attractions, while the object towards which the funds will go is worthy and deserving—St. Joseph's hospital, a charitable institution, open to the sick and suffering of all classes and all creeds.

Keep St. Joseph's picnic in mind for Dominion Day. 2td

MARKHAM BY SIX TO FIVE

at point always delivered the ball safely. Bogart also put up an excellent game and showed himself a first class player.

On the first face off Doyle drew for Markham and passed down the field. Jim McCabe relieved. There was a little skirmishing from end to end for about five minutes and Jack McCabe passed to Bogart, who threw to Hollingshead, who scored the first on a neat shot. In the second there was some pretty combination work by both teams but the Markham home began to get in their work and sent in a number of shots. Dobbin made a bad throw from outside the goal and Markham secured the rubber. Tom Latimer shot and scored, making it a tie. The third was put through by McLellan from a scrimmage, in half a minute, making it 2-1 for Peterborough. The next game was the longest of the match. Peterborough's home seemed in hard luck and could not increase the lead. The defence men were drawn off their checks and Markham got a simple but accurate combination working with the result that Barlow scored, making 2-2. The fifth was all Markham's way. The pace was very fast and the home boys seemed to get fagged out. The visitors took the lead, Latimer scoring. They now had 3 goals to Peterborough's 2 and their supporters went into ecstacies of joy. In the next Jim McCabe was knocked out for a few minutes by a blow on the temple, but the goal came to Peterborough. Score 3-3. The home team took the lead, Jim McCabe scoring on an underhand throw. Barlow took another for Markham in one minute. Score 4-4. Querrive again did the trick for Markham, putting them one goal to the good. There was great excitement for a time and the score was again tied, 5-5, Jack McCabe putting it into the net on a pass from King in half a minute's play. But the next decided the game, the Markham men putting it through from a scrimmage, and winning out by 6 goals to 5.

The teams were:

Peterborough (5)—Goal, F. Dobbin, point, H. Lewis; cover point, J. Brown; defence, M. McDonough, R. Glover, Jas. McCabe; centre, E. G. Bogart; home field, L. King, Jack McCabe, G. Lipsett; outside home, A. Hollingshead; inside home, A. McClelland, Field Captain, J. Begley.

Referee—T. Beattie, Toronto.
Umpires—C. LeBrun, Peterborough, D. Gleason, Markham.

NOTES.

Pres. Latimer, Sec. G. W. Wilson, and W. H. Hall, of the executive, were all down with the Markham team.

It would be hard to get an excursion from Peterborough to accompany the team as large as the crowd that turned out from the village of Markham yesterday.

The boys have good hopes of winning the return match in Markham. They expect to have Burns on the team and to strengthen the home considerably.

The Markham club went down to Perth on the midnight train to play there to-day.

The absence of any disputes or bickerings was a most satisfactory feature of the game.

Both the visiting team and the excursionists expressed themselves as highly pleased with the match and with the hospitality shown them in the town.

Lewis, the colored gent, caught on with the crowd. The clever way in which he eluded two of the Markham men near the east fence won him rounds of applause.

After the match Arthur Buchner, the clever trick rider, gave an exhibition on his Brantford Red Bird.

The next game will be on Monday afternoon, when Hastings team comes up to play the juniors in a league match.

DISCUSSED THE NEW DIOCESE

THE BISHOP OF TORONTO REFUSES TO MAKE ANY STATEMENT.

Archdeacon Allen a Hearty Supporter—The Bishop Shows a Cool Attitude—Rev. Mr. Pearson's Scheme.

At the Anglican Synod at Toronto Thursday the question of the new diocese caused various sentiments to be expressed. The committee on the subject recommended: "That in the event of the division of this Diocese by the setting a part of the eastern portion thereof to be a new Diocese within three years from this date, the Diocesan Mission Fund shall, notwithstanding such division, be collected and administered throughout the whole area included in the present Diocese of Toronto for a period of five years from date of division, as if such division had not been made."

Archdeacon Allen, of Millbrook, in speaking for the report deemed that in the division there was no disloyalty to the Bishop. There was enough in Toronto alone for any Bishop to do, and do justice to himself and his work.

Rev. H. Symonds, of Ashburnham, spoke after the Archdeacon and was reminded by the Bishop that he had not once spoken to the subject. The Bishop in the discussion that followed said very little, maintaining an attitude of cool opposition to the proposed division.

"I will not be drawn into a speech," said he.

C. J. Blomfield, of Lakefield, moved an amendment to defer action on the matter. He asked in vain for a seconder, until Principal Sheraton came to his rescue.

Principal Sheraton considered the proposal premature.

Archdeacon Allen—That amendment means that the new Diocese will never come into existence. In asking this of Toronto we ask no more than Toronto is doing now. We want to help the church and to help the Diocese. It is sometimes the case that by amputating a limb we save a life, and by cutting off the branch we save the tree.

Rev. John Pearson had a proposal which so startled the Synod that most present burst out laughing. It had been on his mind for some time. He believed that the Bishop's office was a divine one and no invention of man. The Bishop of the new Diocese might go forth without any financial backing and succeed. Mr. Pearson had a scheme. The Synod was not bound to support a rector for St. James' for three months or three years, or any time. Why not give the Bishop of the new Diocese St. James' and thus get over the financial difficulty? Draw a line up Yonge-st and have the Bishop of Toronto in St. Alban's on one side, and the new Bishop on the other in St. James'. Have one Synod office.

Bishop Sweatman—In such a case the division of spoils would not be fair. Here would be the Bishop of Toronto in St. Alban's without any money, and the new bishop in wealthy St. James'.

The Bishop waxed sarcastic. "There was," he said, "some small fallacy about Mr. Machlem's remarks. It was like the principle that it was a good thing for a church to have a debt on it. If we lost this mission field and had a surplus we would not have to work for another. There is Algoma. This new diocese will be a second Algoma. It is described as a daughter to the Toronto diocese. We know how Algoma has been treated. I hope the new daughter will be treated better.

Ultimately this amended resolution was passed unanimously:

"That in the event of the division of this diocese by the setting apart of the eastern portion thereof to be a new diocese, within three years from this date the Synod pledges itself to contribute $2,000 for five years."

The June session of the County Council was concluded this morning. A short session was held last evening, when committee reports were presented. This morning other reports were brought in and business wound up, in time for the Councillors to view the circus parade.

The report of the proceedings is held over.

Among the recommendations adopted in the finance report is $100 to the Children's Aid Society. The Chemong bridge matter is left in the hands of the Road and Bridge Committee. Mr. W. H. Casement was appointed the county arbitrator to meet the town in regard to the readjustment of the division of the cost of maintaining the court house, gaol, etc.

J. J. Turner & Sons have just got word from their captain that the schooner "Wave Crest" was loaded at Oswego with coal for Hamilton and that she had fine weather till within a few miles of Hamilton when the storm came on and she had to turn tail and run clear to Kingston before she could get shelter as none of the harbors on the north shore has water enough for a vessel to enter in a gale. She carried away her main gaff in the blow and the captain says she behaved admirably.

St. Joseph's Hospital Picnic.

MARKHAM BY SIX TO FIVE

HOME TEAM LOSES THE FIRST LEAGUE MATCH OF THE SEASON.

A Large Crowd Present and a Clean and Clever Exhibition of the National Game Witnessed—Notes on the Game.

Peterborough was up against it yesterday afternoon when the lacrosse team was beaten in the first senior league game in town by the Markham team, by a score of 6 goals to 5. The Markham excursion arrived in town at noon with about three hundred people on board, a number of whom were from Stouffville, Uxbridge and other places along the route. They viewed the sights until about two o'clock, when visitors and townspeople intermingled and wended their way across to the battle ground at the P.A.A.A. grounds. The match started at 2.30 o'clock sharp and was over about 4.40. Then the Markham excursionists gathered their parcels around them and when their train pulled out at 5.30 they had a large measure of joy and satisfaction to take home with them, together with quite an amount of dry goods, fancy goods and some green goods, the latter won by judicious speculation.

The match itself was one of the best that has been played on the grounds for some time and from a spectator's point of view was nearly all that could be desired. It was clean, fast and exciting. At no stage of the game was either team more than one goal ahead. It was a see-saw contest all through. First one team would gain the lead of a goal and then their opponents would tie the score. For the first half Peterborough led but then Markham pulled ahead by a goal. Markham spectators, who were present in large numbers and were conspicuous by their red and white badges, and by the enthusiastic and vociferous rooting they did for their pets, were jubilant. Peterborough's prospects of winning waned and faded away as the game went on but they tied the score again. Then Markham tallied another and before the books could be balanced, the referee received notice that time was up and he called the game up.

The score is a correct indication of the merits of the teams. Markham seemed in better trim They had not a noticeably weak spot on their team. Their defence was above criticism. It was of the Stonewall Jackson order. They were steady, quick and sure, and succeeded in conquering their checks and guarding their flags at the same time in beautiful style. The home players could not draw them out. If the flags were in danger they lined up and blocked every attack most effectively. The Markhams' centre field was good and their home displayed a fine combination and good scoring ability which totalled up well.

The Peterborough team also played a good match, especially in the field, and on the defence. Their home was lacking in effectiveness in itself and was held down by the opposing players. There was lots of passing but little shooting, for when the ball was worked in it either resulted in a scrimmage or the rubber was scooped out by some of the Markham players. Games are won by scoring. Inability to shoot is fatal. The defence did not cover their checks closely enough and the chief fault in the field seamed to be that a player to whom a ball was passed would wait for it to reach him, while meanwhile a Markham man would run in and scoop it almost out of his stick.

The visitors really seemed to slightly excel in all parts. Their stick work was clever. Their passing was accurate and fast. There was lots of life in both teams and the play was fast and hard. There was little apparent roughness, although some of the local boys have badly bruised arms. Only one man was ruled off in the match, T. Latimer, for lying on the ball to prevent his opponent securing it. There were few fouls. The referee was satisfactory. Altogether it was a splendid game to watch.

For the home team McDonough, King, Jim McCabe, Glover, Brown, Bogart and Lewis all played good ball and are entitled to credit therefor. Lewis and Bogart were new men and their play was watched with interest. Lewis proved his title as a fast and clever player. He is a splendid stick handler, is full of tricks, and from his position

A STREET CAR DIALOGUE

"What is the matter?" asked Smith as his friend Thompson stepped down beside him in the street car, "You look about as happy as a wet cat?"

"I look no worse that I feel," said Thompson, moodily.

"What's the matter, old man?" asked Smith anxiously. "Business bad?"

"No," said Thompson, shortly.

"What then?"

"Everything," said Thompson.

"That's bad," said Smith, commiseratingly. "In fact it is about as bad as it can be."

"The fact is," burst out Thompson, "I didn't get along happily with my wife."

"I understood she was an angel," said Smith in surprise.

"She doesn't know anything about cooking," said Thompson.

"That's not part of an angel's business," said Smith.

"Well, it should be," said Thompson, savagely. "I couldn't get to sleep for hours last night. When I did drop off I dreamt there was a tomb-stone on my chest."

"Indigestion," said Smith.

"My wife's cooking," said Thompson.

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," said Smith.

"Eh?" said Thompson.

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," repeated Smith, "they'll fix you."

"How do you know?" said Thompson.

"Tried 'em," said Smith.

"Did they cure you?" asked Thompson anxiously.

"They did," replied Smith emphatically.

"Now, I will tell you what to do. You get a box or two of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and take one Tablet after every meal. That'll digest your wife's cooking or any other angel's cooking. In that way you give your wife a chance to learn how to cook, and you're both happy in the meantime?"

"How much are they?" asked Thompson.

"Fifty cents a box. Any druggist will sell you Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," said Smith.

The Queer Dunkards.

The Dunkards are one of the most peculiar religious sects in the country. Their name is properly Tunkers and is derived from the German word "tunken," to dip. They are also called Tumblers from their method of baptism, which is to put the person, while kneeling, head first under the water. The sect was founded in Germany in the seventeenth century, but its members were persecuted and in 1735 accepted an invitation from William Penn to settle in Pennsylvania. They live largely in communities and follow somewhat closely the customs of the Quakers in regard to dress.

They never engage in lawsuits, take no oaths and no active part in politics. They do not believe in war, and divorce is unknown among them. Twice a year each congregation has a love feast, in which the members wash each other's feet and salute each other with the kiss of fellowship, men kissing men, and women women. Until recently the taking of interest for money loaned was not allowed among them. They are an agricultural people, and as Pennsylvania and the other eastern states have become more thickly settled the Dunkards have gradually removed to more western states.

OUT OF DOOR ATTIRE.

Bicycle Gowns and Other Costumes For the Open Air.

Bicycle skirts are not lined, as that would increase their weight, and are made rather scant. On the inside of the hem a facing of leather is often placed. A deeper facing of silk may be employed when the skirt has a tendency to slip upward and cling there, as is sometimes the case with rough fabrics. For summer denim or heavy duck makes a cool and serviceable bicycle suit, which does not become wilted and stringy, like crash.

Trousers of the same color should be worn beneath a bicycle skirt, or tights of thin jersey cloth may be adopted instead. No petticoat is required—in fact, petticoats are to be avoided as useless and cumbersome.

The bodice for outing gowns is more varied than the skirt. It may be a bolero, which is frequently adopted now, or it may be a very short jacket, close at the back and sides and straight in front, or it may be a tight corsage, with the briefest possible basque, opening slightly at the throat to show he masculine collar and cravat. This last style is exceedingly fashionable, although unsuited for warm weather.

CLOTH CAPE.

The cape shown in the cut is of silver gray cloth, the shoulders and the part over the top of the arms being heavily corded. The seams are so arranged that sleeves are simulated, and lines of silver cord border the edge of the cape, above which is a vine of black and silver embroidery. The ruffled collar and the cravat are of black satin, and there is a trimming of black satin choux fastened by jeweled ornaments. The lining is of gray satin.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE WARDROBE.

Some of Its Leading Features This Season.

Berets, toques and hats of all sizes are seen, and there are symptoms of a revival of the directoire hat, with its high crown and large brim.

The bolero takes precedence of both coat and jacket in tailor made gowns and is preferred for the most elegant of this class of costume.

In spite of the general adoption of trailing skirts, the walking skirt of ordinary length is still worn, for its proper purpose, in Paris by the most fashionable women, who are fully aware of the inelegance of a trained skirt for active pedestrian exercise.

Many double skirts are seen, but they retain the clinging tendency and follow the lines of the figure closely. The ambition of the fashionable woman of the day is to suppress all feminine contours, decreasing the hips and flattening the bodice as much as possible, and then to incase herself in a costume which renders the absence of those contours noticeable. The result of such a course is to give a naturally thin figure the aspect of that of a saint in the worst of the pictures by the old masters, but a beautiful form will emerge triumphant from the trial, although it is not improved by such ascetic treatment.

CREPE GOWN.

The gown illustrated is of sulphur crepe de chine, the skirt having a band of white lace insertion over blue silk arranged in points. The stretched bodice is gathered at the waist and opens over a plastron crossed by bands of insertion over blue silk. The collar and revers are in one and are bordered with a ruffle of lace and a band of insertion over blue silk. The sleeves have little plaits at the shoulders and a frill of lace at the wrists. The belt is of blue silk.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Might Fit.

"It occurs to me," remarked Aguinaldo, "that we ought to have a national anthem. Have you anything to suggest along this line?"

"Well," replied his private secretary, "how would 'Flee as a Bird to Yon Mountain' do?"—Colorado Springs Gazette.

Helena In the Old Days.

A little group of old timers were talking about the palmy days of wide open gambling in New Orleans. "It used to be pretty lively, I admit," said one of the veterans, "but the only sure enough Monte Carlo this country ever saw was out in Montana. I'll never forget the first time I struck Helena. It's a good sized, handsome city, and I took a stroll down the main street looking at the stores. Pretty soon I was struck cold by a monster sign of 'Licensed Gambling House' right over the door of one of the finest places in town.

"In less than a block I ran across a dozen other signs of the same kind, and then I began to ask questions. I found that the law required all gaming places to put up such boards. They had to be 15 feet long and 2 feet wide, with plain white letters on a black ground. The original bill didn't specify the size, so some of the houses had signs made about half an inch long, that you'd need a microscope to read, and that's why the particulars were laid down so exactly. The gambling shops were sandwiched right in between groceries and shoe stores, and one of 'em was next door to a church. It looked funny, I tell you."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Wonderful Hairdressing.

Hairdressing in Zululand is an important feature, both to the bride and bridegroom, and the attention paid to the coiffure of the pair would shame the performance of a west end hairdresser who arranges a bride's locks and fastens the orange blossom chaplet.

A cone shaped erection, for instance, is the lawful coiffure of a Zulu wife, and this cannot be legally worn till the marriage rites are duly completed. Save for the all important cone, the head of a Zulu bride is closely shaved, an assagai being used for the purpose, while as soon as a youth is of marriageable age his head is shorn to leave a ring around the scalp and then liberally bedaubed with fat and ocher, without which unguents no Zulu would feel fittingly decorated for his bride.

When the bridegroom elect has been shorn of all his hair save the wool on the crown, which is trained in a circular shape and some four inches in diameter, a ring is sewed to this gum and charcoal. In this the Zulu thrusts long snuff spoons, needles and small utility articles and is very proud of his ring, which is the badge of manhood.—Cassell's Magazine.

A Conscientious Sentry.

Washington, hearing that the colored sentinels could not be trusted, went out one night to ascertain if the report was correct. The countersign was "Cambridge," and the general, disguised, as he thought, by a large overcoat, approached a colored sentry.

"Who goes there?" cried the sentinel.

"A friend," replied Washington.

"Friend, advance, unarmed, and give the countersign," said the colored man.

Washington came up and said, "Roxbury."

"No, sah!" was the response.

"Medford," said Washington.

"No, sah!" returned the colored soldier.

"Charleston," said Washington.

The colored man immediately exclaimed, "I tell you, Massa Washington, no man go by here 'cept he say 'Cambridge.'"

A Dutiful Little Girl.

"Such a lot of people live in our 'ouse," she told me, "17 of us; two ladies live in the cellars!" And her mother always went once a week to call on a lady who lived in the "workus." "Please 'm, father calls mother such wicked names," she suddenly informed me one day, and out came a string of dreadful epithets. "Hush," I interrupted, "you mustn't tell me those things." "Please 'm, he does," she persisted, "and we all want father to die, if mother didn't 'ave to pay for the coffin"—so pathetic and doubtless so true. —Mrs. Merrick's "With a Palette in Eastern Palaces."

Economy.

A west Philadelphia young woman, on the ground of economy, induced her betrothed to waive the formality of an engagement ring and to give her the money, $100, instead. After they had been married six months she informed him that she had invested the money in a life membership in a woman's suffrage society.

Pre-eminent.

"Ma, I'm at the head of my class."

"How's that, Dick?"

"Teacher says I'm the worst of all the bad boys in school."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

KILLED THE DEALER.

A GAME OF FARO WHERE A LIFE COUNTED AS NOTHING.

The Tenderfoot Warned the Mexican once, but the Temptation to Cheat Was Too Strong, and the Greaser Succumbed and Fell Dead.

"Before I came to this good old town to loaf I was in a government berth," said a pension office official, "I used to be something of a gypsy. I had a bad attack of the 'wandering foot,' and I took in nearly every old roost along the Rockies. I saw Tombstone, A. T., when duels made the sandy streets crimson with the gore of gamblers and town marshals. Leadville was a bit dull in comparison with some of the other places, but I freely give the little old town of Coeur d'Alene the palm for absolute indifference in the face of homicide. The scenes I witnessed during my short stay there would make the pages of Richard Henry Savage sound like excerpts from one of Mrs. Burton Harrison's society romances. It is located at the head of Coeur d'Alene lake, over in Idaho, not far from Spokane. In the eighties it was a lively mining town, with all the trimmings thrown in.

"Like all such boom towns, it did not wake up until after the glare of the night lamps had taken the place of the sunshine. Then the dance halls started up and the gambling joints were in full blast. The riffraff of the earth was there, from Mongolian to Caucasian, and all joined hands in the mad whirl, which ended in the grave or the gutter. I was not much of a sport, but I caught the fever to a limited extent. I was in the habit of going to the gambling halls to risk small sums, merely for the privilege of watching the crowd.

"One night I was in 'Fatty' Carroll's gaming resort, risking my usual 25 cent bets at the faro table. We had a black browed Mexican dealing, a Chinaman was keeping cases, while the 'lookout' chair was being occupied by a young Harvard graduate, who had lost his roll in the mines and was turning his hand to the first job that showed up. The Mexican was known all around as a tricky dealer, and we had to watch the box pretty close to keep from being robbed of all we had on the very first deal. However, the bets were not large, and no one had the nerve to kick about the paltry sums that were gradually finding their way into the cash-box.

"Along about midnight a young tenderfoot looking chap strolled into the hall. He was nattily rigged out in trim corduroys and neat, high top boots. After going up to the bar and getting a drink he came over to the faro table. A deal had just been ended, and the Mexican was shuffling the pack. The newcomer ordered the Chinaman out of his chair and sat down to keep cases himself. He pulled out a bag of $10 goldpieces and proceeded to stack them up in front of him. The Mexican began to fidget a little, for he could that he had a game on hand, and he needed all his nerve. Before the deal was half through three of the queens were out of the box. The tenderfoot chap put $50 up for the lady to lose. The greaser pulled the cards carefully from then on. Suddenly he made a quick movement, and the queen came out—a winner.

"The tenderfoot's eyes flashed fire, but he turned to the Mexican and said in cool quiet tones:

"'I saw you turn that dirty card, and I will let it go this time. If you do it again, I'll kill you without warning.' He pulled out a .44 and laid it on the table by his side, behind his stack of goldpieces.

"'Muy bien, senor,' drawled the Mexican as he went on with the deal.

"But he was more careful from that time on. I staid and followed the bets of the tenderfoot. He won just as if he knew the lay of the cards. It seemed impossible for him to lose, and at the end of a dozen deals he was at least $1,200 to the good. The Mexican was muttering all the Spanish oaths he knew, and he changed the cards every other deal. He looked nervously at the heavy caliber gun that lay over on the other side of the stranger's growing stack, but he could not muster up sufficient courage to cheat. The young fellow began to plunge a little. His bets grew bigger, and still he won.

"At last the Mexican could stand the pressure no longer. His job was at stake. 'Fatty' Carroll kept no man who could not win for him. The end of the deal came, and the last three cards were still in the box. The dealer waited for the players to arrange their bets for 'calling the turn.' The tenderfoot put $100 on ace, ten and tray, and we all followed suit. The bank stood to lose about $1,000. The Mexican turned pale as death, for he knew the bet was a winner. He could not resist the temptation, and when he pulled the cards he shifted them, and they came out tray, ten, ace. Quick as a flash the tenderfoot's gun rang out, and the Mexican rolled over on the floor with a bullet through his heart. All was commotion for a moment, but the young fellow sat in his chair with a cool smile on his face. The bartender came up and asked what was the matter.

"'He turned a dirty card on me, and I shot him, as I told him I would,' answered the tenderfoot as he stacked up his winnings.

"'That's all right,' commented the barkeep. 'He never was on the square, but don't let's have any trouble here. It would hurt the reputation of the house. Do you want to play any more?'

"'Of course,' answered the tenderfoot.

"The barkeep ordered the Harvard graduate out of the 'lookout' chair and put him to dealing, and the game went on as if nothing had happened. The dead Mexican lay on the floor right where he had fallen. The worst part of the matter was that he was right by my side, and his wide open eyes, with the glaze of death slowly settling over them, stared me right in the face, till I got so nervous that I could hardly pick up my chips. But I would not weaken, since the others were so indifferent. I staid clear through till the game closed at sunrise. The tenderfoot quit about $600 winner. As he rose from the table he [illegible] look at the body of the Mexican as it lay weltering in blood on the floor."—[illegible]

NEW IDOL OF PARIS.

Gen. Gallieni, the Man Through Whom the Island of Madagascar Became a Colony of France, Receiving Honor.

General Gallieni, who is dividing public honors in Paris with that very popular explorer, Major Marchand, is the man by whose prompt and vigorous policy the Island of Madagascar became a colony of France. Under Gallieni slavery was abolished in Madagascar, brigandage suppressed and the main trade routes opened. The General not only brought order out of chaos by his stern military rule, being Governor-General of the island, but he also proved himself an excellent and energetic civil administrator. He established a central trade bureau of information to be used by explorers, prospectors and colonists. He gave special orders to all schoolmasters to bring to his attention the names of pupils who made rapid progress in the French language. All such are to be appointed to office. The result of this shrewd measure had been to double the number of pupils in the French schools and reduce by half that of those in the English schools. Villagers in remote regions are supplied with rifles and ammunition, but if any villager disappears with his weapons his property will be confiscated. General Gallieni has introduced other reforms into the government of the island and has been very successful since he was given command of the French forces there.

The Trials of a Writer.

Why should the young, aspiring author be discouraged or become weary in well doing? We have a letter from one of them in which he says:

"Five years ago I submitted a short story to a certain magazine. It was returned immediately. I sent it to another. It came back. All told, I have sent that same story to 27 magazines, great and small. It has been five years on the road, going and coming. But recently I sent it to the magazine that first declined it, and it was accepted, with thanks and a satisfactory check! Of course in that time the old editors of this certain magazine either died or resigned, and it must have fallen into the hands of some new man, who had not seen it before. But in five years' time the postage on that manuscript amounted to $17.50! I got thrice that figure for it at last, so I am not grumbling!"

One will gather from the above that the "literary business" means this, if it means anything: "Patience and shuffle the cards!"—Atlanta Constitution.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

"Well, as to that, you're not sure. That fellow who brought the news was paid to represent the head of the Valetta police, for they knew you had invoked official aid, and just as like as not he gave you an address that your mother never heard of."

"Well, here we are!" suddenly.

"Eh? This is the Strada Mezodi?"

"Any objections to it?" laughing.

"Oh, no! one place is as good as another to me, in this Maltese city, where you seem to be climbing to paradise or descending into hades all the time. Only I'm glad I came."

"Why, professor?"

"Well," with a look down the street, "I'm afraid you'll need the services of a friend before long—that you are about to experience a sensation you won't soon forget," replies Philander, coolly.

CHAPTER VI.

"It is possible!" declares John; "under such circumstances I shall indeed be glad to have a friend in need. At the same time it seems as strange to me to think that Pauline Potter can be here—that the Chicago actress whom I once adored and with a youth's ardor swore to make my wife, can be here and bothering her head about one John Craig, M.D."

"It will soon be known. You have a good description of this house which the man supposed to be Luther Keene brought?" asks Philander, showing unexpected business qualities; indeed, he is proving more of a wonder to the young Chicagoan every hour.

"Yes, and can find it easily enough by the red lamp in front," he replies.

"I see such a light along the strada."

"That is, in all probability, our destination."

They advance, and in another minute are at the door of the domicile marked so conspicuously with a red light.

John allows himself a brief period of ecstasy as he remembers that this mother crossed this threshold only recently, and in his eyes this renders it holy.

Then he recovers his common sense, and is once more the wide-awake, vigilant John Craig who met the advance of the mad dog so coolly upon the hill road of Valetta.

"There's a knocker," says the professor.

"I'll try it," John replies, and as he swings the weight a ponderous sound ensues, a hollow clamor that is loud enough to arouse the whole street, John thinks.

"Great guns!" mutters Philander, "it's a great piece of luck there's no graveyard near."

"How's that?" demands his companion.

"Well, that clang would arouse the dead," is the amazing reply.

Further conversation is cut short by the sound of footsteps within—a bolt is withdrawn, proving that the inmates of the house on the Strada Mezodi do not have the Maltese sense of honor that makes the presence of locks and bars unnecessary.

Then the door is opened.

The red lantern gives a light that shows them the interior of this Valetta house, and in the brilliant illumination stands a man, a native Maltese servant.

John has arranged his plan of action in such an event. He hopes the man who opens the door may talk English.

"Good evening," he says, courteously. "I would see the gentleman of the house on business of importance."

"Are you Doctor Craig?"

"That is my name."

"John Alexander Craig?"

"The same."

"Of Chicago?"

"You hit it, my friend of Malta."

"Ah! you are expected—enter," in the surprising reply, and the professor calls his attention to it by a sly dig in the ribs.

They start to enter, when the faithful servitor of the house bars the way of the professor.

"Pardon; I said Doctor Craig."

"Well?" demands Philander, bristling up.

"You can wait for him outside. I will give you a chair, a cigar."

The professor laughs in good humor.

"Bless you, I'm Doctor Craig's shadow; he can't go anywhere but with me. Fetch two chairs. We will interview your master outside."

The citizen of Malta appears perplexed. John comes to the rescue.

"It will be all right; this gentleman is my companion, my interpreter. It is necessary that he accompany me. Enter, professor."

His assurance carries the day. The man backs down and allows Philander a passage.

Their first point is gained.

The servant, having closed and barred the door and asked them to follow, goes on ahead. The professor takes advantage of the opportunity presented, and plucks John's sleeve, and as that worthy bends down, he whispers:

"Have you noticed it?"

"What?" asks the young doctor.

"His style of address, my boy; same words exactly that were used at the hotel by the man who brought you the news."

"Jove! you are right, professor. I imagine that must be the formal style in this country."

Philander chuckles.

"You'll have to guess closer to the mark than that, my boy, when you want to strike the tuth."

"What can you mean, sir?"

"Bless you, it's the same man. Notice his walk; doesn't he hold himself just so?"

"Professor, you're wide awake. I admit all you say. There is a wonderful resemblance. Yes, I believe it is the same man. Really, this affair grows more and more interesting. Talk about your comedies, they're not in it."

Further conversation is cut off by the fact of their guide ushering them into a room that is lighted with an antique lamp.

"Wait here," he says and disappears.

John Craig manages to retain his self-possession, though it gives him a thrill to think that he may be looking upon a scene which was only recently graced by the presence of the being whom he seeks far and wide—his mother.

Now some one comes; they hear the rustle of skirts, and know it is no man who advances.

"Steady, boy," warns Philander, knowing the sensation produced in John's quivering, expectant heart; "steady it is now, and keep your wits bright."

"Steady it is," replies John, who knows it is only right he should brace up.

Then the party advancing enters the apartment, and looking up the two men behold one who is garbed in a peculiar habit, the insignia of an order; a heavy black gown corded at the waist, with a white flowing collar, and a strange bonnet, both black and white, the size of which is astonishing.

Her face they do not see, as a gauze veil hides it from mortal view.

In this city of orders, where the nations of the world seem to vie with each other in creating strange commanderies, it is nothing to meet with such a garb.

John Craig is a gentleman; he rises from his chair and bows; ditto Philander, who keeps a little in his rear, as becomes a sensible, well-behaved "shadow."

The dress of the woman gives John an idea she is at the head of some charitable organization which has set rules for dress and duty, although his knowledge of such matters is not most profound.

"Madame, pardon this intrusion," he says, at the same time wondering whether she is English, French or a native of Malta.

Her reply comes in a low voice, and tells him she is as familiar with the English language as himself, no matter what her nationality.

"It is no intrusion, Doctor Craig. I have been expecting you."

"Indeed! you surprise me, madame, since I sent no word of my coming."

"Ah! a little bird sent me the news."

"Do you know why I enter your abode without an invitation, madame?"

"You seek news, Doctor Craig."

"That is true."

"News of one who has long been lost; news concerning a member of our holy order; the dear sister who has consecrated her life to charity, and who, under my fostering care, has long since redeemed her past—Sister Magdalen."

The words almost unnerve John; he has a feeling that perhaps Heaven means to be kind and allow him the bliss he craves.

"Ah, madame, you know my secret. It is true. I would find her, would hear from her own lips the story of the past. I believe you can help me. She has occupied this house."

"That very chair upon which you are seated sustained her fainting form one afternoon when she came in. I thought she was dying. In her hand she carried a paper, an American daily. I glanced at it to see if I could learn the truth, and saw it there as plain as day. She had read a notice of a fire in Chicago where a young man named John Craig, said to be a medical student, perished."

"Did she see that account? It was cruel. The next day's paper refuted the lie, and explained how he escaped," says John, warmly.

"Yes, I saw it. She would give us no rest until we procured a later copy of the same paper, and there she read the truth. Sister Magdalen was all smiles from that hour; she said that Heaven had indeed answered her prayer."

"Tell me, is she here now?" holding his breath with suspense.

"Oh! no, she went away several weeks ago. We shall not see her again unless she chances to be one of three lay delegates now on their way here from a sister sancturay."

"Then you can give no hope; let me know where I may find her?"

"If I see my duty in that way, Doctor Craig," is the astonishing reply he receives.

He conceives the idea what this may mean.

"Madame, I am ready to do what I can for the good of your order, if you will bring about this long anticipated meeting."

"Your word shall be your bond. We need five hundred dollars to endow another bed in the hospital at Rome."

"It shall be yours; I swear it."

"Hush, impious man! Your word is enough. On my part I promise that ere an hour goes by you shall be in a fair way to look upon the face of one who loves you more dearly than if you had never been lost to her."

John hears and believes; he is not suspicious enough to put a double meaning upon the words.

"An hour—so soon? What am I to do in order to gain this consummation of my hopes?" he asks, in deep surprise.

"Nothing, only be content to remain here as my guests."

John looks at Philander, and the latter nods, for it all seems clear and above board.

"We agree, madame," says the young doctor.

The Mother Superior, as they take her to be, bows her head, solemnly.

"It is well," she says, and touches a bell.

Almost immediately the native servant appears, to whom she speaks in low tones, while John wonders when so great a revolution in the affairs of orders like this occurred whereby they are enabled to have men-servants.

Hardly has the native vanished than another sister appears, carrying a small tray upon which are seen a crystal bottle full of grape juice, three odd glasses and a plate of plain flat cakes.

"Doctor Craig, our order refuses the use of wines; this is the pure juice of the grape, expressed at our own vineyard on this island. It is as harmless as water, but refreshing. It is our simple habit to invite our guests to join us in this way; we believe in the Arab rule of breaking bread; those with whom we take salt are ever more our friends. You will not, cannot refuse.

How should they?

John looks at the professor, and in turn the latter looks at John.

"Madame, you have given me cause for happiness; we will join you in your simple lunch," returns the young man.

"You are wounded," noticing his arm in its sling.

"Not seriously."

"By chance I saw your adventure this day. I am proud to have the hero of that noble deed for my guest."

"Pardon; please do not mention it."

He accepts a glass of the grape juice and an anise-seed cake, for this plant is grown in Malta for export.

The liquid is cold and very refreshing. John has a dozen questions on the tip of his tongue, all of which relate to Sister Magdalen, but he does not put them, for his thoughts become somewhat incoherent, and it is so comfortable sitting there.

When the Mother Superior raises her veil to sip from the amber glass of unfermented wine, John Craig, M.D., has sense enough to notice two things; the hand that holds the glass is plump and fair, and the lips under the veil form a Cupid's bow such as age can never know.

This arouses a wild curiosity in his mind; he wonders what this woman, who wears such a strange habit, can be like, and watches her with something like eagerness.

Surely the room is growing very close; a window opened would be a good thing he believes, and yet somehow lacks the energy to open it, turns his head, and sees the professor lying back in his chair fast asleep.

This gives him a faint shock, but his nerves are deadened; nothing would surprise him very much now, unless an earthquake occurred.

"Rest your head, Doctor Craig; the back of the chair is very comfortable," he hears a soft voice say.

Warm breath fans his face. The Mother Superior has thrown aside that ugly bonnet; it is a young face, a fair face, surrounded by golden curls, that looks down upon him, as with a stage laugh the woman rests one hand on the head of the drugged medical student from Chicago to exclaim:

"At last! he belongs to Pauline Potter!"

CHAPTER VII.

John Craig dreams. He fancies himself bathing with demon apes in the wilds of Africa, having read an explorer's account of such a scene very recently.

They press him hard, and he can see no hope of escaping with this life.

In the midst of his mental torture he opens his eyes, and the disagreeable features of the case are suddenly swept away.

Where can he be? Soft music throbs upon the scented air. He hears the gentle plash of a fountain in a court near by; a mellow light, anything but garish, shows him the most luxurious surroundings, silks and velvet, brightness in color and gorgeousness in taste, everywhere.

This amazes him; almost takes his breath away; it is so different from his dream, which left him in a desperate hole.

His mind seems dull of comprehension, which must be the effect of the drug, so that for a brief time he is unable to understand the situation, or grasp his condition.

Then it dawns upon him, the mission that took him away from the hotel; and having reached that point, he is wrestling with what must have followed when something touches his face, something that is cool and pleasant—the soft, white hand of a woman.

Then Doctor Chicago's eyes flash open again, and he looks up startled; he has just recollected Lady Ruth's

Crutches Thrown Away

THE REMARKABLE CASE OF A YOUNG GIRL IN WALKERTON.

For Three Years she Could Only go About With the Aid of Crutches—Had to be Helped in and Out of Bed—Her Restoration to Health was Unlooked For.

From the Walkerton Telescope.

A couple of Walkerton ladies were recently discussing the case of a mutual friend who, owing to the sudden development of a bad attack of sciatica, had been compelled to take to her bed, when a third lady present, but who was a stranger to the young woman in question, made the remark, "I would advise your friend to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." Asked to give her reasons for making this recommendations she proceeded to give the details of a most remarkable cure that had been effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on the daughter of her nearest neighbor, a Miss Rebecca Greenhow, and the story as told by this lady, having subsequently been repeated in the hearing of the editor of this paper, we decided to investigate and find out from personal inquiry all the circumstances of this seeming remarkable instance of the power of medicine over disease. That evening we called at Mr. Greenhow's residence. Both Mr. and Mrs. Greenhow were at home, but their daughter had gone down town. "Yes," replied Mrs. Greenhow in answer to a question in regard to the reported cure, "My daughter has been cured; I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved her life." She then gave the circumstances of her daughter's illness and cure as follows:—

"Rebecca, is now seventeen years of age. When she was eleven she was attacked with tonsilitis and following this for the next three years she never had a moment free from pain. She became so weak and run down that she was unable to walk without the assistance of a crutch. The doctor said she was suffering from inflammatory rheumatism brought on by an impoverished condition of the system. He prescribed various remedies but nothing seemed to do her any good and finally we decided to try another doctor. He also pronounced the trouble to be rheumatism, but though he gave her bottle after bottle of medicine, she still continued to grow weaker. By the end of the second year she was unable to leave the house and could only move from one room to another by the use of her crutches. We were advised to get her an electric belt and did so, but though she wore it for a long time it did her no good whatever. During the third winter she became so bad that she had to be assisted into and out of bed, and could not even raise from a chair without assistance. We had given up all hope of her recovery when a Mr. John Allan, who had himself been similarly afflicted, but who had been cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, advised us to give them a trial. We had tried so many things without success that we hesitated to accept his advice, but he insisted so strongly that we finally yielded. The first five boxes seemed to produce no change, but before she had finished the sixth box we were sure we could notice some improvement, and we felt encouraged to continue their use. From that on she continued to improve steadily, and by the time she had taken eighteen boxes every trace of pain had left her. She threw away her crutches and soon forgot that she had ever needed them. For months past she has been filling a position in the rattan factory and can work as well as anyone. Indeed I do not believe that there is to-day a healthier girl in Walkerton."

Such is Mrs. Greenhow's story of the cure of her daughter through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after years of great suffering. We may add that a day of two later the writer called once more at the Greenhow abode in the hope of seeing the young lady herself. This time she was at home and she came into the room. She presented an appearance of the most perfect health. She repeated the story of her sufferings in substantially the same terms as her mother had done, and, like her mother, gives all the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Rheumatism sciatica, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, nervous headache, nervous prostration, and diseases depending upon humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc., all disappear before a fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They give a healthy glow to pale and sallow complexions. Sold by all dealers and post paid at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Recovered his Coat.

A few days ago Ald. Best had his overcoat stolen at Toronto while on his way down from Owen Sound. The missing part of his wardrobe had been recovered as the following letter dated June 21st, received by Ald. Best yesterday from H. Grasset, chief of police, Toronto, shows:— "I beg to inform you that the overcoat stolen from you at the Union Station, in this city, on the 18th inst., has been recovered, and is now at this office awaiting your orders." This is quick work.

A Monster Canoe.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. are shipping to-day an extraordinary canoe, built to the order of a party of Lockport, N Y, people who propose to use the canoe on a trip down the Mississippi, sailing from a point above St. Louis to New Orleans. The orders were to build the biggest thing in the canoe line ever turned out, and the dimensions indicate the size, as it is 30 ft. long, 35 inches beam, and 26 inches deep, and is larger than the large war canoes now so popular a feature with American and Canadian canoe clubs. The owners of the canoe have ordered its delivery at Fort Erie and propose to put a motor in it and either side wheels or a propeller and get up some speed. The canoe has been built especially strong with an extra size keel to allow of power being applied. It is so broad in the beam that a party of 12 or 15 will not be more than a trifling load with plenty of room for dunnage. When the boat reaches New Orleans it will enable the southerners to see what canoeing sprang from.

NO REDUCTION IN ARMS.

Russia Proposes to Keep Its Armed Force Just as It Always Has Been—Wants No Increase, Either.

The Hague, June 24.—M. de Staal, president of the peace conference, at a meeting of the committee yesterday morning, introduced the Russian proposals looking to the arrest of armaments, and read a declaration disclaiming all intention of proposing a reduction of the armaments at present. But, he added, he was of the opinion that if a standstill could be agreed upon, a reduction would soon come of itself. All the powers, he explained, had conferred with the Czar relative to the immense evils of armed peace, and he (M. de Staal) now appealed to them to devote their energies towards the arrest of the continual increase in the cost of armed peace, which, he asserted, cost more than a tremendous war.

Wants a Halt for Five Years.

Col. Jillinski of the Russian delegation moved that the powers should enter into an understanding for a term of say five years not to increase the effectiveness of the peace footing of their forces, with the exception of the colonial troops, and not to increase the amount of their military budgets beyond their present figure. The speeches and the resolution were ordered to be printed and circulated, and the discussion was adjourned until Monday.

A naval standstill resolution will be introduced later.

A Russian Trap.

The correspondent of The Daily News at The Hague says: "Several delegates remark that Russia's proposals regarding disarmament contain a trap, since she could increase her troops to any extent in Siberia, which is a colony.

"Capt. Scheine, the Russian naval expert, laid upon the table a proposal similar to Col. Jillinski's, dealing with the navy, but limiting the non-augmentation period to three years, on the ground that three years are enough to build an ironclad."

The correspondent of The Times at The Hague says: "There is not the faintest chance of the Russian proposals being adopted, but it is likely some motion will be carried to the effect that, in the interests of peace and humanity, the conference hopes that, unless an emergency should occur, war budgets will not be increased."

Poison Caused Neff's Death.

Galt, Ont., June 24.—John W. Neff, a retired farmer, was found dead in bed at his home in this town on Wednesday, June 7. It was at first thought that death had resulted from natural causes, but an investigation gave reason to believe that it was due to poison. Accordingly a coroner's inquest was ordered. It was, in the opinion of the jury, fully proved that death resulted from carbolic acid poisoning, but whether the acid was taken with suicidal intent or administered by another person the evidence was not sufficient to determine.

sued from the camp through curiosity or for plunder, while turning over the bodies of the enemy ,discovered some a friend, some an acquaintance or relative; some, too, there were who recognised an enemy; and thus, exultation and sorrow, grief and joy, in various forms, were manifested throughout the whole army."

Leaving Pistoja, a short run brought us to Florence to which the Florentines give the name "Firenze la bella."

"The Arno wins us to the fair white walls,
Where the Etrurian Athens claims and keeps
A softer feeling for her fairy halls
Girt by her theatre of hills; she reaps
Her corn and wine and oil, and Plenty leaps
To laughing life, with her redundant horn
And buried learning rose, redeemed to a new morn."

Save Rome, no place in Italy, scarce any in the world, possesses such numerous attractions—historic, literary, and artistic—as Florence. The heroic memories of its struggles for liberty, and the wonderful achievements of its sons in architecture, sculpture, painting, poetry and science, invest it forever with profoundest interest.

Nestling in a lovely valley of the Apennines, its situation is singularly beautiful. A patriot writer thus rhapsodises over its beauties:—"Who can describe the enchanting view of this art city of Tuscany and the world, Florence, with its surrounding gardens! who paint the distant horison, from Fiesole smiling at us with its fair towers, to the blue ridge of the Lucca mountains standing out against the golden back ground of the western sky! Here everything betrays the work of generation after generation of ingenious men. Like a water-lily rising on the mirror of the lake, so rests on this lovely ground the still more lovely Florence, with its everlasting works, and its inexhaustible riches. From the bold airy tower of the palace, rising like a slender mast, to Brunelleschi's wondrous dome of the Cathedral, from the old house of the Spini to the Pitti Palace, the most imposing that the world has ever seen, from the garden of the Franciscan convent to the beautiful environs of the Cascine, all are full of incomparable grace. Each street of Florence contains a world of art, the walls of the city are the calyx of the human mind; and this is but the richest gem in the diadem with which the Italian people have adorned the earth."

While in ancient times Rome was the grand centre of Italian development. Florence has since the middle ages superseded it as the focus of intellectual life. Under the family of the Medici she became the great centre of the Renaissance, the object of which was to revive the poetry, the eloquence and the art and science of antiquity. Florence, too, was the chief cradle of the Humanists who aimed at a universal and harmonious development of the personal character, and whose contemplative life was far exalted above everyday realities. The modern Italian language and literature have emanated chiefly from here, and here, too, the fine arts also attained the zenith of their glory. An amazing profusion of treasures of art, such as no other locality possesses within so narrow limits, reminiscences of a history which has influenced the whole of Europe, perpetuated by numerous and imposing monuments, and lastly the delightful environs combine to make Florence one of the most interesting and attractive of cities.

No city in the world can exhibit such a galaxy of illustrious names. Among others are the statues of Cosmo de Medici, Lorenzo il Magnifico, Giotto, Michael Angelo, Dante, Petrarch, Boccacio, Macchiavelli, and Galileo. Besides these are Savonarola, Brunelleschi, Ghiberti, Fra Angelico, Raphael, and many other illustrious ill letters and in art are forever associated with the memory of Florence.

Let us take a ramble through this historic city and view some of the sights. In the Piazza del Duomo rises one of the most remarkable groups of buildings in the world—the Campanile, or Giotto's Tower, the Cathedral or Duomo, and the Battistero or Baptistery.

The Campanile, or bell tower, is an exquisite square structure rising more beautifully as it climbs to a height of 292 feet. It consists of four stories richly decorated with coloured marble. The bas-reliefs represent the seven cardinal virtues, the seven works of mercy, the seven Beatitudes, and the seven Sacraments. Ruskin in his "Seven Lamps of Architecture," says:—"The characteristics of Power and Beauty occur more or less in different buildings, some in one, and some in another. But all together, and all in their highest possible relative degrees, they exist, as far as I know, only in one building in the world, the Campanile of Giotto."

"In the old Tuscan town stands Giotto's tower,
The City of Florence blossoming in stone,—
A vision, a delight, and a desire,—
The builder's perfect and centennial flower,
That in the night of ages blossomed alone,
But wanting still the glory of the spire."

It was begun by Giotto in 1334 and carried on and completed after his death, in 1387.

The Battistero venerable with the time-stains of seven or perhaps eight hundred years is an octagonal structure with an octagonal cupola. Here are the famous bronze doors of Ghiberti on which he expended the labour of forty years. They represent in high relief, scenes from Scripture history, and are marvels of artistic skill. Michael Angelo pronounced the doors worthy of forming the doors of Paradise. All children born in Florence are baptized in this church. We happened to be passing on a Sunday morning and stepped inside to view the interior. The shadowy dome is covered with mosaics. On a gold ground are seen the majestic figures of the sacred choirs of angels and archangels principalities and powers, apostles and martyrs. Beneath are the awful scenes of the Last Judgment, the raptures of the saved, and the torments of the damned.

Opposite is the Duomo or Cathedral, built of black and white marble, fretted with exquisite carving and tracery. The building was begun in 1294 and finished in 1462. From its carved pulpit Savonarolo swayed the sceptre of his eloquence over the awe-struck souls of the people of Florence. The building, larger than all previous churches in Italy, is 556 feet in length, and 342 feet across the transepts. The dome, with the lantern is 352 feet high. It surpasses in size even that of St. Peter's at Rome, and is more daring as the earlier achievement. Its interior is covered with gigantic mosaics of the Inferno, Purgatory, and Paradise; hideous figures of satyr-headed devils are torturing the lost in flames with pitchforks—a dreadful and repulsive sight. On the south side of the Piazza del Duomo, a slab let into the pavement is inscribed "Sasso di Dante," where he was wont

"To bring his quiet chair out, turned
To Brunelleschi's church, and pour, alone,
The lava of his spirit when it burned,
While some enamoured passer used to wait
A moment in the golden day's decline
With 'Good-Night, dearest Dante.'"

A few minutes walk from the Duomo is the Church of Santa Croce, the Pantheon or Westminster Abbey of Italy. Its chief attractions are the frescoes of Giotto, and the tombs of Michael Angelo, Macchiavelli, Galileo, the Medici, Dante, and many another son of Italy. Byron says:—

"In Santa Croce's holy precincts lie
Ashes which make them holier, dust which is Even in itself an immortality
Though there were nothing save the past, and this,
The particle of those sublimities
Which have relapsed to chaos:—here repose
Angelo's, Alfieri's bones, and his,
The starry Galileo with his woes;
Here Machiavelli's earth returned to whence it rose."

In the centre of the Piazza of Santa Croce, on the 12th of May, 1865, six hundred years after his birth and on the spot where, just before he came into the world, the Florentine Republic was proclaimed, his splendid statue was uncovered, amid flaunting of banners, and salvoes of cannon, and vivas of an enthusiastic people, by the king of a free Italian Kingdom, holding his court in Florence which the passionate exile loved so well.

In a narrow street just above the door of a decent looking house is a small square slab bearing an Italian inscription, which, being translated reads thus:—"Here wrote and died Elizabeth Barrett Browning, who, to the heart of a woman joined the science of a scholar and the spirit of a poet, and who made with her golden verse a nuptial ring between Italy and England. Grateful Florence places this memorial." The Rev. Morley Punshon says: "In the nineteenth century we are but beginning to learn that the pen is mightier than the sword, and that those who strike the harp of life, and sing to us its many toned music, leave worthier memories than those who spill its heart out on the stained award of some field of blood. All honor to Florence for her appreciation and her gratitude, and all honour, too, to the great, true woman who wept over Cowper's grave, from whose wrung spirit wailed forth the "Cry of the Children," and who burned into the national soul the lessons of Aurora Leigh."

Turn we to another spot, the Piazza della Signoria, once the forum of the Republic and the scene of its memorable events. To the left is the Great Fountain erected three hundred years ago, on which disport Neptune and his tritons. This is the spot where Savonarola and two other monks, precursors of the Reformation, were burned at the stake in 1498. There for nearly four hundred years, stood in sun and shower, Michael Angelo's celebrated statue of David, which in 1873 was removed to the Academy. Of this Springer says: "No plastic work of Michael Angelo earned such a harvest of laudation among his contemporaries as the 'David.' Vasari sings the praises of the miracle-worker, who raised the dead, spoiled block to new life, and assures us that Michael Angelo's David is vastly superior to all ancient and modern statues whatever. The boldness and assured touch of the great sculptor certainly awake our admiring astonishment. Not only the subject was prescribed to him, but also its size and proportions, added to which he was confined to the narrowest limits for the development of the attitude and the movement. Outwardly the demeanor of the young hero is composed and quiet; but each limb is animated by a common impulse from within, and the whole body is braced up for one action. The raised left arm holds the sling in readiness, the right hand hanging at his side conceals the pebble; next instant he will make the attack."

The huge block of marble which was used in this statue had been worked upon by another sculptor for the statue of a giant, but he failed in his attempt and the marble had been neglected for years. Leonardo da Vinci was asked to finish it but he declared it impossible because it had been irreparably injured. Michael Angelo essayed the task and at his bidding it grew into a colossal statue of David, with a face of perpetual youth, and the firm, lithe limbs of the athletic shepherd boy. The chief magistrate on viewing the work pronounced the nose too large, whereupon Michael mounted the scaffold with a chisel in one hand and a little marble dust in the other, and pretended to work upon the face, letting the dust fall as if he were. Shortly he turned about. "How is it now?" "Excellant," was the reply, "you have given it life." The critic was not undeceived, and Michael Angelo with proverbial self-confidence, said that Solderini's was as good as most criticism.

In the south angle of the Piazza rises the Loggia dei Lanzi, a magnificent vaulted hall, filled with masterpieces of sculpture in bronze and marble, which for three hundred years have delighted the gaze of successive generations.

A few steps from the Piazza, is the unrivalled art collection of the Uffizi and Pitti Palaces. Through these long corridors and stately chambers one wanders, seated with delight in study of the art treasures on every side. There "the goddess loves in stone," here the Virgin breathes on canvas; and heroes and martyrs and saints live forever—immortalized by the genius of Raphael, Fra Angelico, Fra Lippi, Titian, Guido, and their fellows in the mighty brotherhood of art. These palaces are on opposite sides of the Arno, but are connected by a long covered gallery, lined with pictures, over the Ponte Vecchio. As I stood upon the bridge and watched the sun set over the Arno, I thought how often from that very spot Dante, Angelo and Raphael must have watched his setting long centuries ago.

The gem of the whole gallery is the Tribuna, a small room containing a magnificent and almost unparalleled collection of masterpieces of ancient sculpture and modern painting. Of the five celebrated marble sculptures, the Medici Venus is the most renowned. This statue was found at Rome in the 16th century, and brought to Florence in 1680. Here may be seen masterpieces of Raphael, Titian, Paul Veronese, A. Durer, Rubens & Michael Angelo "Here in their beautiful and calm retreats the ancient sculptors are immortal; those illustrious men of history, beside whom its crowned heads and harnessed warriors show so poor and small, and are so soon forgotten. Here the imperishable past of noble minds survives, placid and equal, when strongholds of assault and defence are overthrown, when the tyranny of the many, or the few, or both, is but a tale; when pride and power are so much cloistered dust."

In the Church of San Lorenzo are the tombs of the Medici, on which have been lavished five million dollars. Here are the masterpieces of Angelo, his Night and Day, which age after age keep their solemn watch in the chamber of the dead. On the former a contemporary poet wrote:—

"'Tis Night, in deepest slumber; all can see
She sleeps (for Angelo divine did give
This stone a soul), and, since she sleeps, must live.
You doubt it? Wake her she will speak to thee.'"

Michael Angelo, in allusion to the suppression of political liberty, answered:

"Ah! glad am I to sleep in stone, while woe
And dire disgrace rage unreproved near—
A happy chance to neither see nor hear.
So wake me not! When passing whisper low."

Close under the shadow of the church of San Lorenzo, Punshon says: "There is a unique asylum, endowed in perpetuity under the will of some spinster of the former time. It is an asylum for cats. Here foundling cats are taken, and distressed ones sheltered. Supernumerary cats are saved from the Arno; all proper cat courtship is promoted within reasonable limits; and aspiring cats, anxious to go out into the world are provided with suitable situations, in which, as the advertisements say, "Salary is not so much an object as a comfortable home." Oh, poor human nature! If, sometimes, from our weakness our strongest principles of actions are born, as the oak from the trampled acorn, how often are our best instincts warped to folly, and our virtues, by their own devious energy, become objects of derision.

Turn we from this eccentricity of benevolence to look at one of the noblest charities of Europe. Driving through the Piazza of the Duomo I was met by what seemed to be a funeral procession. The coffin was borne on the shoulders of men and they who bore and they who followed were dressed in long monastic robes of black, with crape hoods, masks concealing the face, into which holes were cut for the eyes and mouth. This was the "Compagna della Misericordia," which has existed in Florence for upwards of six hundred years. It is said to have had a moral origin, for it was established from a fund created by fines for profane swearing, imposed upon themselves by the porters in the cloth manufactories of the city. Gradually it assumed vaster proportions, until it grew into a corporation of honour, and the most distinguished citizens were proud to enrol themselves in its band. The city is divided into districts, and the members, of whom there are hundreds, are told off for daily duty with all the discipline of military rule. Their office is to carry the sick to hospital, the wounded to some place of refuge, and the dead to burial. One of the bells in the Campanile is called the "Misericordia." It is tolled when their services are needed, and at the summons of that bell, whether it be heard at sunrise or on Sabbath; whether it strike upon the silence of midnight, or boom solemnly through the hall of banquet, each member of the brotherhood is bound, forsaking all other engagement, to obey its bidding. It is not an ecclesiastical fraternity notwithstanding its hideous dress. The Florentines raise the hat, and the military present arms, when the "Misericordia" passes, and the Grand Duke himself, in the days when there was such a personage, has been known to leave his guests at the banquet, and take his turn, perhaps with the humblest, as a helper in this work of mercy. What an illustration at once of the sweetness and of the immortality of charity! Through all change of dynasty, amid the rise and fall of nobles, while the sky has been dark with troubles and the streets have been dishonoured with blood, while the tempest has uprooted governments which seemed so stable, and the fortunes of the city have been alternately on the crest and in the trough of the waves, this institution has survived—like a pharos in a stormy sea, flinging its white light across the waters, though the waves howled about it with fury, and the broad shoulders of the hurricane pressed heavily against its solid form. Oh, it is beautiful to think that wherever Christianity has gone, this human charity, a stranger from some other world, has found itself a mission and a home. Who shall despair of a world, where "one touch of sorrow can make all men kin."

Dr. A. W. CHASE
DISCOVERED A NEW TREATMENT FOR NERVOUS DISEASES

In his study of diseases of the nerves, Dr. A. W. Chase found that in nearly every case the cause of trouble was improper nourishment. About one-fifth of all the blood in the human body is found in the brain, and unless this blood is rich and pure the nerves cannot obtain proper nourishment, and become worn out and exhausted.

Nervous depression, nervous headache, nervous dyspepsia, loss of sleep and vital force, lack of energy, are symptoms of weak, watery blood and exhausted nerves.

It was as a food for blood and nerves that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared. Its remarkable success in curing all diseases arising from thin blood and impoverished nerves is proof that Dr. Chase's theory of feeding the nerves and blood is the proper one; stimulants only urge on the tired and worn out nervous system until there comes a complete collapse.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food creates new brain and nerve cells, and makes the blood pure and rich. It restores to the exhausted nerves the vigor of perfect health. 50c. a large box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

"I Have Had

Rheumatism for years, and Nerviline is the only remedy that has done me any good." So writes Thomas McGlashan, North Pelham, July 24th, 1899, and his testimony is supported by thousands of others who have experienced the wonderful penetrating and pain subduing power of Nerviline—the great nerve pain cure. Nerviline is just as good to take as to rub on, and is the best family remedy in the world. Nerviline is sold by dealers everywhere.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.
Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheridan, February 20th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

Fishing on Horseback.

The most remarkable fishing in the world is that practiced in catching the sturgeon in the frozen rivers of the Ural mountains. Fishing on horseback seems impossible, yet this is literally true of the fishing for sturgeon.

The Russian Cossacks go fishing in large bands. They mount their horses and ride across the frozen river until they are over the place where the current runs strongest. There they dismount and cut through the thick layer of ice until they have formed a little pool of open water, extending across the current almost from shore to shore.

A net, which is sunk to the bottom of the river, is stretched across the stream at the open space, so that not a fish can swim past it. The horses are remounted, and the Cossacks ride up the river for a distance of four or five miles. Here the band turns about and rides down over the thick ice covered stream, forming a long line across it. They urge their horses at full gallop.

The thundering hoofs of the horses terrify the fish, and they charge madly ahead of the approaching cavalcade. Great swarms of fish choke up the stream in the mad effort to escape the terrific noise that is pursuing them, and in this way they are driven down the stream to the net.

Children Cry for CASTORIA.

A TRIP TO THE ETERNAL CITY

(Written for the "Review.")

LETTER NO. ELEVEN.

FLORENCE.

We had a very enjoyable and restful stay in Venice, and it was with sincere regret that we made preparations for our departure. We had not the same experience as the American lady who is credited with the remark that she did not see Venice to advantage because the streets were all flooded when she was there. We glided once more down the Grand Canal, at the end of which is situated the railway station and purchased tickets for Florence, the Etrurian Athens of Italy. After a run of two and a half miles over the bridge which connects the Fairy City with the mainland, we reached terra firma once more, where we soon lost sight of the Queen of the Adriatic.

We stopped at Padua, which city Virgil, in his first book of the Aeneid, says was founded by Antenor, the mythical king of Troy, brother of Priam. Under Augustus this was the wealthiest town in Upper Italy. In the history of Art Padua is also an important place, its reputation as the chief seat of Italian learning having attracted many artists.

Six miles from Padua is Albano, a small town, said to be the birthplace of the historian Livy. Eight miles farther on is Arqua, where Petrarch lived and died (1304-1374). "The Euganean Hills, on one of which the poet's house is built, are those mellow heights, which you see when you look southwest across the lagoon at Venice. In misty weather they are blue, and in clear weather silver, and the October sunset loves them. They rise in tender azure before you as you issue from the southern gate of Padua, and grow in loveliness as you draw nearer to them from the rich plain that washes their feet with endless harvests of oil and wine." Disraeli's Venetia has a passage wherein is given a description of the village, the house, and the surrounding hills. The wall of the house bears the inscription, "Casa Petrarca," and a marble tablet lettered to the following effect:

Se ti agita
Sacro amore di patria
T'inchina a queste mura
Ove spiro la grand anima
Il cantor dei Scipioni.
E di Laura.

Which may be translated: "If thou art stirred by love of country, bow to these walls whence passed the great soul, the singer of the Scipios and of Laura." In the court of the little church in the village may be seen the tomb of Petrarch, a sarcophagus resting upon four columns of marble. A head of the poet in bronze surmounts the ark. Byron says:

"There is a tomb in Arqua;— rear'd in air,
Pillar'd in their sarcophagus, repose
The bones of Laura's lover; here repair
Many familiar with his well-sung woes,
The pilgrims of his genius."

We also stopped at Ferrara where dwelt Ariosto, the author of Orlando Furioso, and Tasso the author of Jerusalem Delivered. In the hospital of Anna is shown the cell where Tasso was kept in confinement for seven years. The names of Byron, Lamartine, and other poets are written on the walls.

"And Tasso is their glory and their shame
Hark to his strain! and then survey his cell!
And see how dearly earn'd Torquato's fame,
And where Alfonso bade his poet dwell:
The miserable despot could not quell
The insulted mind he sought to quench, and blend
With the surrounding maniacs, in the hell
Where he had plunged it."

At Bologna, which is a city of 142,000, we had lunch, and were now 83 miles from Florence. Up to this point we had passed through a very beautiful farming country. Fields tilled and tended as jealously as gardens and waving wheat and oats, and here and there acres of Indian corn. The orchards were garlanded with vines, which they do not bind to stakes in Italy, but train from tree to tree, leaving them to droop in festoons and sway in the wind, with the slender native grace of vines. Huge stone farmhouses shelter under the same roof the family and all the live stock of the farm; thatched cottages, thickly dotting the fields, send forth to their cultivation the most picturesque peasants—men, women, pretty young girls in broad hats, and wonderful old crones, who seem never to have been younger or fairer. Country roads level, straight, and white, stretch away on either hand, and the constant files of poplars escort them wherever they go. The milk white oxen ploughing in the fields or dragging heavy carts, turn up their patient heads, with wide spreading horns and mellow eyes, at the passing train; the sunburnt lout behind them suspends the application of the goad; unwonted acquiescence stirs in the bosom of the firm-minded donkey and even the matter-of-fact locomotive seems to linger as lovingly as an Italian locomotive may along this beautiful country.

The most picturesque part of the journey from Venice to Florence begins at Bologna. The railroad is boldly constructed and as we shoot in and out of the numerous tunnels we catch beautiful glimpses of the valleys and ravines of the woody Apennines.

"The infant Alps, which—had I not before
Gazed on their mightier parents, where the pine
Sits on more shaggy summits, and where roar
The thundering lauwine — might be worshipped more."

On an island in the Reno not far from Bologna the Second Triumvirate was concerted by Octavius, Antony and Lepidus, in B.C. 43. The train crosses the watershed of the Adriatic and the Tyrrenian Sea by a tunnel one and two-thirds miles in length, and a view is revealed of the lovely and populous plains of Tuscany and Pistoja far below.

The latter is a pleasant little town situated in a fertile district. It has broad, well-built streets, and important manufactories of guns and ironwares. Pistols are said to have been invented in Pistoja, and thence to derive their name. It was the Roman Pistoria near which the arch-conspirator Catiline was defeated and slain. The place recalled to my mind the Catilinarian speeches which Cicero thundered forth to the Roman people from the Rostrum in the Forum at Rome, and Sallust's account of the life and death of that notorious man. The Roman historian thus concludes his work: "But when the battle was over, then especially might one perceive what resolution and obstinacy of will pervaded Catiline's army; for the spot on which each had stood during the fight, the same, when life was lost, he covered with his body. A few, however, whom the Praetorian cohort had displaced from the main body, fell rather more irregularly; but all with wounds in front. Catiline, however, was found far from his own men, among the bodies of the enemy, still breathing faintly, and retaining in his countenance the same haughty expression which he had borne during life. In short, out of the whole number, no free citizen became a prisoner either in the flight or the battle; so equally had all disregarded their own and their enemies' lives. Nor yet had the army of the Roman people gained a joyful or bloodless victory; for every most valiant man had either fallen in battle or retired dangerously wounded. Many, again, who had is-

GLADSTONE IN HIS PRIME.

A Fine New Bust Finished for the Liverpool Reform Club.

An almost animated bust of Gladstone has just been finished by the noted sculptor, H. C. Fehr, for the Liverpool Reform Club. The portrait in the marble is that of Gladstone in his doctor of law robes, at the time he was passing the Home Rule bill. It is therefore more familiar than any other Gladstone portrait to the English people. The dimensions of this sculpture are a little larger than life size. It has been vised by Henry Gladstone, Earl Spencer, Herbert Gladstone, Mr. Bryce, Lord Tweedmouth, Arnold Morley and other friends of the late statesman, and has been pronounced excellent by all. Mr. Fehr is now at work on a replica of the bust for the Parliament House of New Zealand, to be placed in the legislative hall.

Half Sick Half Well

Many persons have their good day and their bad day. Others are about half sick all the time. They have headache, backache, and are restless and nervous. Food does not taste good, and the digestion is poor; the skin is dry and sallow and disfigured with pimples or eruptions; sleep brings no rest and work is a burden.

What is the cause of all this? Impure blood.

And the remedy?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It clears out the channels through which poisons are carried from the body. When all impurities are removed from the blood nature takes right hold and completes the cure.

If there is constipation, take Ayer's Pills. They awaken the drowsy action of the liver; they cure biliousness.

ARTHUR WIGLE DROWNED.

Popular Farmer of Gosfield Township Lost Life While Bathing.

Kingsville, Ont., June 26.—Saturday evening Arthur Wigle, aged 24, and youngest son of Philip Wigle, farmer, living on the third concession of Gosfield Township, was drowned while bathing in Cedar Creek. Deceased and his two companions, Robert Drake and Mr. Moore, were all good swimmers, but without a word, after diving, deceased made a slight struggle and sank, apparently being seized with cramps or heart failure. His companions rescued the body within a very few minutes, and with the aid of a physician heroic endeavors were made to resuscitate, but in vain. Deceased was very popular and widely known all over Essex County. He was to have been married in one month to a prominent young lady of the township.

THE CLEVELAND STRIKE OFF.

80 Per Cent. of the Men Taken Back—Arbitration Provided For.

Cleveland, June 26.—An agreement between the big consolidated Street Railway Company and its striking employes was reached at 6 o'clock on Saturday night.

The agreement provides for the hearing of grievances and a resort to arbitration in case the men and the company cannot agree, and it also provides for the reinstatement of practically 80 per cent. of the old men at once, the remainder, except those who have been guilty of violence, being placed on the waiting list.

VILLAGE NEARLY WIPED OUT.

Thirty or Forty Houses at St. Raymond Que., Destroyed by Fire.

St. Raymond, Que., June 26.—This village was almost wiped out by a fire which started about 11.20 yesterday morning in a stable belonging to Mrs. Edward Plamondon, and which is believed to have been started by a tramp sleeping there during the night. The fire spread with great rapidity and, there being no fire appliances here, the inhabitants were powerless to stay the progress of the flames. Assistance was telegraphed for to Quebec and fire engines were sent by special train from there, a distance of about 35 miles. When the engines arrived here about 30 or 40 houses had been consumed, with several outhouses. The convent caught fire and was damaged in the upper portion to the extent of about $8,000. The loss will amount to fully $100,000, and is well covered by insurance.

YANKEE EYES ARE OPENED.

They Find That Canada's Trade Is Worth a Great Deal.

Indeed, the Fact That Our Trade With Them Is Greater Than They Expected Makes for a Better Feeling—Special Statements Have Been Prepared Showing What This Country Buys From the States.

Montreal, June 26.—The Herald has the following special from Washington: The fear that the negotiations of the joint high commission would never be renewed, followed as it was by the gratifying progress accomplished by means of direct correspondence between Washington and London, has led this Government to reflect rather seriously on the bad consequences of failure and the advantages of success. An indication of this profitable state of feeling is found in the fact that the bureau of statistics of the Treasury Department last week prepared a statement showing the growth of the export trade of the United States with Canada. Of course the country would be very sorry to lose the Canadian trade, or to have its value depreciated, and there has been a good deal said recently about the poor policy of allowing Canadian markets to be impaired by reason of petty international bickerings. The danger and folly of maintaining or cultivating national antipathies, which Washington so strongly deprecated, would be reason sufficient to call out the utmost endeavor of both parties to remove all causes of contention, and in addition, both Canada and the United States, if guided by "enlightened self-interest," should spare no effort, it is argued, to establish the most amicable relations and the freest exchange of commodities that is practicable.

Some Interesting Figures.

Here are some figures that were included in the special statements prepared by the Treasury Department, and they give some idea of the value of Canada's markets to the United States: In 1898 all Mexico, Central and South America and the West Indies, with a population of 54,000,000, bought from the United States products valued at $86,786,000, while Canada, with only 5,500,000 inhabitants, purchased $86,537,00 worth of United States goods. The United States sold to the Canadians more than $86,000,000 worth of products and bought from them $85,460,000 worth of their produces. In spite of Canada's preferential duties in favor of the Mother Country, British exports to Canada increased only about ten per cent. in 1898, while United States exports to Canada increased over 35 per cent., and during the same period the United States sent to Canada $35,000,000 worth of manufactures, or $6,000,000 more than England sold there. The United States bought from the Canadians only about $5,000,000 worth of their farm products, while the United States supplied them from American farms $15,000,000 worth. Canada bought $40,000,000 worth of products which were entered duty free, and of their products on the same terms the United States took only $14,000,000 worth.

A Valuable Market.

American producers are not only deeply conscious of the value of the Canadian market, but they realize that Canada offers a field which is becoming better with rapid strides. The people in the United States are gradually coming to realize that the Canadians are a progressive English-speaking people who are both prosperous and thrifty, that they are consumers and buyers and that the Filipinos, Latin Americans and such peoples are not to be compared with them as users and traders.

A HITCH IN THE NEGOTIATIONS.

Great Britain Requests Another Modification in Alaska Boundary.

Washington, June 26.—The memorandum handed to Ambassador Choate at London on Friday concerning the modus for a temporary agreement upon the Alaskan boundary was only another step in the negotiations. A modification has been requested by the British Government, which the United States will have to consider. The negotiations had progressed so favorably up to the time of this last memorandum, that the belief was expressed that an agreement would soon be reached. The points of difference between the Governments are not made public, but the modification requested by the British Government does not meet with favor by those who are conducting the negotiations for the United States, as the last proposition submitted by this Government was believed to contain all essential concessions, and to be fair in every respect to the Canadians and to the British Government.

Backs General Hutton.

London, June 26.—Hugh O. Arnold Forster, M.P., Belfast, in a letter to The Times, defends Major-General Hutton, in charge of the Canadian forces, saying that he acted entirely within his rights and duty in stating that the Imperial Government proposed to recruit a Hundredth Regiment in Canada, and that arrangements had been made to carry out the plan.

The writer distinctly says that no sort of censure was conveyed by the replies to questions respecting the matter in the House of Commons on April 27.

EXCITES ALARM AND HOPE.

Waldeck-Rousseau's Cabinet an Extraordinary One.

Such a Ministry Has Never Been Known Except Under Extreme Conditions—President Signed Orders Decapitating a Number of Civic Officials—One Report Says Dreyfus Has Arrived in France, Another Leaves Inference That He Has Not.

Paris, June 26.—The Paris correspondent of The New York Sun cables his paper as follows:

"France will easily command the attention of the world during the crisis which the next few days should solve. The Government which has just assumed office is of a composition which excites both alarm and hope; alarm because the peril is so great that a Cabinet designed simply to save the Republic was considered necessary, and hope that the stern, virile policy which has been adopted will prove adequate to the situation.

An Extraordinary Cabinet.

"The Temps correctly describes Premier Waldeck-Rousseau's Cabinet as such a one as has never been known, except at the end of a war, the outbreak of an insurrection or on the eve of a coup d'etat. It is a Ministry which could not last a day before the Chamber of Deputies under any issue of arbitrary legislation. Not even French imagination could have conceived a more incongruous picture than the leader of the Socialists sitting at the same council board with a man who at the cost of thousands of lives put down the Commune. Its members have not a single sentiment in common, save one, namely, the re-establishment of the law and the defence of the Republican form of Government.

To-Day Will Tell a Tale.

"Monday's session of the Chamber of Deputies will solve the big feature of the problem. The third Republic will be in desperate straits if Parliament refuses to allow men of courage and determination to guide it through the most critical days it has yet encountered. If the present Ministry is overthrown there will remain only one man whom Frenchmen regard as possessing sufficient strength and ability to cope with the situation, and he is in Constantinople. Perhaps the rumor is true that M. Constans has been summoned by President Loubet to hold himself in reserve for possible emergency duty.

When the Test Will Come.

"The test of the situation will come when the new Government attempts to execute its undoubted intention to remove Gen. Zurlinden from the Military Governorship of Paris. He, more nearly than any other man, ranks as the figurehead of militarism in France at the present moment. His power as the direct commander of the Paris garrison places the civil Government at his mercy if he should choose to abuse his authority and his subordinates should obey his orders.

Gallifet Is a Terror to Some.

"The Gallifet of to-day is not the young commander Gallifet of the Commune days, but there can be no doubt as to his manner of dealing with a mutinous subordinate, whatever may be his rank. It is not inappropriate to note the fact that it was the report that Gen. Gallifet was about to be made Minister of War that caused Boulanger to flee to Brussels at the crisis of the latter's career. There could be no better man, old as he is, to deal with Zurlinden or any other officers requiring discipline in this emergency than the veteran who has just taken the War portfolio. The indications are that a single week will settle the immediate fate of militarism in France. If discipline is sternly and relentlessly re-established in the French army within the next seven days, there will be little fear of its connection with the Dreyfus trial or the subsequent developments of the greatest scandal of the century."

Heads Off in Paris.

Paris, June 26.—At the Cabinet Council yesterday, M. Loubet, the President, signed orders making the following changes: M. Bertrand, Procurator General to the Appeal Court, and M. Feuille Ley, Public Prosecutor, are both removed; M. Bulot, Advocate-General, is appointed Public Prosecutor; M. Lombard,

A Life Worse Than Death.

It is said that Dr. Tuffier of the Hospital de la Petie, Paris, succeeded in bringing a man to life temporarily. The man operated upon was Jean Soulie, who had been pronounced dead. Dr. Tuffier, it is alleged, in the presence of a large number of students, took the body, and, after the application of several recognised methods of proving the total extinction of life, exposed the man's heart, and, holding the organ in his hand, pressed first one side with the finger and then on the other side with the thumb, and, keeping it up continuously, caused an artificial action, and after a time there were unmistakable evidences of life. It is said that the man answered one or two questions put to him. It was impossible to maintain this artificial action very long, and the man sank back to his second death.

whose dismissal on account of the Deroulede trial has been much criticized as unjust, is appointed Advocate-General. M. Bertrand's successor has not yet been appointed. Geneval Hartschmidt, General Roget, Col. Saxe and Col. Coubertin are transferred to other garrisons.

The Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, read a draft of his speech in Parliament to-day, which will be very brief, merely announcing that the new Ministry has no aim but to follow out the order of the day voted on June 12, on the motion of M. Joseph Ruau, Democratic Radical, representing the Second District of St. Candens, which was as follows: "The Chamber is determined to support only a Government resolved to defend vigorously republican institutions, and then secure public order and passes to the order of the day."

Dreyfus Is Now in France.

London, June 26.—The Evening News on Saturday afternoon published a despatch from its correspondent at Rennes, France, which says: "With all reserve I send a report that Dreyfus arrived here at 5 o'clock this morning." Madame Dreyfus and her father arrived there during the same afternoon.

Dreyfus Not Yet in France.

Brest, France, June 26.—The French first-class cruiser Tage put to sea this morning, the official explanation being that she has gone to experiment with carrier pigeons. She is, however, a much larger cruiser than the Sfax, which is bringing Captain Dreyfus, and the despatch of such a big vessel with carrier pigeons is quite unprecedented. Usually, a torpedo boat is sent, and the opinion, therefore, gains ground that the Tage has gone to meet the Sfax and to take Captain Dreyfus aboard. The pigeons can be used to announce the transfer, and the Tage might proceed to another port to land the prisoner.

WATCHDOG OF THE SENATE.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell's Discovery of a Startling Fact.

A Clause in the Government and Grand Trunk Railway Agreement Practically a Lease, by Which the Intercolonial Railway Would Have Been Controlled for a Term of Ninety-Nine Years.

Ottawa, June 26. — Sir Mackenzie Bowell's request in the Senate for further information about some features of the bill confirming the agreement between the Government and the Grand Trunk for the use by the Intercolonial Railway of Victoria bridge and terminals at Montreal, develops the startling fact that a certain clause of the agreement, taken together with a traffic contract made by some subordinate officials, would for 99 years give the Grand Trunk Railway and its United States connections such control of the Intercolonial traffic as to practically constitute a lease of the Government railway to them for that period.

DOMINION STEEL CO.

Its Bonds and Common Stock Underwritten Two or Three Times Over.

Montreal, June 26.—The bonds and common stock of the Dominion Steel Company have been underwritten two or three times over. The issue decided upon by the promoters is $3,000,000 in 30-year 5 per cent. gold bonds, of which $6,000,000 will be sold, while the common stock will amount to $15,000,000. The allotment will be made at a meeting to be held in Boston in the near future, but Canada will be given at least $6,000,000, and in fact the capitalists of the Dominion were ready to take the whole issue. The Merchants' Bank of Halifax has applied for an interest that extends up to $1,200,000. Mr. H. M. Whitney, the president, also wants a million, while Toronto has applied for about a million and a quarter, the Queen City being represented on the board of directors by Senator Cox and Elias Rogers.

A Monster Affair.

In order that the tremendous proportions of this enterprise may be appreciated, it is only necessary to say that the Ritter-Connolly Company of Pittsburg have a contract for the furnaces, the amount involved being $2,500,000, the same to be completed within 17 months. The steel works will also mean an expenditure of $1,500,000 more and in addition to this 500 coke ovens will be built, costing $1,500 each.

MANITOBA SCHOOL LANDS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Agrees to Give an Advance of $30,000 This Year.

Ottawa, June 26.—Messrs. Greenway and McMillan had a final interview with Sir Wilfrid Laurier on Saturday afternoon. The Government has agreed to place $30,000 in the estimates this year as an advance on the school lands fund to help carry on educational work in the Province of Manitoba. The Senate threw out the proposition last year, but it is thought it will not do it this year. The Government has also promised to hand over to the province control of the school lands, which will be administered by the Local Government, the accounts being kept separately, so that the proceeds of the land go to the benefit of the schools.

Ordered to Go to Ottawa.

Kingston, Jamaica, June 26.—The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, has directed the Governor of Jamaica, Sir Augustus W. L. Hemming, to instruct the reciprocity delegates to proceed immediately from Washington to Ottawa, for the purpose of conferring with the Dominion authorities on the whole project of Jamaica's future relations with Canada. The reason for this step is not known, but many people supposed Mr. Chamberlain doubts the practical results of the American negotiations and desires to hasten the movement for the alternative Canadian annexation.

A RAILROAD COMBINE.

C.P.R. and Great Northern Will Build a Line Together.

Vancouver, B.C., June 26.—The Canadian Pacific Railway and Great Northern, which were both recently thinking of building lines from Midway to Republic, have, it is understood, arrived at an agreement whereby a joint line will be laid to connect with the famous Boundary Creek mining camp of British Columbia with equally famous Washington camp. The contract embraces the entire 60 miles of the Inverness Railway, from Point Tupper on the Strait of Canso, northward, and includes grading, track laying and ballasting, 30 miles to be completed this year and a heavy start on the remaining section. The 900 men now employed by the company are to be transferred to Ryan & McDonnell and increased to 1,000 at once.

Church Struck by Lightning.

Goschen, N.Y., June 26.—Lightning struck the stone steeple on the Presbyterian Church of this place last night about 12 feet from the top. One thousand pounds of stone fell a distance of 185 feet down on the roof of the church and crashed through into the main portion of the edifice. Large quantities of water rushed through the hole in the roof. The building was damaged to the extent of $5,000.

Squall Caused Death.

New York, June 26.—Two lives were lost yesterday at the 29th annual regatta of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club at Oyster Bay. The men were lost off O. T. Many men and women are almost within the deadly grasp of consumption. Although its fatal hand is unseen, its presence is made known by unmistakable symptoms. Catarrh often leads to consumption. A stubborn cough, sore throat, pains in the chest, bronchitis, bleeding at the lungs, loss of flesh and general weakness are warnings that this relentless disease is about to gather in a victim.

A remedy for all the diseases which, if neglected or badly treated, lead up to consumption, is found in

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It builds up the weak places and fortifies the system against the onslaughts of disease. It helps the appetite, assists digestion, is an aid to the proper assimilation of food, and cleanses the blood of all its impurities. It is a strictly temperance medicine, containing not an atom of whisky or alcohol in any form.

"Your medicine is the best I have ever taken," writes Mrs. Jennie Dingman, of Vanburen, Kalkaska Co., Mich. "Last spring I had a bad cough; got so bad I had to be in bed all the time. My husband thought I had consumption. He wanted me to get a doctor, but I told him if it was consumption they could not help me. We thought we would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and before I had taken one bottle the cough stopped and I have since had no signs of its returning."

For the most obstinate forms of constipation and biliousness, use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Their action is prompt yet comfortable; their effect is permanent. Insist that the druggist does not give you something else.

SANDY TO HIS PHYLLIS.

How do I love thee, O my Columbine?
How shall I prove this ecstasy of mine?
I love thee better than I do that sleek,
Lithe shafted club, my beauteous driving cleek.
I love thee better than my mashie fair
That sends my silverton a-sailing through the air.
I love thee better than my brassie sweet
That sends the ball quite seven hundred feet.
I love thee better than my driver grand
Which has been blessed by old Tom Morris' hand.
I'd rather have thee housed within my walls
Than win a dozen seasoned guimee balls.
And if without thee I could o'er lie toad on high
I'd rather have thee with the vilest cuppy lie.
I love thee, dear, so much I'd not complain
To play five more and still to play again.
I love thee so I'd even be serene
If thou shouldst speak upon the putting green.
Indeed there'd be small woe within my cup
If but to get thee I must give golf up!

—Carlyle Smith in Harper's Bazar.

A QUEER EXPERIENCE.

An Aversion to a Room That Was Proved to Be Justifiable.

The conversation had drifted into premonitions, second sight and kindred topics. "I don't know much about such things," said a merchant in the group after several queer stories had been told, "but I suppose that every man has had at least one unaccountable experience in his life. Mine was like this: Shortly after I was married my wife and I went to live in an old house in the lower end of town that was owned by my father. The house had formerly been the home of my parents and was a good deal larger than we would have cared for otherwise, so we only furnished the first floor.

"Well, we were hardly settled in our new quarters before I began to feel an extraordinary aversion to one of the front rooms, which we used as a parlor. It was a pleasant looking apartment, large and sunny, and my wife was particularly fond of it, but I never crossed the threshold without a vague sense of uneasiness and depression, which I could neither explain nor shake off. Moreover, the room seemed to be associated in some indefinable way in my mind with a haunting idea of danger, and often I would get up at night and look in to see whether the windows were securely fastened. I came to dislike the room so intensely that I rarely entered it, and it was principally on that account that I embraced an opportunity before long to get another house. The change vexed my father, who regarded it as merely whimsical, and I said nothing at the time about the underlying reason for fear of confirming his opinion.

"About a year afterward, however, I chanced to mention my deep aversion to the front room of the old house and tried to describe the singular way in which it depressed me. 'That is very strange,' he said, 'for the same room is associated with one of the most painful experiences of my life.' He then told me how years ago, before I was born, he had been assaulted there by an insane negro, who beat him horribly with a club and left him for dead. The lunatic was afterward shot by an officer on the levee. It was such a gruesome affair that it was never mentioned in the family, and that was absolutely the first I had ever heard of it. There, in brief, is my yarn. I have no explanation to offer, and of course it may have been mere coincidence, but if so I think you will agree that it was somewhat out of the ordinary."

Foolishly Sensitive.

"Yes, we lost the doctor's trade in a very unfortunate way."

"How was that?"

"Why, we have a mechanical duck in our stock of novelties that runs by clockwork. The doctor came in the store just as one of our young women wound the thing up, and at the very moment the doctor came opposite it the duck gravely bowed to him and said, 'Quack, quack!' The doctor is so foolishly sensitive."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A CHINAMAN'S DRESS.

ITS WARMTH IN WINTER AND COOLNESS IN SUMMER.

Footwear Is a Matter Which Is Regulated by John's Religion—Why the Chinaman's Laundry Is Always Decorated in Red.

A singular thing about a Chinaman is that, so far as outside appearances go, he dresses himself exactly alike both winter and summer.

He appears neither more bulky nor thinner as the seasons go by, and the style, cut and texture of his raiment, unless searching investigations are made, seem unchanged. However, as the winter weather comes on, the snow begins to fall and the chill winds to whistle through the cracks in his laundry, or other place of business, he does make certain changes in his wearing apparel which, while they do not show up on the outside, have the required effect of keeping him warm and comfortable.

In the summer time the Chinaman wears as few clothes as permitted by custom. The wide, flowing silk coat, with balloon sleeves, equally wide jeans, and a glimpse of white stocking in the shoe are all he thinks it necessary to wear. Other articles are regarded as superfluous.

During cold weather the un-Americanized Chinaman wears at least six or seven coats. When he rises early on a cold winter's morning, the first thing he reaches for, as a rule, is a silk or worsted coat, which he dons, tight fitting to the skin. Then he hastily gets into a worsted blouse, made in the shape of the usual outside garment of the Chinese, and then has two or three silk coats to put on, which are followed by a closely knit muslin coat, another silk coat, and the top coat or blouse. This last is so made that no suggestion is given of the others underneath. Its never bulges, and no flag or edge of the undercoat shows. His jeans are put on next, underneath which he wears a closer fitting pair of silk jeans. If particularly chilly, he wears extra pairs of the silk jeans. The outside jeans are made out of heavy muslin, as is also at times the winter topcoat.

Concerning his stockings and his feet, the Chinaman who still adheres to his native customs in wearing clothes has trouble. According to the statement of Wong Wing, an intelligent Chinaman, no Chinaman who still professes the religion of his forefathers is permitted to wear shoes or boots closed over the instep or reaching above the ankle unless he is a priest. Consequently in winter the only protection for his feet that the Chinaman has is heavy stockings and having very thick cork and worsted soles put on his shoes.

The stockings of the Chinaman are not bought in this country, but come from China by way of San Francisco, and are not a common garment. One difference between them and the American stocking is that they are neither so short as that of the ordinary citizen nor as long as that of the schoolboy. The top reaches just below the knee, and the stockings are made of a peculiar kind of worsted, very finely knitted and very warm. This completes the winter garb of the Chinaman, which, he affirms, keeps him as warm as he wants to be.

Many of the topcoats worn by them are wadded all over on the inside with cotton, in almost the same way as a football player pads his trousers. A Chinaman will frequently start the day with all his coats on and feeling cold. As the day gets warmer and the temperature of the laundry rises he will begin to shed coats until he has on only two or three. As a rule he is very imprudent in regard to his health and rarely gets through a winter without contracting a bad cold through carelessness in going out without all his coats on or taking too many off to get cool. There is art in regulating the number to take off or put on at certain temperatures.

Very few Chinamen wear anything like a collar about their necks, as the various coats fit so closely to the neck that the wind cannot get down their backs. Gloves are another article that are not worn except in rare cases, as the voluminous sleeves form the best kind of muff for the hands and keep them much warmer than mittens or gloves. There are some Chinamen who wear in the winter time regular suits of flannel underwear instead of the silk or worsted shirt, which hangs considerably below the waist. The Chinaman does not wear suspenders, but keeps his jeans up by means of a Chinese belt made out of silk, heavily braided.

A Chinaman has one style hat—a black, soft felt hat which meets all his requirements. Wong Wing says that it is considered "too easy" for a Chinaman to wear a white or brown hat, and says he knows only two in Baltimore who ever wear a hat that is not black.

The colors of the coats and various garments of the Chinaman are more usually purple than anything else, because it is his natural favorite. Outside of his own person, however, he infinitely prefers red to any other color. He drapes his washstands, his iron boards and his entire room with red cloth. All his tapestries are red, and the sign with which he announces his name and business is red. Red is the religious color of the Chinese, and the presence of red in a laundry always denotes that the proprietor has not yet been Christianized, while the lack of his color is said to be clear proof that he has accepted the religion of this country and cast aside his own.

White is worn as a sign of mourning. The Chinaman in this country has of recent years taken to wearing his cue curled about his head instead of hanging as before, which is a mark of respect to American customs. Nearly all their clothes are imported from China.

Ordering Breakfast In India.

Shortly after her arrival in India a young woman missionary was allowed to order breakfast for the household in order to test her progress in the language. She intended to ask for fresh eggs, but used the wrong words, saying to the astonished cook, "You may bring us, this morning, an old blind man, nicely boiled!"

MASONS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

hood of man. As wise master-builders we build upon the foundation of faith in God, taking the Scriptures as the unerring standard of truth, believing in the resurrection of the body, the immortality of the soul, and the reward of virtue and the punishment of vice in the world to come. Guided by the teaching of the Volume of the Sacred Law and led by the light of the Bright Morning Star we hope to dwell within the temple of that city whose Builder and Maker is God.

As to the history of Freemasonry I cannot agree with some who state it to be coeval with man, but from its records it certainly seems to be the most ancient of human societies now existing. It has not always existed in its present form but has evolved according to the necessities of the age until we find it serving a purely moral and benevolent end. Its history can be traced for hundreds of years into the dim and shadowy past where myth and reality blend in the twilight of indistinctness. It is true that the necessities of manhood led them at a very early date to build them houses wherein to dwell and temples wherein to worship their god, but they were not bound together as a society; but one can see in this the germ of operative Masonry, and join it the development of organizations for mutual strength and support. Under the architects of Tyre there was the Dionysiac fraternity about 1500 B. C., who had the exclusive privilege of building temples and costly edifices throughout Asia Minor, and at the time when Solomon began that magnificent temple at Jerusalem, 1011 B.C., these architects had acquired an excellent reputation. The Scriptures tell us that Solomon sought the aid of Hiram King of Tyre in his undertaking, and tradition informs us that Hiram sent a number of these skilled workmen to aid the King of Israel in the erection of that superb structure whose fame has filled the earth. It is also asserted that these workmen were known to each other by means of signs and symbols, that they were organized into what we would call lodges, presided over by Masters and overseers, that they practiced charity and benevolence to the poor and needy; and certainly it seems to all Masons that the ritual of to-day had its origin in incidents and legends of that time.

When Masonry was introduced into England is still an unsettled question. It is believed that Masons were the architects and builders of Canterbury Cathedral in 600, of St. Paul's, London, in 604, and Westminster Abbey in 605. But we stand on more certain ground when we trace Masonry as the offspring of the building guilds of the middle ages, which had spread throughout Europe and embraced every trade and occupation, exercising much control in civil and political affairs in the eleventh century. The society of Freemasons occupied an honored place amongst these guilds and were at first distinctively Christian, holding allegiance to some prelate as their head. Their chief duties were to erect those glorious churches, those sacred temples, magnificent cathedrals and splendid monasteries which to this day are the glory and pride of Europe. It is to Masonry we owe the origin of that picturesque and symbolic style of architecture known as Gothic, and was exclusively enjoyed by them for many years. The ecclesiastical structures in both Gothic and Norman styles down to the fifteenth century were the work of Masonry. Their skill was shown in such work as the cathedral of Rheims built in 1005; Tours, 1012; Cologne, the choir alone of which was ninety-four years in building; Strasburg cathedral, the finest specimen of Gothic architecture in the world, which was four hundred years in building; the Vatican at Rome, the cathedral of Toledo in Spain, Notre Dame in Paris, the Tower of London, and many others. In England the society prospered with varying success for many years, but owing to political troubles they lost the power of regulating wages and the employment of labor, but they still met in lodges and practiced the work of the Craft and performed those duties of benevolence and charity which have always characterized Freemasons. During this period, when Masons ceased to be operative, many of the details of architecture were lost, which fact has been deplored by no less an authority as Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of St. Paul's cathedral as it now stands, himself a distinguished Mason. Mingled among the members of our Craft have been found the greatest and best of the land, Bishops and Archbishops, both the Roman and Anglican churches, kings and princes, who never thought it derogatory to their dignity to thus serve the interests of mankind. One writer mentions the names of Edward the Confessor, Henry I., Henry VII., Cardinal Wolseley and others, and we are all proud to mention His Royal Highness Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, and future king of the greatest empire to world has ever seen.

The great work of Masonry to-day is certainly in the line of the text. That each will be a master-builder, Yea a wise master-builder, endeavoring to add day by day to that spiritual temple by letting his own light shine that others may see his good work and glorify the Father. That as to himself every Mason will practice the strictest morality, aided by the teachings of the Craft, which is to make of the things of life with which we come in contact a parable to help him live according to the mind of the Great Creator; that the very instruments of his daily labor will tell him the lessons from which our Lord and Master has drawn His profoundest teaching, specially taking the Volume of the Sacred Law as his constant support and guide, the square the emblem of his daily conduct and the compasses to outline his duties, not only to the few about him but to the whole circle of humanity. A piece of poetry familiar to many, because a part of one of the text books of our schools, tells us of one Abu Ben Adam who in his dream saw an angel with a scroll on which were written the names of those who loved the Lord. On enquiry he was informed that his name was not there. He requested to be written as one "who loves his fellow men." The next night the angel appeared and to show the estimation of his desire his name led all the rest, for he who loves his fellow men will surely love the Lord. This is the work of Masonry, and the homes, hospitals and other charitable institutions stand as monuments of their principles. The aged and the infirm, the widow and the orphan are partakers of their bounty. He was so pleased that the offertory was to be devoted to the cause of the Children's Aid Society. There is not enough sympathy given in connection with this charitable Institution. Concluding the rev gentleman said the character of the brother will be protected and himself constantly encouraged to be builded upon that true foundation, the Head Corner-Stone, the Rock of Ages, which the winds of adversity cannot move and the trials of life cannot make fall; that we all may rise from the tomb of transgression into the light of immortal life to shine as the stars forever and ever. It lies with us to perform our duty. Let our example be such as others could follow safely, and when squared by the square of His justice and adjusted by the plumb rule of His exacting righteousness we may not be found wanting, but be fitted in as living stones in that eternal temple.

At the conclusion of the service the brethren returned to the lodge room where the usual resolutions of thanks were duly passed.

During the offertory a quartette was rendered by Mrs. Seward, Miss Clarke and Messrs. Morphet and Cluxton.

The collection, which was devoted to the Children's Aid Society, amounted to $17.06.

MASONS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

IN HONOR OF THE ANNIVERSARY OF ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST.

An Able Discourse, Appropriate to the Occasion, Delivered by Rev. W. L. Armitage—Something of the Teachings, History and Practice of Freemasonry.

Saturday was June 24th, the anniversary of St. John the Baptist, observed by Freemasons the world over, and yesterday in honor of that anniversary Peterborough Lodge, No. 155, A.F. and A.M., accompanied by members of Corinthian lodge, No. 101, and Keene lodge, No. 374, and other visiting brethren, attended divine service at St. John's church, where Rev. (Bro.) W. L. Armitage preached an eloquent sermon, appropriate to the occasion. The rev. gentleman by research and preparation presented a most interesting discourse, in which he did not fail to drive home many important duties and privileges enjoyed as Masons and as citizens.

The brethren assembled at Masonic hall at three o'clock, and marched by way of Water and Hunter-sts. to the church, where the centre pews had been reserved for them. Almost one hundred members of the Craft were present, and the sermon was given a most attentive hearing. The service had been neatly printed and each member of the congregation furnished with a copy, so that all were enabled to enter heartily into the service.

Rev. Mr. Armitage took his texts from I. Corinthians 3, 10:—According to the grace of God which is given unto me as a wise master-builder I have laid the foundation and another buildeth thereon," his special text being the words, "as a wise master-builder."

The rev. gentleman in opening said: I am sure that I am quite within bounds when I express the most hearty welcome of the Rector and clergy of St. John's parish and the wardens of St. John's church to the Craft of Freemasonry on this occasion. I am sure of this from what you will see as we go along in this discourse, and also because of the many charitable acts and deeds practiced by Masons. As Masons you are welcome to this House of God. For my own part I feel it a great honor to be asked to preach at this Masonic service. Not only as a young man and as a young Mason I feel unequal to the task, but also as a Christian minister. One of our dearest and most coveted privileges is to speak to men as men. It is not a privilege one too often has nor can the opportunity be seized upon too often to speak face to face as members of the Craft and men of different communions of the Christian church.

The rev. gentleman said such words as those of the text, "A wise Master-builder," are words which carry inspiring thoughts to the minds of both members of the Church and of the Craft. They remind us that in our respective capacities we are fellow builders of the Temple of God, that structure of human souls which is to glorify our Great Creator, the Most High God. They tell us of our duties to ourselves and to inspire others to be wise master-builders, building upon that foundation which is laid and raise a superstructure of square conduct, level steps and upright intentions that will enable us to ascend into the presence of the Great Architect of the Universe unstained by vice and unspotted by sin. Masonic lodges were formally dedicated to King Solomon, but are now dedicated to St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist, my own opinion being that these were two of the most conspicuous figures of the first followers of our Lord, the first being the fore-runner and herald of the Prince of Peace, the latter the beloved disciple, the last remaining of the apostles and privileged to behold in vision the things pertaining unto the last days. They represented then the beginning and the end; they pointed as the Jews to Him who was to come and also pointed back to Him who was already come. This is my own interpretation.

Exalted as the position of Masonry has become from its purity of teaching and its multitudinous display of that most excellent gift of charity, it is not the Church, nor does it claim to be a substitute for the Church, nor an opponent of religion. It has nothing to do with the preparation of the soul for its God; no human society can be placed on a par with that which Christ has provided; no vows can equal the sacred obligations of baptism; no privileges can be compared to those which the Lord's true followers possess as members of Christ and one another. It is but an attempt to embody and put in practice the broad principles of the Scriptures and of Christianity concerning the brotherhood

DOMINION DAY.

Saturday next will be July 1st, Dominion Day, Canada's national holiday, and Peterborough will observe the day with that patriotism and loyalty which always characterizes its people. The question having arsien as to whether the holiday should be observed on Saturday or on Monday, and the decision having been reached that the holiday should be celebrated on the proper day, Saturday, it is to be expected that all business men will loyally observe the day, and that there will be a general rest from labor. Business places should be closed, and the day commemorated as Canadians who realize the importance of Canada's national holiday.

There can be no loss of business if all business men observe the holiday, as all loyal citizens should. If goods cannot be purchased on Saturday, they will have to be purchased on another day, so that at the end of the month the sales will total as much as if Saturday had been a business day and Monday the holiday. The workingman's claim to Saturday as a holiday was a good one. On that day the cheap fares, the picnics and the attractions afford him some means of enjoying Canada's national day. He loses his day's pay whether the holiday was on Saturday or on Monday, and if it was on Monday he would lose the day without an opportunity of receiving in return as good a day's enjoyment as he would have no cheap fares, no picnics, no holiday outings. It therefore seems only fair and right, the loyal and patriotic thing, in fact, that Saturday, as decided, should be generally observed by business men. It is the national holiday and let it be observed as such. Peterborough will have many visitors that day, and let our citizens all unite with these visitors in celebrating Dominion Day.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Lacrosse

At Perth on Saturday a fast and exciting game of lacrosse was played between the Crescents of Perth and the Markham team. There was no roughness. The combination of the Perth home is said to have been dazzling, three of their goals being scored in one minute each. The teams played with eleven men a side. Perth won by a score of 7 goals to 3. The question arises as to what Perth would do with Peterborough. It would be a good idea to arrange return matches.

THE BIG CIRCUS.

The Forepaugh & Sells Bros' Attraction Well Patronized.

The circus of Messrs. Forepaugh and Sells Bros.' on Saturday was largely patronized at both afternoon and evening exhibitions. The crowd present in the afternoon was especially large, all parts of the big tent being occupied. The managers stated that Peterborough was the best town they had shown at on their route and that they were highly pleased with their day's business.

The circus was one of the best that has ever visited town. The variety of attractions was fair and every specialty was high in its class. The approval of the spectators was shown frequently by hearty applause. The menagerie was a great centre of interest. There were no fakirs or bunco men attached to the business or following it and all the officials were most courteous and obliging. In this way the concern was a model one.

The work of loading took place near the C.P.R. station after the night exhibition and was watched by a large crowd. The circus shows in Toronto to-day.

The Chief of Police states that the day passed off without a theft or a loss of any kind being reported to the officers.

ARMY AND NAVY CONCERT

Peterborough's Citizens to be Treated to a Good Feast of Music.

In order to meet the expenses surrounding the Grand Old Army and Navy Veterans excursion to Peterborough on Wednesday of this week, Mr Gliddon, bandmaster, and the 57th band have very kindly volunteered to assist Prof. Richardson in carrying out his programme of music in the market hall on Wednesday night, when a grand concert will be given by the combined bands, making seventy-five instruments in all. The programme will include selections of the most popular variety. This is the right spirit and speaks well for the good feeling of the Peterborough band.

The concert will be given all for the trifling sum of fifteen cents or two tickets for twenty-five cents.

Remember when you contribute to your own amusement on this occasion you are also helping to provide a burial fund for some of those who fought and bled for our country and flag. 2d148

THE DRAGOONS AT ST. LUKE'S

SPECIAL SERMON BY THE CHAPLAIN TO THE VOLUNTEERS.

A Large and Attentive Congregation—An Interesting Sermon by Rev Mr Symonds on the Subject of War.

Last evening the annual church parade of C squadron of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons was held to St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, the chaplain of the regiment, Rev H Symonds, preaching the sermon. The volunteers assembled at their armouries, Ashburnham, and, under command of Capt. Johnson and Lieuts. Bradburn and Hall, marched to the church. Lt.-Col. H. C. Rogers, commander of the regiment, and Lt.-Col. Bell, of the 57th, marched at the head of the ranks. A number of the other officers of the 57th were in uniform and joined in the parade. The men presented a gallant and soldierly appearance, and their march up the street was watched by many spectators.

The congregation at St. Luke's was an unusually large one. The service was very interesting. The hymns sung were all appropriate to the military character of the occasion, and the chaplain's sermon on war contained many ideas tending to promote serious thought. At the close of the service "God Save the Queen" was sung and the Dragoons formed in line and marched back to the armouries, where they dispersed.

Rev Mr Symonds took his text from Isaiah II, 4:

"And He shall judge among the nations . . . neither shall they learn war any more."

He pointed out that these words express an ideal, something not likely to be realized all at once, but which will surely come to pass in God's time. The speaker discussed, first, the right of war in itself. No one believes in fighting without a cause. But there is a right and a wrong side in everything, and if a nation's rights have been invaded and her people injured, and if diplomacy has failed to secure justice, war is then necessary and right. War is sometimes the dependence of the life of nations. Nations are justified in Scripture and it is necessary for them to protect themselves. But just as many private disputes are settled peaceably by law, the day may come and will come when the nations will submit their differences to some court or tribunal for arbitration and settlement. It is with this end in view that the present Peace Conference is sitting. Nothing may result from it, but as arbitration is a more Christian and proper method of settling disputes than war, the speaker deprecated the sneering tone assumed by some in regard to this conference. The Russian politicians may not desire universal peace, but Rev Mr Symonds did not believe that the sincerity of the Emperor should be questioned. The work of the conference may be small, but others will follow it that may achieve the end. However necessary and just war may be in some cases it is a terrible thing, and not the least of our blessings is that we live in a country that knows so little of it.

The speaker took up next the effects of war or the profession of a soldier on the individual. If war were an unmitigated evil we should expect to find soldiers degraded in character. But the exact opposite is what we do find. In Bible history some of the noblest characters were warriors. In our armies are many men conspicuous for Christian acts. Soldiers as a class are open to religious influence. The profession is one that elevates in character. One reason of this is that the discipline, order and method taught can be practiced in every department of life. Rev Mr Symonds here heartily congratulated both officers and men upon the excellent reports of them that had come from camp. The Prince of Wales Dragoons had been especially praised for good conduct, discipline and efficiency, and of C squadron General Hutton had declared it to be the best squadron, both as regards men and horses, that he had seen since coming to this country. The speaker hoped that this high reputation would be maintained. He urged that the same standard be kept up in their business, home and church life.

Rev Mr Symonds pointed out a kinship between the profession of soldiers and Christianity. Christ died for us; His distinctive mark was self-sacrifice. So soldiers are always ready to fight and lay down their lives for their country. Many of them lose their lives; nearly all remain poor. To secure peace and happiness for Great Britain how many lives have been given up by land and sea! War, then, has its roots in what is essentially a Christian thing—self-sacrifice.

Earthly war was a type of the heavenly war. Life is a conflict and every man has to fight against the powers of evil. The speaker urged his hearers to take on the whole armor of God and to fight the good fight of faith. Some day all war will cease, perhaps in this world, perhaps not till another takes its place. So also will the spiritual conflict be won, but meanwhile every man should be loyal and true and at the end be able to say like St. Paul, "I have fought the good fight; I have finished my course; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of life which the righteous Judge, the good Lord, will give in that day."

Blowing a Cork Into a Bottle.

Ask some of the company if they can blow a small bit of cork which you have placed in the mouth of a bottle so that it will go into the body of the bottle.

Lay the bottle on the table upon its side and place the bit of cork about an inch or less inside the open end. The uninitiated will blow until they get red in the face, and the cork will invariably come out of the bottle instead of going into it. There is a simple reason for it too. The direction of the air forced by the one blowing brings it against the bottom of the bottle. The air compresses within the bottle's walls and must find an outlet; therefore it is turned and forced out at the only vent the bottle has, necessarily blowing the cork with it. But take a common lemonade straw, place the end of it near the cork in the bottle neck, blow very gently—and the cork rolls in.

The First Silk Hat.

An old journal, dated Jan. 16, 1791, gives the following amusing account of the wearing of the first silk hat in London: "John Hetherington, haberdasher, of the Strand, was arraigned before the lord mayor yesterday on a charge of breach of the peace and inciting to riot, and was required to give bonds in the sum of £500. It was in evidence that Mr. Hetherington, who is well connected, appeared on the public highway wearing upon his head what he called a silk hat (which was offered in evidence), a tall structure having a shiny luster and calculated to frighten timid people.

"As a matter of fact the officers of the crown stated that several women fainted at the unusual sight, while children screamed, dogs yelped, and a younger son of Cordwainer Thomas, who was returning from a chandler's shop, was thrown down by the crowd which had collected and had his right arm broken. For these reasons the defendant was seized by the guards and taken before the lord mayor. In extenuation of his crime the defendant claimed that he had not violated any law of the kingdom, but was merely exercising a right to appear in a headdress of his own design—a right not denied to any Englishman."

The Vanishing Weasel.

As I lay stretched on the bank at the foot of a great maple I saw a weasel run along in the brush fence some distance away. A few seconds later he was standing on the exposed root of the tree hardly a yard from my eyes. I lay motionless and examined the beautiful creature minutely, till suddenly I found myself staring at the smooth, greenish gray root of the maple, with no weasel in sight.

Judging from my own experience, I should say that this is the usual termination of any chance observations of either weasels or minks. Occasionally they may be seen to dart into the bushes or behind some log or projecting bank, but much more frequently they vanish with a suddenness that defies the keenest eyesight. In all probability this vanishing is accompanied by extreme rapidity of motion, but if this is the case then the creature succeeds in doing something utterly impossible to any other warm blooded animal of its size.

Mice, squirrels and some of the smaller birds are all of them swift enough at times, but except in the case of the humming bird none of them, I believe, succeeds in accomplishing the result achieved by the weasels.—Popular Science Monthly.

It Proved a Boomerang.

There can be no doubt that the war indemnity paid by France to Germany after the six weeks' war, was a boomerang to score up against Bismarck. The good it did to France is inestimable. Prior to the war there was an enormous amount of money locked up in the form of small savings. The appeal of the government to the people set this sum into profitable motion, and, to the amazement of the world, France paid off her creditor in less than half the stipulated time. This gave a vast impulse to business enterprise of all kinds, and since then France has steadily become more wealthy. In Germany the effects were less beneficial. The huge influx of gold sent up prices with a rush. A mania for speculation set in, followed by the inevitable crisis. Most serious of all, however, was the unexpected discovery of France's strength. Bismarck intended to cripple her forever, but he only revealed her immense power, and this, of course, necessitated the gigantic military burdens which year by year weigh more heavily upon Germany.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Face to Face.

"I've got the money to back my offer," said the ponderous citizen, "and I'd give a fortune to anybody who could show me how the reduce my weight."

"And I'd do the same for anybody who would stop my hair from falling out. By the way, how did you make your money?"

Bombay is one of the chief gates to India, and a lovely view of it is obtained from the sea as the vessel gradually draws near to the harbor, which puts inland, and is surrounded by the town.

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out.

That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

story, and a wild hope rushes into existence, a hope that could not be put into words, but which takes the form of an idea that she whom the English girl met as Sister Magdalen, his mother, is near.

He looks up; his eyes fall upon a face that boasts of extreme beauty, a pair of wondrous black eyes and cheeks aflame, a face that, set in sable coils of hair, would drive an artist wild with the desire to transfer its charms to canvas.

And John Craig, strange man, frowns. Evidently there is something in his composition that prevents him from accepting what the prodigal gods have thrown in his path.

"You?" he says bluntly, and with disdain.

The woman with the black eyes smiles sweetly, as she continues to soothingly touch his forehead, which throbs and burns as though he endures the keenest pain.

"Did you imagine it could be any other, my dear John? You deserted me, but I believed you failed to know your own mind. At any rate I have determined not to desert you."

"Pauline, you do not—it is impossible for you to care for me after what has happened."

"Impossible! Why should it be? I can't help myself. I have seen others profess to love me, have played with them as a queen might have with her subjects who prostrated themselves before her. Yet, John Craig I never loved but once. You have stirred my heart to its depths. I am not able to analyse these feelings. I only know what I know."

She does not feel the modesty of a young girl; much acting before the public has made her brazen, this midnight beauty with the glowing eyes, black as sloes, the pouting lips, the figure of a Hebe.

John Craig may have seen adventures before in his life, and probably has been in many a fix, being fond of spending his vacations in rambling over the wilderness away up in the Michigan penninsula, with a gun on his shoulder; but plainly he has now met the crisis of his whole career.

"Pauline, I am a frank fellow, as you know. It is not in me to dissemble. I am going to speak plainly with you," he says, rising to a sitting posture, and looking the actress full in the eyes.

She moves uneasily, and her cheeks, which were erstwhile tinted with scarlet, grow pallid. Then she sets her teeth, and with a smile continues:

"That is right. I hate a deceiver worse than anything else on earth. It was your honest way, John Craig, that first drew me toward you. Yes, speak your mind."

Evidently she is in part prepared for the worst, though she has hoped that the old witchery might be thrown about the young doctor.

"When you treated me in that merciless way, long ago, the regard I felt for you died out of my heart—your spell was broken."

"Ah! John, you have thought so, perhaps, just as I did, but I learned that these affections of ours are deeper than we suspect. I believed I had dropped you forever, but time has taught me what a terrible wrench it must be that would tear the image of John Craig from my heart.'

"I am sorry to hear you say so, Pauline, for on my part I have been effectually cured. I even look back and regard our love-making as a foolish, boyish fancy, in which neither of us knew our own minds. Why can't you do the same?" he says, calmly.

"I am not built that way—my nature is of the tropical order, for my mother was born in Corsica, you know. Some of these fair English girls may be fickle, but Pauline Potter is the same as when she knew you in Chicago. But, John Craig, this same love can change to hate; it is but a step between the two, and no magician's wand is needed to make the transformation."

Already a change has swept over her face; it does not look so lovely now, for the arched black brows meet in a frown, while from the midnight eyes the fires of aroused passion begin to scintillate.

Craig knows that when he stirs up the pool he arouses the worst elements in her nature. Still he will not disguise his feeling.

Mentally he contrasts this girl with the English maid, and Pauline suffers by the comparison.

Perhaps a trifle of the scorn he feels shows upon his face. Pauline can no longer call him her slave, and it may be this that arouses the new feeling in her heart, for a woman will never bear the sneers of one whom she has madly loved.

"This is worse than foolish, Pauline. You seem to know at least a portion of my mission abroad, and hence must be aware that I am in no humor for love-making—that my whole soul is bound up in my search."

"Well, I can help you, John," she says quietly, holding her feelings in check until she has ventured upon this last resort.

"You can? Then I beg of you, Pauline, to give me assistance. To find my mother is the one thought of my existence, and any one who can shorten my quest must have my deepest gratitude."

Pauline frowns again.

"I hate that word; it has no place with me, John Craig. Friendship I despise—it is either love or hate with me. Let me tell you what I am in a position to do—find your mother for you, bring you face to face, or, on the other hand, render it impossible for you to ever set eyes upon her."

Her manner proves it to be no idle boast, but the young man will not descend to deceit, even when he might accomplish so much.

"Will you bring about this meeting?" he asks.

"On one condition, John."

"Well"—hesitatingly—"name it."

"That you marry me," is the prompt reply, and, even Pauline, actress by nature and vocation as she is, turns a trifle rosy under his gaze, though not abashed.

"That is a sudden ultimatum. Kindly tell me when you would like this little affair to come off?" he asks lightly.

"Now—before I take you to the one you have long sought."

"Pardon me; I can hardly collect my wits. You see I had not dreamed of marrying for years. It is very, very sudden."

"Oh! I'll give you time to reflect upon it, John. I wouldn't hurry up such grave business."

"I don't believe I need much time. Don't you think it is a rather strange thing to demand payment before you deliver the goods?"

"If you gave me your word, John, I would wait until I had carried out my word."

"You think you could trust me?"

"I am willing to accept the chances."

"Indeed!"

"Will you make the promise?"

"Not I."

"Then you were simply gaining time," with a clenching of the small hands and a gathering of the black brows.

"I wanted to uncover your batteries; to learn what you knew; to understand your designs. Now that you give me no alternative, I am compelled to hurt your feelings by declaring myself able to find the one I seek without the aid of Pauline Potter."

As he speaks the last word he rises to his feet, once more feeling like himself.

"What would you do now, John Craig?"

"Leave this building, since I was lured here under false pretences. What have you done with my companion?"

"The funny little man? Oh, he left here long ago, when he learned you had fallen among old friends," she replies, carelessly.

John remembers something now; it is the sight of Philander Sharpe lying back in his chair drugged, and therefore he does not credit what the actress says.

"Will you show me the way out?" he asks.

"I will do more."

She claps her hands together in the Oriental way of summoning a servant.

Instantly the curtains move; three men enter the apartment, and John realises that Pauline Potter is about to show her teeth.

He draws his figure up, for while not a pugnacious man, he knows how to defend himself. As to his bravery, who can question it, after his action of the afternoon?

"Does it take three to show me to the door? With your permission I will depart."

"Not yet, Doctor Chicago—not yet."

"Ha! you would attempt violence. Well, I'm ready to meet these fellows, thanks to the forethought that caused me to arm myself before starting on this quixotic errand to-night."

The young Chicagoan throws a hand back to draw the little pocket revolver which has more than once served him well, but, to his dismay, it is gone.

He sees a derisive smile upon the features of Pauline, and knows she has taken it while he lay there unconscious on the couch.

"I was afraid you might do yourself damage, John. If you are wise, you will submit tamely," she says, and clapping her hands again sets the three men upon him.

Craig is no Hercules in build, and, besides, his left arm is in rather poor condition for warfare, being exceedingly sore.

Still he is not the one to submit tamely, so long as a single chance remains, and for the space of a minute there is a lively scene in the Oriental apartment, in which divans are overturned, men swinging desperately around, and even Pauline Potter, accustomed to stage battles only, is constrained to utter a few shrieks of alarm.

Then it is over.

Doctor Chicago, breathing hard and looking his dogged defiance, stands there in the hands of his captors.

"Do you change your mind, John Craig?" asks the woman, fastening her burning gaze upon his face.

"I have too much Scotch blood in me for that. On the contrary, I am more than ever determined to pursue my mission without any outside assistance," he answers.

"Take him away!" she cries, and the look that crosses her face can only be likened to the black clouds preceding the hurricane.

John struggles no longer, for he realizes that he is safer out of her sight than in it.

They take him through a door-way, and the last he hears from the beautiful tigress is her taunting cry of:

"We will break this proud spirit of yours, John Craig—what you scorn now you will beg for after awhile, when it is too late."

He wonders whether this is a prophecy.

The men hurry him along a narrow hall, for many of these Maltese houses are built in a queer way, nor do they treat him with consideration, but rather the contrary.

When he ventures to protest, the man who opened the door orders silence and enforces it with a cowardly blow from his fist.

John looks him straight in the eye and says:

"You coward! I will remember that," at which the man turns his head away and swears under his breath.

Presently they halt in front of a door, which the leader unlocks. At a word from him the young American is pushed inside.

John, receiving such an impetus, staggers and throws out his hands for support, but failing to find anything of this kind, pitches over, just as the door slams shut.

MILNER'S RECALL.

Members of the Cape Parliament Are Said to Have Sent Such a Request to the Queen.

London, June 26.—Word has been received here that an address petitioning the Queen to recall Sir Alfred Milner from his post as British high commissioner for South Africa has been forwarded by members of the Cape Parliament.

This petition is a new phase of the trouble in South Africa. The news from Cape Town does not tell why the members of Parliament ask the recall of the commissioner, who is one of the most bland and tactful diplomats of Britain.

Joubert Denies It All.

Pretoria, June 26.—In an interview today Gen. Joubert, the Commander-in-Chief of the Transvaal forces, denied that he had ordered guns from the Krupp's or batteries from the United States, as had been reported.

Firmness Having a Good Effect.

London, June 26.—The firm attitude of Great Britain appears to be having the desired effect in the Transvaal complications. The latest cablegrams from South Africa talked of various semi-official missions for negotiations between Cape Town, Bloemfontein and Pretoria, aiming to arrange a franchise compromise on a basis of five or six years' past residence.

President Kruger is represented as agreeable to some such arrangement, but is finding considerable difficulty in handling his own conservative element. In a reported interview he is alleged to have said regarding the war rumors that mountains were made out of mole hills, and that he was firmly convinced Queen Victoria would never allow "letting loose the dogs of war" over South Africa.

Buying Guns in Italy.

The Government of the South African Republic, according to a despatch to The Daily Mail from Rome, is ordering large quantities of rifles from Italian firms for immediate shipment.

THE SAMOAN IMBROGLIO.

Germany's Foreign Office Questions the Correctness of Recent News.

Berlin, June 26.—The officials of the German Foreign Office question the correctness of some of the later news from Samoa. They say the abolition of the kingship is entirely acceptable to Germany, which has never espoused the cause of either candidate. While admitting Chief Justice Chambers' competency, the Foreign Office questions the correctness of his decision in the premises and doubts that the commission has decided to leave him in office. They say he should be retired like the others. The return of Mr. E. H. S. Maxse, who was British consul at Apia, gives great dissatisfaction, as the Germans are more incensed against the British than against the American officials in Samoa.

Are Claims of Germans Good?

Berlin, June 26.—The Nueste Nachrichten contends that the recognition by the international commissioners of the decision of Chief Justice Chambers regarding the Kingship in Samoa does not in the least prejudice the claims of Germans to compensation for losses sustained during the recent disturbances.

International Council of Women.

London, June 26.—The pressure of applications for admission to the International Council of Women, which opens to-day and lasts until July 5, has been so great that it was found necessary to change the place of meeting to the large convocation hall of the church house. An interesting feature will be the attendance of Chinese delegates. The Countess of Aberdeen, the president of the council, has been notified by the Chinese minister of the appointment of the wife of Shen, an attache of the Chinese legation, as an official delegate. She will be accompanied by an interpreter and two other Chinese ladies, and will be attended by Dr. Kang, who took a medical degree in America, and Miss Kang. A crowd of American women of all professions will be in attendance. Baroness von Suttner, who has taken an active part in the work of the council, has arrived from The Hague.

"Tom Brown at Oxford."

London, June 26.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, the most Rev. Frederick Temple, D.D., formerly head master of Rugby School, unveiled at Rugby on Saturday, in the presence of a distinguished assemblage, a statue erected to the memory of the late Thomas Hughes, Q.C., author of "Tom Brown's School Days," "Tom Brown at Oxford," etc., and founder of the British settlement of Rugby, Tenn.

Khalifa Took to the Woods.

Cairo, Egypt, June 26.—It is announced that the Khalifa has been defeated with heavy loss by the natives friendly to the British. It is added that he has fled to the woods with a few followers, and that his capture is imminent.

Dominion Election Hangs Fire.

Winnipeg, June 26—A despatch from Ottawa says the bye-election here will not be held in the near future. Serious complaints are made regarding the compilation of the provincial lists. Reeve Freeman of Wallace, writing on Saturday, said that in his polling sub-division there were 38 names out of 113 which should not have been on, and so with many other divisions.

Buzzard Struck a Berg.

St. John's, Nfld., June 26.—The British armed sloop Buzzard, while trying to reach the French treaty shore on Friday, collided with an iceberg, which stove in her bows. By means of collision mats and moving the guns and heavy gear to the stern, she made her way back here safely. She will be docked to-day.

Oswego Gets a Scorching.

Oswego, N.Y., June 26.—Fire yesterday morning destroyed the Oswego Crate Factory and slightly damaged the Ontario Bicycle Works and Findlay's Machine Works. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

A WRONG IDEA OF... DYSPEPSIA

Throws all the Blame on the Stomach—The Real Seat of Trouble is the Intestines—The Permanent Cure is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It is an old idea long since exploded that digestion is confined to the stomach. No modern scientist denies that by far the greater part of digestion and the more difficult part takes place in the intestines. This explains why dyspepsia is never really cured by preparations which merely aid stomach digestion and act only on the stomach.

This fact also explains why Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have been so remarkably successful as a cure for the worst forms of dyspepsia and indigestion.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills act directly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, and give new tone and vigor to the intestines, and make them able to perform their work of digesting the substances on which the stomach has no effect.

Stomach treatment may do well enough for slight indigestion, but if you have chronic indigestion or dyspepsia of a serious nature you can profit by the experience of scores of thousands who have been permanently cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25c. a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

Alliston, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Shaddon, February 28th, 1898.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Items of Interest Gathered From the Different Congregations

GEORGE-ST.

The anthem "God is Love" was rendered in George-st. church last evening. The baritone solos were admirably taken by Mr. G. W. Mulligan. During the offertory a beautiful male quartette "Rock of Ages," was rendered with splendid harmony by Misses Mulligan, Brown, Goldie and Walder. There will be a special musical service at George-st. church next Sunday evening.

CHARLOTTE-ST.

The morning anthem at Charlotte-st. church yesterday was "Saviour, Blessed Saviour." It was nicely rendered. During the offertory the Rines brothers sang "Lead Kindly Light," as a duet with excellent effect. The evening anthem was "Sovereign Ruler, Lord of All." A quartette "Hark! there comes a whisper," was given by Misses Hall and Stephens, and Messrs. Squires and Skitch in pleasing style.

ST. LUKE'S

At yesterday morning's service Rev. H. Symonds referred to the work of the Synod just closed. The matter of the division of the Diocese had been materially advanced by the passage of Mr. A. H. Campbell's resolution which had been reported in The Review. With regard to the missionary collections he congratulated the congregation upon the satisfactory report in the Synod Journal. Their offerings had been over $100 in excess of the previous year. For Diocesan Missions they had given $15 more than they were asked for. He hoped they would not relax their efforts, and thanked them for their hearty co-operation.

A garden party will be held under the auspices of the Young Women's Chapter of St. Luke's Guild to-morrow evening, in the beautiful grounds around H. T. Strickland's residence. The band of the 57th has prepared a special programme of music, and no pains are being spared to make the event enjoyable for all who attend it.

ST. ANDREW'S.

A very interesting service of praise was held in St. Andrew's church last evening. Rev. Mr. Potter preached on the martyrdom of Stephen and in the course of his excellent address pointed out that there are in the world many martyrs, nameless and obscure, who spend their lives day after day and year after year in the lot in which God has cast them, laboring unselfishly in narrow routine but in so doing achieving results which are as praiseworthy as the acts of those best known to fame. Rev. Mr. Potter also referred to Saturday night work as a means of crushing out the life and enjoyment of many and urged upon his congregation to discourage as much as they could the practice of Saturday night business.

The musical services were very pleasing. The Rines brothers rendered two duets, "Are You Drifting?" and "Can a boy forget his mother?" Mr. Bert. Rines rendered two excellent solos, "A Dream of Paradise," and "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

BOSTON LAUNDRY STARCH never fails to give satisfaction

A Rich "Pick-up" in Campbellford.

On Thursday evening Mr. H. Le Brun returned from Campbellford where he had been engaged in completing the purchase of Mr W. W. Tyrrell's splendid stock of ready-made clothing. Mr. Tyrrell has been Campbellford's best clothing merchant for the past six years, but has lately decided to move west. He made a private offer to sell out to Mr. Le Brun, whose firm is rapidly pushing its Campbellford branch to the front. Mr. Le Brun closed out the deal and took in the whole stock at 62 1-2 cents on the dollar, a price much below the wholesale figures. Peterborough as well as Campbellford is to enjoy the benefit of the lucky bargain—as the sale is now in full swing at the City Clothing Store, George-st. The stock is right up to the season, well worth a hundred cents on the dollar, and as "good as wheat." These bargains have the right of way and will be railroaded through at express speed. Be on time.

COUNTY COUNCIL IN JUNE SESSION

MANY COMMITTEE REPORTS WERE PRESENTED

And Adopted—The consolidation of the County By-laws—Auctioneers and Pedlars—Mr. Casement Appointed Arbitrator.

The County Council went into session Friday afternoon with the Warden in the chair and all members present. Committee reports were presented and disposed of.

COUNTY PROPERTY.

Mr. Forster presented the report of the Committee on County Property as follows:

The Committee on County Property beg leave to report as follows:

That the matter of the purchase of hose for the use of the Court House building and all necessary repairs to the County buildings and grounds be left in the hands of the Warden and Chairman of this Committee with power to act.

JOS. FORSTER.
Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON SCHOOLS.

The Committee on Schools reported through its chairman, Mr. Eastland, as follows:—

The Committee on Schools beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your committee recommend that no action be taken upon the petition of Robert Gillies, President of the Peterborough Teacher's Association, asking this Council to grant permission to hold their annual convention on Thursday and Friday instead of Friday and Saturday.

2. Your Committee recommend that this Council appoint three arbitrators, viz., His Honor Judge Weller, James Coyle Brown, Esq., Public School Inspector, and the Warden of this County, to hear the appeal of Thomas Hull and others from the refusal or neglect of the united townships of Burleigh and Anstruther, to form a new school section by dividing the boundaries of a school section or school sections within the said townships.

3. Your Committee further recommend that the same persons be appointed arbitrators to hear the appeal of John T. Beech and others from the refusal or neglect of the united townships of Galway and Cavendish to form a new school section by dividing the boundaries of a school section or school sections within the said townships.

4. Your Committee would recommend inasmuch as the above appeals are expensive and are paid for by the local parties concerned that all the parties interested in the above appeals make an attempt to amicably settle the differences in question between them without resort to arbitration and without incurring the costs of such an appeal; and in order to allow time for such settlement your committee would suggest that the above arbitrators do not undertake their duties before the 20th day of August next to allow sufficient time to elapse to permit the parties to come together, and that the County Clerk be instructed to forward a copy of these resolutions to the petitioners and the respective Councils interested.

5. Your Committee recommend that the report of the County School Inspector be received.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

T. G. EASTLAND,
Chairman.

PRINTING COMMITTEE.

Mr. Fitzgerald brought in the report of the Committee on Printing as follows:—

Your Committee on Printing beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your Committee recommend that the report of this Committee adopted on the 28th day of January, 1899, be amended by striking out that part of paragraph "2" thereof restricting the giving of the printing of the tax sales to The Review and Examiner, and your committee recommend that the printing of the tax sales be given to the Peterborough Times Printing Company in the usual course provided they mail to each ratepayer in the townships of Belmont and Methum, Harvey and Burleigh, Anstruther, Galway and Chandos, a copy of the issue of their paper containing such tax sales.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

G. W. FITZGERALD,
Chairman.

A SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

Mr Anderson presented the report of the Special Committee appointed to draft a tariff of fees, as follows:—

The Special Committee appointed to draft a tariff of fees and expenses for nominating and others officers appointed for holding elections of County Councilors beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your Committee recommend that the following tariff be adopted and that all officers appointed to hold County Council elections be paid according to its terms, viz.:—

(a) Fee to nominating officer to include his personal services in performing all duties required of him by law and the cost of advertising the election in newspapers according to law or printing and posting posters according to law, rent for hall and all other expenses necessary in holding each election, $12.

(b) Fee to Clerks of Municipalities for distributing ballot boxes, ballot papers, receiving and making returns to County Clerk, and performing all duties required of them by law, per each ballot box, 75 cents.

(c) Fee to deputy returning officer for taking vote and making return to Clerk and performing all duties required of him by law, including expenses of poll clerk and constable (if any), $4.

(d) Rent of poll room, including screens, heating and light, $2.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. ANDERSON,
Chairman.

ASSESSMENT.

Mr Buck reported for the Committee on Equilization and Assessment as follows:—

The Committee on Equilization and Assessment beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your Committee recommend that all the municipalities comprising the County of Peterborough be assessed at the valuation set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed and that such valuations be the equalized valuation for County purposes for the year 1899.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. J. BUCK,
Chairman.

These reports were adopted as presented.

BY-LAWS.

Mr. Pearce introduced a by-law regulating auctioneers in the county. The by-law requires all auctioneers to have a license. The penalty of working without a license was fixed at not less than $5, nor more than $50.

Mr. Pearce also introduced a by-law appointing Mr. W. H. Casement, of Lakefield, arbitrator, on behalf of the county to ascertain the amount to be paid by the town of Peterborough to the county for expenses of the administration of justice, use of the gaol, erection and repairs of regaitry offices, providing book, etc.

Mr. Pearce introduced a by-law regulating the fees and licenses of hawkers and peddlars in the county. The by-law repealed former by-laws governing peddlars, and fixed fees as follows:—Peddling with one basket, $1; with a push cart, $15; with one-horse rig, $30; with two-horse rig, $50. The fine for the offence under the by-law is not less than $5 and not more than $50. One-half the fine goes to the prosecutor and the other half to the corporation.

The by-laws were duly passed, signed and sealed.

CONSOLIDATION OF THE BY-LAWS.

Mr. Pearce presented the report of the Special Committee appointed to consolidate the by-laws of the county, as follows:—

Your Special Committee to whom was referred the compiling and consolidation of the by-laws of the County since the first consolidation in 1862, beg leave to report the completion of the important trust reposed in your committee. In presenting the result of their labors in the accompanying printed roll, including an index of all the by-laws with a brief indication of the purport of each, and also stating whether consolidated, repealed or obsolete.

In compiling the by-laws we have classified them retaining the original numbers of each. We have also included a complete list of the names of every County Councillor and the municipality represented by each, since the first organization of the council under the Municipal Act, from 1850 down to the present date.

The work has occasioned a very considerable amount of labor on your clerk, Mr. Pearce, who has with his usual painstaking and careful manner been of great service to your committee who recommend that such remuneration as the Council may think wise to make to him for his services to the committee.

E. HAWTHORNE, Warden. J. B. PEARCE, Chairman.

W. H. CASEMAN, E. A. PECK, Committee.

The report was adopted.

The Council then adjourned until 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

The report of Saturday's proceedings was held over.

THE FOREMOST TABLE WATER.

Lauded for its Great Value as a Dietetic and Hygienic Agent.

The Apollinaris natural mineral water is known throughout the world; its name is a household word. The spring from which it is drawn and where it is bottled is near Ahrweiler, in Rhenish Prussia, a few miles west of the Rhine. It takes its name from the Apollinaris church situated on the hill at Remagen, a picturesque structure, which attracts the eye of travellers on the Rhine.

In 1851, on the location of the spring, was a vineyard, but as it did not thrive the owner consulted a celebrated geologist and chemist, who found that the soil was strongly impregnated with carbonic acid gas. This led to the discovery of the spring, which soon attained a fame that has steadily grown, and now its fillings amount to twenty-three millions of bottles annually.

Chemists and scientists of many countries have lauded it for its great value as a dietetic and hygenic agent, so that it has become the foremost table water; but having besides its refreshing and healthful qualities a most agreeable taste, it has become the fashionable water.—N.Y. Tribune, May 21.

Very Hard Indeed.

There are so many things that appear unnecessary, and which for the life of us we can see neither purpose nor end. It may be corns are just one of those thorns in the flesh the why and the wherefore of which we cannot see. Nevertheless they are the kind that are easily removed. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor makes short work of them. Try it and see how nicely it cures them out. Use none other than Putnam's Corn Extractor. Sold by druggists.

Hair Toothpicks.

"Of all the curious articles of commerce that you have ever mentioned in print I have never seen one more strange than a 'line' I regularly send to China, to the Brazils and in very large quantities to Russia."

The speaker was a "foreign merchant," and he was addressing a contributor who has made a specialty of paragraphs dealing with out of the way occupations. "The articles I refer to are toothpicks that are made of walrus whiskers. Vast quantities of the stiff, thick whiskers of the walrus are shipped, from Alaska chiefly, to myself, and to some others in England. Those who send them pull them out one by one with special tweezers, and after the whiskers have been trimmed and stiffened here they are made up into bundles and sent abroad.

"The higher class Chinese seem to use no other kind of toothpick, and the more wealthy of the Russians always use them at their clubs and hotels. I send out some thousands of bundles yearly, and, though to the buyer they are much dearer, as well as more ornamental, they leave plenty of profit to the dealer."—Exchange.

An Old Marriage Bond.

Below we print a marriage bond as used in Georgia many years ago. The copy we have is quite an old looking, faded paper:

Georgia, Jefferson County.—Know all men by these presents that we, Henry Brown and Walter Stone, are held and firmly bound unto the court of ordinary of Jefferson county in the sum of $957.14, to which payment well and truly to be made we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors and administrators, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents, sealed with our seals and dated this 17th day of November, 1820.

The condition of the above obligation is such that, whereas there is a marriage intended to be solemnized between Henry Brown and Susey Wright. Now, if there be no lawful cause to obstruct the same, then this obligation to be void, else to remain in full force and virtue.

The Sheet Anchor.

"That was my sheet anchor"—i. e., my best hope, my last refuge; the sheet anchor of a ship, which, in stress of weather, is the sailors' chief dependence. The word sheet is a corruption of the word shote (thrown out), meaning the anchor "thrown out" in foul weather. The Greeks and Romans said, "My sacred anchor," referring to the sheet anchor, which was always dedicated to some god.

IMPORTANT UTTERANCES.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain Talks on the Transvaal.

Denounces in the Strongest Terms the Attitude and Actions of the Boers, Says the British Do Not Want War, But Will Not Draw Back Now That They Have Put Their Hands to the Sword.

Birmingham, Eng., June 27.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, addressing the Unionists of this city yesterday afternoon, reviewed carefully the Transvaal question.

Deliberate and Emphatic Talk.

After denouncing in the strongest terms the attitude and actions of the Boers, Mr. Chamberlain, with great deliberation and emphasis, added: "The Transvaal's enormous secret service fund has procured it friends and advocates in every country. The way the British subject there is treated is not only a menace to them, but interferes with our prestige among the natives, who now regard the Boers, and not the British, as the paramount power. Besides the breaches of the London Convention, the Transvaal is flagrantly violating the equality that convention was intended to secure. Its misgovernment is a festering sore, poisoning the whole atmosphere of South Africa. The Dutch in Cape Colony and Natal would be in the happiest condition, but so long as the disease of hatred and suspicion prevails in the Transvaal, it is impossible to stop the contagion.

Four Times on the Verge of War.

"Four times since independence was granted we have been on the verge of war with the Transvaal. It is erroneous to say the British Government wants war; but it is equally erroneous to say that the Government will draw back, now that it has put its hand to the plow. We hope the efforts that are now being made will lead to an amicable arrangement, for Great Britain only desires justice; but there comes a time when patience can hardly be distinguished from weakness, and when moral pressure becomes a farce, that cannot be continued without loss of self-respect. I trust that time may never come in this instance; but, if it does, Britons will insist upon finding the means to secure a result essential to the peace of South Africa."

The speech was warmly applauded.

GERMANY WILL NOT GO IN.

A Smashing Blow to the Russian Idea of Disarmament.

The Hague, June 27.—The first committee examined yesterday the Russian proposals relating to military effectives and budgets. Col. Gross von Scharshoff of the German legation declared that Germany could not enter into any engagement not to increase her naval and military effectives.

A Smashing Blow.

London, June 27.—The correspondent of The Daily News at The Hague says: "The German delegates yesterday privately informed their colleagues that they had received instructions to accept the principle of a permanent tribunal of arbitration, as outlined in the Anglo-American plans. This and the speech of Col. Gross von Schwarshoff, plainly intimates that Germany had made up her mind against the Russian idea of disarmament."

NEWS FROM HENLEY.

Good Practice by the Argonauts and a Beat-Out by Goldman.

Henley-on-Thames, June 27. — The Argonauts have engaged Fred. Plaisted, the American oarsman, who comes from Maine, to train them. Ned Hanlan rowed Plaisted on the Toronto Bay some years ago. Yesterday morning the eight occupied their time in sprinting. In the eight's trial they did the distance to Fawley Court in 3 minutes and 44 seconds, and finished the course in 7 minutes and 35 seconds, feeling fresh. The strokes averaged 34 to the minute.

Goldman did half of the course in a trial yesterday morning in 4 minutes and 14 seconds, beating out Fox, one of his competitors in the Diamond Sculls. A head wind was unfavorable to a good practice. In the Diamond Sculls, Ashe of the Thames Rowing Club, Blackstaffe of the Vesta Rowing Club, Fox of Pembroke College, Gaudin of the Thames Rowing Club, Goldman of the Toronto Argonauts, Hammerdi of the Leander Rowing Club, and Howell of the Thames Rowing Club, are entered Return Respecting the Telegraph to Dawson—The Plebiscite Cost Money—11,078 Have Made Claims for Service Medals and Clasps—Mr. Davin Claims That the Liberals Have Not Kept Faith With Western Farmers.

Ottawa, June 27.—A petition was presented to the House yesterday by Mr. Belcourt, asking for leave to present a petition for a private bill to incorporate the Yukon River & Atlin Lake Improvement Company. The petition is signed by James Shelby Williams of Paris, Texas; T. A. Darby of Wilmington, N.C.; D. D. McMillan of Winnipeg and H. A. Bate and W. J. Poupore of Ottawa. The time for receiving petitions for private bills expired more than two months ago.

Telegraph to Dawson.

A return tabled by the Premier contains a copy of Lord Strathcona's cablegram to the Government, announcing the readiness and capability of the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company to construct a telegraph line from Vancouver to Dawson City, through Skagway. It is dated April 22, is addressed to the Hon. A. G. Blair, and reads as follows: "Gedge, chairman of Henley's Telegraph Works Company, desires me to cable you the following: Company ready to construct telegraph from Vancouver through Skagway to Dawson. Terms agreed with construction syndicate. Mailing completion syndicate agreement with Canadian company, contract being draughted here. Henley's can commence work promptly. Their finances ample."

Questions and Answers.

Mr. Fielding informed Mr. Foster that the amount expended to June 23 on account of the prohibition plebiscite was $192,841.01 and that about $1,000 more would cover the whole expense.

Mr. Prior was informed by the Premier that the Government was aware that a number of statutes passed by the Local Legislature of British Columbia contain a clause prohibiting the employment of Chinese and Japanese labor. These statutes were now under the consideration of the Department of Justice and no report on them had yet been made.

Hon. Dr. Borden, in reply to a question put for Mr. Clarke by Mr. Davin, said that 11,078 applications for the Canadian general service medals and clasps have been received, 4,991 of which have been passed upon by the medal claim board for approval. In 158 cases a decision has been reserved by the board pending the receipt of additional particulars. All applications, with the exception of 441 received during the last few days, have been investigated and classified and recorded for consideration by the board. The question of how and when the distribution shall take place has not yet been decided.

The order paper was then run through and 15 unopposed motions for papers carried.

Faith Not Kept With N.W. Farmers.

Mr. Davin moved that, in the opinion of this House, faith has not been kept with the farmers of the west, since duties have not been reduced on agricultural implements and have been increased on the cheaper cottons, and that the ⅓ per cent. preference on goods of English manufacture has, in the case of many staples of which all the people are consumers, been rendered delusive by raising the duty above that levied under the tariff of 1894-5.

In support of his motion Mr. Davin reviewed at considerable length the course of the Government since June 23, 1896, when the Liberal party succeeded to power, contending that the success of the party at the polls was almost entirely attributable to the promises made to the farmers of the Northwest that agricultural and other implements used by them should be put on the free list. He said that the Premier had gone from one end of the Northwest to the other declaring that every vestige of protection should be swept away and had then come back to Ottawa after his election and allowed his Finance Minister to so tinker the tariff that it was more unjust

50,000 MEN QUIT.

Failure of Tin Plate Workers' Negotiations With the Companies.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 27.—All the tin plate works in the country will probably be closed down at midnight on Friday as a result of the failure to settle the wage scale at the conference in Chicago. Fully 50,000 persons will be made idle by the shut down. The conference, which opened in Chicago on Tuesday morning, closed Saturday evening without arriving at an agreement. The Workers' wage committee, acting under instructions received from the annual conference held in Detroit last month, made a demand for an advance of 20 per cent. The present wage scale expires on June 30, and members of the amalgamated association are not permitted to work after that date unless the new scale is signed.

AN OLD FIRM NIPPED.

Customs Officer Seizes a Wholesale Liquor Store in Halifax.

Halifax, N. S., June 27.—Customs Officer Jones yesterday seized the whole sale liquor establishment of A. McDougall & Co., one of the oldest in the city, on the charge of violating the customs laws. On visiting the bonded warehouse in McDougall's building he found that puncheons of liquor had been tampered with, the fire water being removed and colored water substituted. The seizure followed and officers were placed in charge.

All Wrong, of Course.

Montreal, June 27.—The president of the Canadian Pacific Railway yesterday morning gave an emphatic denial to the report that the Canadian Pacific and Great Northern Railways had arrived at an agreement whereby a joint line will be laid to connect the famous Boundary Creek mining camp of British Columbia with the equally famous Washington camp. Mr. Shaughnessy added that he knew absolutely nothing concerning the reported agreement.

T. H. & B. B. Smash.

Hamilton, June 27.—About 7 o'clock yesterday morning a freight train on the T., H. & B. Railway broke in two on the heavy grade west of Dundas. The train was ascending at the time, and the rear half came back at a terrible rate. These cars dashed into a work train and made a bad wreck. The men on the work train saw the runaway cars coming and jumped. No person was hurt.

COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

Countess Aberdeen's Address at the International Convention in London.

London, June 27.—The International Council of Women opened yesterday in the convocation hall of the church house, instead of the large hall of Westminster Town Hall, which was found to be too small to accommodate the delegates.

The Countess of Aberdeen, president of the Council, in her address, after cordial words of welcome, sketched the duties of the Council. She said international arbitration should ever be placed foremost in its program, advocated the establishment of an international bureau of information regarding all that affects women, and warned women against arrogating to themselves alone the duties of curing all evils, saying: "It may be well to have unions of mothers, but do the fathers count so little in the home that their counsel is not needed? The redemption of the race can only be compassed by men and women joining hands and making common cause in every department of life."

In conclusion, the Countess deprecated the idea usually formed about women's congresses, that they were bent upon devising plans whereby women might be emancipated from home duties, saying: "This congress holds fast to the belief that woman's first mission must be her home."

GAVE HIS LIFE FOR HER.

Heroic Rescue of a Girl From a Railway Trestle Bridge.

Chicago, June 27.—While walking on the tracks of the Chicago Terminal Railroad, John Kotowsky was fatally injured in a remarkable effort to save the life of Agnes Cross. The two were crossing a trestle, the girl a few steps in front, when a switch engine rounded a curve at high speed. Kotowsky sprang forward, and, grasping the girl about the waist, swung himself on one of the iron braces, but the pilot of the locomotive struck him, and with the girl he was hurled 30 feet below. Kotowsky struck the ground first, breaking the girl's fall, but fracturing his skull. The girl escaped with slight injuries.

The Shamrock Launched.

London, June 27.—Sir Thomas Lipton's cup challenger Shamrock was successfully launched yesterday. The ceremony occurred at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Millwall.

Lady Russell christened the yacht with the customary bottle of champagne, saying: "I christen you Shamrock. God bless you. Good luck to you. May you bring back the cup."

Three cheers were then given, and on a signal from Lady Russell the boat and the cradle glided safely into the water.

Satisfied With Columbia.

Bristol, June 27.—After a conference among the owners of the new cup defender Columbia, Mr. C. Oliver Iselin, the managing owner, notified the Herreshoff Company yesterday afternoon that the yacht would be accepted without a further builders' trial.

Mail From Far and Near.

Toronto, June 27.—There are 500 delegates in the city to the International Supreme Lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars, which goes into convention this morning in the Temple Building. The delegates are from all over the world—Norway, Sweden, Denmark, India, England, Ireland and Scotland. Some of the visitors do not speak the English language, and are accompanied by interpreters.

Brave Men Fall.

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents, at any Drug Store. Every bottle guaranteed.

A Sense of Security.

"Eudora," said Mr. Cumrox, "I have been several times annoyed by the way you see fit to worry about my grammar."

"It's awful," said his wife. "You use commas where they don't belong, and you forget all about your periods. You'll lose all your friends."

"Eudora, let me remind you that I have money enough to float any scheme I take a fancy to. A man may be loose on his punctuation, but when he enjoys my facilities for a capitalization he is bound to have friends that he couldn't lose if he tried."—Chicago Post.

DON'T TEAR DOWN—BUILD UP.

The old-fashioned theory of tearing down disease was entirely changed by the advent of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, which cures by creating new rich blood and nerve tissue. Through the medium of the circulation and the nervous system they strengthen and invigorate every organ in the human body.

No Good in Either.

In a rural justice court a darky, charged with hog stealing, was asked if he had anything to say.

"Only dis, suh," he replied, "Gimme justice!"

"Well," said the judge, "justice will send you up for three years."

"Well, suh, dat being do case, des gimme mercy."

"Mercy," said the judge, "will send you up for two years and six months."

"Dey ain't wuth a durn—neither one ob 'um—justice or mercy!" he muttered as he was led away.—Atlanta Constitution.

Just as Good as She.

"John," said Mrs. Parvenu wearily, but with decision, "I must have a consultation of physicians."

"But, Maria," he protested, "you have nothing but a cold in the head."

"Can't help it," she answered. "When Mrs. Brown was sick last winter, she had a consultation of physicians, and I guess we can afford anything that the Browns can."—Chicago Post.

Mr. Brown's Opinion of Celery Compound

IT RESTORED HIM TO NEW HEALTH WHEN ALL OTHER MEDICINES FAILED.

It is everywhere admitted that the people who will testify to the health-giving and restoring virtues of Paine's Celery Compound are men and women who are respected and well known in the towns and cities where they reside.

The high standing of Paine's Celery Compound with the most prominent medical men, and its world wide popularity, is due to the fact that the great medicine accomplishes just what it promises. It saves life after all other medicines fail; it cures when doctors pronounce the patient incurable.

Mr. John H. Brown, Truro, N. S., writes as follows:—

"I am truly thankful for the good results I have obtained from the use of your Paine's Celery Compound. For a long time I have been a sufferer from general debility and indigestion and have made use of many medicines, but none have given me the grand results, as far as improved health is concerned, as has your wonderful Paine's Celery Compound. It has done wonders for me, and though I am 65 years old I have been able to do light work for the past six months, and have not lost a day. I give your medicine all the credit for my restoration."

RICHARDSON'S BILL KILLED.

to the farmers of the Northwest than the old National Policy.

The Premier Does Not Explain.

The Premier said the resolution should have been introduced when the budget speech was delivered and announcement made that there would be no tariff changes.

The debate was continued by Messrs. McMullen, Davies and Davin until 6 o'clock.

After recess the bill respecting the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company was read a third time and passed.

Richardson's Bill.

The House then went into committee on Mr. Richardson's bill "respecting the attachment of salaries of public officials and employes of the Government."

Mr. Bell (Pictou) agreed to support the bill after Mr. Richardson had consented that the bill should only apply to debts incurred after the passage of the bill.

Sir Louis Davies objected to the section defining "salaries" to include fees, emoluments, moneys, allowances, etc., claiming that it complicated the bill. He further said he had opposed the bill last year, and should oppose it again. There was no question about the power of Parliament to declare that the salaries of civil servants should be liable to seizure, but the mode of collection should be left to the provinces.

After some discussion, Mr. Richardson proposed an amendment to the effect that only salaries and wages could be seized, which was agreed to, but the discussion continued until 11 o'clock, when Sir Louis Davies moved that the committee rise and report progress.

Mr. Richardson opposed this, as he said it would virtually kill the bill, but the motion was carried on a count of 26 for to 17 against, and the committee rose and reported progress and the House adjourned at 11.15.

Dry Dock Subsidies.

Mr. Fielding gives notice of a resolution that it is expedient to amend the Dock Subsidy Act of 1882 by providing that if any approved incorporated company enters into agreement to construct and equip a dry-dock, in such places and in such manner as Government approve, the Governor-in-Council may authorize payment of two per cent. per annum for 20 years on cost of work, such subsidy not to exceed $90,000 a year; also any such company entering into agreement to enlarge and extend any existing dock may be paid by Government two per cent. for 20 years on outlay, provided, however, that such subsidy shall not exceed $10,000 a year.

THE SENATE.

In the Senate yesterday afternoon there was a long discussion by Senator Ferguson and others on those sections of the Criminal Code which are introduced for the purpose of forcing Mr. Burland of the British American Bank Note Company to give up certain dies, plates, etc., used by him while he was contractor for printing Dominion notes, postage stamps, etc., and which he now claims are his property, but which the Postmaster-General holds are the property of the Government. He moved that the following be added:

Provided, however, that in the case of any person who has been or is a contractor with the said Government for the engraving and printing of such Dominion notes and stamps, and who has in his possession any such plate, roll or die, for which he claims to be paid by the Government under his contract, the demand of the Minister of Finance shall only be made after payment of the contractor's claim, or, in case the claim is disputed, after reference of the claim to the Exchequer Court of Canada.

Hon. David Mills said he would rather withdraw the clause than accept the amendment.

After recess Mr. Mills carried out his threat and withdrew the Burland clause.

The other clauses of the Criminal Code Amendment bill were then agreed to, and the Senate adjourned at 11 o'clock.

The British Guiana Deputation.

Ottawa, June 27.—The British Guiana deputation to the United States—Sir Cavendish Boyle and Mr. J. H. De Jongo—who arrived here on Sunday, were entertained by the Premier at luncheon yesterday in the Rideau Club. The other guests present were: Sir Charles Tupper, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. George E. Foster, Hon. A. G. Blair, Hon. R. R. Dobell, Mr. A. McNeill, M.P., Mr. James Sutherland, M.P., and Captain H. A. Bate.

The commissioners had an interview yesterday morning with Mr. Fielding, but Sir Cavendish Boyle said that any matters talked over at present with respect to improved trade relations between Canada and British Guiana must, of course, be confidential, and he could, therefore, not make any statement for publication.

WEST ELGIN AGAIN VACANT.

Election of Mr. Macnish Voided With Costs Against the Sheriff.

St. Thomas, June 27.—The election trial against the return of Donald Macnish as representative of West Elgin in the Ontario Legislature commenced in the Duncombe Opera House at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Justice Osler and Justice R. Meredith presided. The petitioner for the Conservatives is J. G. Nunn. There are 253 paragraphs in the petition, representing about the same number of charges. The seat is claimed for Finlay G. MacDiarmid.

Election Voided.

The first charge proceeded with was the appointment of deputy returning officers. It was shown that in several divisions the right persons did not act, and Justice Osler voided the election, with costs on the returning officer, Sheriff Brown. Justice Meredith concurred in the judgment. Both of the judges said gross irregularities had taken place and there was no excuse for the returning officer's conduct. The trial only lasted one hour and twenty minutes.

Samuel Kernohan's Story Was First Made Known.

He is Still of the Same Mind—Living at His Old Home in Gelert, Ont.—His Recent Letter.

Toronto, June 26.—Last week the Canadian papers printed a despatch, giving a short account of a noted scrapbook which a Toronto man had compiled. In it, in the shape of newspaper clippings are thousands of the published cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills over diseases of the kidneys, like Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Heart Failure, Female Complaints, Nervous Troubles, and Disorders of the Bladder and Urinary Organs. The owner of the book has received a large number of replies to the enquiries he sent out to determine whether cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills were lasting or not. Samuel Kernohan, Gelert, Ont., is one of these.

In 1895, Mr. Kernohan's case was published. He had been sick since the December of 1893. He was attended by five doctors, three of them pronounced his case Floating Kidneys, two of them Spinal Disease. All five agreed that it was incurable. When his money was nearly gone, as a last hope Mr. Kernohan tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes put him on his feet, and a continued treatment cured him entirely. Here is his recent letter:—

Gelert P.O., Ont., May 27th, 1899.

Dear Sir,—In answer to your request I now write. I am much pleased to be able to say that I have been as sound as ever I was till about two weeks ago, since when I have been a little under the weather, but not with the old complaint. I got another letter from London, Canada, from a woman to ask if the cure as was advertised, and I answered it, as I do this one. I have never ceased to thank Dodd's Kidney Pills for my cure. I saw my old doctor the other day and he said my case was something wonderful.

Yours truly,
SAMUEL KERNOHAN.

LINDSAY KINGSTON

FIRST GAME IN JUNIOR SERIES

HASTINGS WINS FROM THE JUNIORS BY 5 GOALS TO 2.

A Match Evenly Contested and Free From Roughness or Disagreeable Features—Strength, Weight and Condition of the Visiting Team Won the Match.

A closely contested lacrosse match took place at the P.A.A.A. grounds yesterday afternoon, when the Peterborough juniors and the Hastings club met in the first match in the junior series of the Canadian Lacrosse Association for this district. The Hastings team made its first appearance in town this year on May 24th, when they were beaten by the seniors in an exhibition game by 5 goals to 2. They were recognized at the time as the likely aspirants for the junior championship and sure winners in their matches with the local juniors, and yesterday they did the trick by 5 goals to 2. The match was evenly contested but the form of the teams or the style of play was not up to much and, while able to put the juniors out of the business, the Hastings team did not put up as good a game as they played here on the Queen's birthday holiday, and will need to improve considerably if they would stay for long in the C.L.A. series. It was as much the home team's weakness as their own strength that won the game for them.

Hastings is a country town and the people evidently take more stock in the good old fashioned horse than they do in these railroad cars, for the team arrived in town in an omnibus drawn by a pair of tired looking grays. The match did not start until four o'clock and the crowd present was not large. Mr. Lionel King refereed. Both teams went after the rubber with energy, Hastings having muscle, wind and vim to spare. They were all in fine condition and lasted the game out easily. The Peterborough men played well, especially during the first half of the game, and the score of 5 to 2 does not give a correct idea of the play as it appeared to the spectators. The home players of the local juniors put up fully as good a game as those of the other team, but they found the Hastings defence a hard nut to crack. The goal minder and point men performed prodigies, marvels and wonders all through the game and were voted by all to be first class players. Their home also played a fair game, but in passing the ball they tobied it instead of shooting it clear and sharp. For the juniors Mein, McWilliams and Dillon on the defence played good ball, and at the other end of the lawn Whitcroft and Glover did well.

The first goal was taken by Hastings after 5 minutes of interesting play. The next came to Peterborough. Hastings played up sharp and fast and sent the next into the net in 2 minutes. The fourth game was long and was made longer by the ball passing over the fence a couple of times, and by a couple of slight accidents. Finally the home field of the juniors got going in good style and after a piece of neat combination Whitcroft scored and tied things. The time was 25 minutes. Hastings got the lead again in 1-2 a minute. The next game was the longest of the match, occupying 33 minutes, and Hastings took it, making the score 4-2. They also gobbled up one more before the close but had to work hard for them all.

The summary is:—

1.—Hastings, 15 minutes.
2.—Peterborough juniors, 17 minutes.
3.—Hastings, 2 minutes.
4.—Peterborough juniors, 25 minutes.
5.—Hastings, 1-2 minute.
6.—Hastings, 33 minutes.
7.—Hastings, 2 minutes.

NOTES.

Mr. Lionel King made a very satisfactory referee.

There were no disputed goals.

Mr. Tom O'Reilly, the Hastings field captain, kept up a veritable war dance among his men and to him the victory was largely due. At any rate he claimed it and took it away in his valise. He says his team always wins in the the full of the moon.

A number of the Hastings visitors wore headlights with mottoes "Go to Hastings on July 1st." The juniors play the return match on that day.

Mr. McNicoll, one of the visiting players, received a couple of bad cuts on the head accidentally and was laid out for a few minutes.

One of the Hastings men that came up had no certificate and was not allowed to get into the game.

The Hastings team and supporters stayed at the National. The greys were brought around to the front door about 8.15 and they climbed in for their drive home after giving three cheers for Mr. White, the manager.

The Hastings team was composed of Welsh, Morrison, Scriver, Clapper, Hill, Scriver, McNicoll, Dodd, Randall, Dodd, Lynch, and Capt. Tom O'Reilly.

The Peterborough team was: — T. Dineen, McWilliams, George Mein, E. Dillon, John Comstock, Terrot, Glover, Fred McGrath, H. Overend, F. Whitcroft, H. Mowry, A. McClellan and H. Hamilton; field captain, Alf. Terrill.

CIRCUS MEN HELD.

Their Escapades at the Oxford Hotel Get Them Into Trouble.

Late on Saturday night a large number of the employees of the Forepaugh & Sells Bros.' circus visited the Oxford hotel and put in a good time. They got beyond control however and pocketed a number of things, among them a pet white rat, a canary bird and a lot of knives and forks. Mr. Bowman wired of his loss to Toronto in an effort to recover the property.

The World says: Two circus employes are also under arrest on the broad charge of vagrancy, and they will be held until the local police communicate with authorities at Peterborough. The prisoners registered at police headquarters as Edward Sullivan, Holyoke, Mass., and Frank Johnston, Woburn, Mass. The manager of the circus received word yesterday that these two men had been concerned on Saturday night at Peterborough in the theft of a tame rat and a couple of birds from an hotel. Whether the prisoners intended to add the pets to the circus menagerie is now known, but the manager, on receiving the news, sent for the men, and discharged them. After receiving their pay they were taken in charge by Precinct Detective Forrect.

THOUGH DEAD THEY YET LIVE

BEAUTIFUL DECORATION CEREMONY BY THE ODDFELLOWS.

An Immense Crowd Gather at the Cemetery to Witness the Ceremony—The Necropolis was Bright and Fragrant with Flowers as all the Graves Had Been Beautified by Loving Hands.

This afternoon the Oddfellow's annual memorial ceremony of decorating the graves of the deceased brothers who sleep beneath the green sward of the Little Lake cemetery was observed. The weather was most propitious, and the half holiday which had been proclaimed was generally observed. Indeed, the decoration ceremony may also be said to have been general, for Peterborough's beautiful necropolis was bright and fragrant with flowers, all who had friends interred there making a special decoration of the graves. As a result the cemetery wore a beautiful garb, and when the Oddfellows had completed their impressive labor of love the city of the dead was indeed a place of beauty.

The Oddfellows in large numbers assembled in Central park about 2.30 o'clock, and headed by the 57th Battalion band marched in procession to the cemetery, where an immense crowd of citizens had assembled to witness the ceremonies of the afternoon. Arrived at the cemetery, where a canopied platform had been erected for the occasion, the brethren formed in a circle, with Bros. M. W. Matchett, N.G. of Peterborough Lodge, and F. J. Might, N.G. of Otonabee, and Bro. Rev. J. G. Potter, who officiated as chaplain, in the centre. After a prayer by the chaplain and a hymn had been sung by the brethren, the Oddfellows divided into four sections and the ceremony of decorating the graves was proceeded with, the floral tributes being deposited on the graves after a suitable verse had been recited.

The graves that were decorated were those of the following deceased brethern:—

Bro. Judge J. B. Hall, ex-M.P., 1st N. G., Otonabee Lodge.

Bro. Sheriff W. S. Conger, ex-M.P., 2nd N.G., Otonabee Lodge.

Bro. Chas. Perry, ex-M.P., 1st V.G., Otonabee Lodge.

Bro. Col. McDonald, Otonabee Lodge.

JUNE WEDDINGS.

The Pretty Wedding of Two of Norwood's Young People.

"Maple Hall," the residence of Mrs E M Reynolds, Norwood, shone with brilliancy on Wednesday, June 21st, at 11.15, the event being the marriage of her youngest daughter, Winifred Maude, to Mr Alexander Fraser. The ceremony was performed by the Rev John McCamus, under a bowery of point lace and orange blossoms. Mendelsshon's "Wedding March" was played by Mrs D A Fraser. The bride was given away by her mother and looked charming in a gown of ivory silk with all-over chiffon and the conventional veil caught on the hair with a cluster of orange blossoms, which well became the sweet face beneath. The bridesmaid, Miss Ethel Fraser, sister of the groom, was becomingly gowned in figured organdie trimmed with white satin and valenciennes lace. The groom was assisted by Mr W Spencer, of Colborne.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the spacious dining room where a rich dejeuner was served, the bride's table being decorated with carnations and roses. The guests were served by six girls prettily clad in white.

The presents were numerous and costly, being sent from McLouth, Kansas; Groton, South Dakota; Chicago, Ill; Sarnia, Peterborough, Belleville, Bracebridge and numerous other places.

Mr and Mrs Fraser took the 7.45 train from Hastings amid showers of rice and flowers, to points on Muskoka Lake.

The bride's going-away dress was green ladies' cloth, with silk velvet jacket and hat to match.

MITCHELL—TAYLOR.

Mr Wm Taylor's residence was the scene of a very pretty wedding this afternoon when his second daughter, Miss Rose A, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr Sidney H Mitchell. The house was tastefully decorated with bride's blossoms and a greenery of palms and ferns. Only the intimate friends of the contracting parties were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev D O Crossley.

The bride was attired in cream henriette, trimmed with silk insertion, chiffon and ribbon. The bridesmaid, Miss Maggie Cookson, was also prettily gowned in white organdie trimmed with Valenciennes lace. They carried bouquets of cream and pink roses respectively. Miss Lillie Stocker, neice of the bride, was maid of honor. The groom was ably assisted by Mr W F Skitch.

After the ceremony and the usual congratulations the party sat down to a sumptuous wedding breakfast, after which the happy couple took the 4.42 C P R express for a two weeks' tour. Many beautiful and useful presents were received, testifying to the esteem in which the young people are held. Among them was a dinner set from the bride's father and an elegant parlor lamp from the groomsman.

The Review extends congratulations and wishes for a happy and prosperous future.

Exciting Times.

These be great days. Holidays, excursions and events of thrilling interest tread upon one another's heels. Following the circus of Saturday the town was last night thrown into a fit of ecstasy when Chief Rossel and Mr J W Butcher, of Ten-cent Store fame, gave a grand united and spectacular exhibition of daring trick bicycle riding. It took place between eight and nine o'clock and their course on Water and George-sts. to the Nicholls park, where the grand finale was given, was watched with amazed and breathless interest by many spectators, wild with admiration of the beautiful, swan-like ease and grace of the Chief and his running mate. The representative of the law rode with an undulating movement, chucking gently up and down, and smiled in a superior manner when his companion tried to cut the figure eight and letter S, and steer north by south at the same time. It may be mentioned that the Chief has not yet received the proper pedals for his bike. Owing to expected changes in the steel market the Brantford firm did not like to supply such a big order on such short notice but this morning the Chief was reassured on receiving a letter stating "have ordered your special pedals 5½ inches wide from the factory and will ship them to you in a few days."

Brevities.

—Matters are quiet at the local police courts.

—Summer traffic on the railroads is brisk and lively.

—The police acknowledge the gift of a flowering geranium from the W.C. T. U.

—Large shipments of fruit are being received in town daily. The general freight business is also heavy.

—The Review has to thank the ladies of the W.C.T.U. for their annual gift of a flowering plant to brighten the sanctum.

—The Canadian Bank of Commerce has issued a neat and accurate pocket map of British Columbia, the Yukon district and Alaska, showing the routes to the gold fields.

—The annual excursion and picnic of the Park-st. Baptist Sunday school will be held on Dominion Day to Jubilee Point per steamer City of Peterborough. Last year they took one of the smaller boats and scow, but this year they are branching out.

—Mr. Andrew Coulter, of Silver Lake, Galway, about twelve miles north of Bobcaygeon, has uncovered a quarry of engravers' lithographic stone that has been pronounced by experts as very choice.

—Lindsay Post:—Lindsay holds her own in every kind of sport. At Peterborough on Saturday one of our well-known western sports is said to have been the only man who could throw the big Kangaroo of the Forepaugh' & Sells Bros.' circus, thereby winning the $10.

—Entymologists claim to have discovered a new bug in the Province of Ontario whose presence is not unwelcomed because its chief food is the potato bug. It is a reddish bug of rather large size, and its appetite for the potato vine destroyer is marvellous. It has shown itself in the west, and when it comes the potato bug goes. Up to date it has not developed any bad habits.

—The 57th battalion band is doing lots of business. They play at the Oddfellows' demonstration this afternoon, at St. Luke's garden party to-night, they serenade the Army and Navy Vets. to-morrow night, at St. Joseph's hospital picnic on Saturday and at the 57th Battalion church parade on Sunday. Mr. Gliddon has ordered some new music which is expected to be received with pleasure.

Hi Robinson's Thrift.

While we were eating breakfast the farmer said: "That remark o' yourn yisteddy about sellin Elmiry the dishes an havin the coffee fer nothin 'minds me o' the way Hi Robinson got somethin fer nothin out o' the storekeeper at the village. You 'member Hi, don't you? He's kinder slow spoken, 'n' some folks calls him foolish. One day I was settin in the store a spell, with a lot more, an in comes Hi. He goes up to Lish, who keeps the store, an takes an egg out o' his pocket an says, 'How'll you swap?' 'Oh, I d'n' kno's I want to swap fer one egg,' says Lish; 'what do you want fer it?' 'A darnin needle.' 'Well, I'll swap with you,' says Lish an took the egg an giv' him the darnin needle.

"Hi stood round awhile, an then he says, drawlin'like, 'Say, ain't you goin to treat?' 'Treat? On one darnin needle?' says Lish. 'Not much.' 'Feller 'cross the way will,' says Hi. Lish grinned. 'All right,' says he, jest to humor him; 'what'll you have?' 'Cider 'n' egg,'' says Hi. That tickled the rest o' us, but Lish brought the cider an broke the egg into it—Hi's own egg—an Hi see it was a double yelker. Hi took up the glass an looked at the egg some time. Then he says, says he, 'Say, hadn't you better gimme 'nother darnin needle?' "—Forest and Stream.

He Laughed.

A literary man who was compelled by circumstances to use his family sitting room as a study missed his penholder one evening while absorbed in writing a story

He looked over his desk, through the pigeonholes and in the drawers, but it was nowhere in sight. It was not on the floor. He felt behind his ear. It was not there.

"This is what comes," he said impatiently, "of trying to work where there is a houseful of children. Which one of you has taken my pen?"

The children looked at each other and laughed. He became irritated.

"I don't want any foolishness!" he exclaimed. "Where's that pen? Who has taken it?"

After a moment's pause one of the children said slowly:

"If you'll laugh, papa, you will find it."

He stared at her in astonishment. Then, as her meaning slowly broke in upon him, he joined in the laugh, and the penholder fell out of his mouth, where it had been all the time.

How many of the little difficulties of this life one can extricate oneself from by a laugh!—Youth's Companion.

Snakes' Sense of Smell.

Snakes have the sense of smell. It is difficult to obtain food for the rattlesnakes and copperheads out at the zoological park. The keeper has been trying them on the house rats and mice he has caught about the building. He would leave them in the snake cage overnight and through the day. They would run over the snakes with impunity. The snakes would pay no attention to them, but when he happened to secure some field mice and put them in the cage the snakes ate them at once. He put in several rats and mice of the ordinary house variety that were living out of doors under the sidewalk, and these were seized by the snakes almost as readily as the wild species.

The keeper then conceived the idea of making an earth box to keep the rats in for awhile before feeding, and he found that if they were put in there for 12 hours or so before they were given to the snakes they would be eaten. The only apparent explanation is that the smell of the earth is agreeable to the snakes, and that the smell which the animals acquire about buildings is objectionable.

The Albany Capitol Guide.

One of the first things done by a stranger visiting Albany, says the Philadelphia Call, is to pay 25 cents and put himself at the mercy of a capitol guide. The guide makes a profound and obsequious bow, like a prestidigitator about to charm an audience, and proceeds to lift the veil which hides the mysteries of the great building.

On a recent occasion the guide led the stranger regretfully past "McGinty's" empty frame and proceeded to identify the heads of notables that decorate the stairway. He did fairly well until the stranger pointed out Shakespeare and Homer and asked who they were.

"Them," replied the guide, undaunted, "are the heads of two politicians whose names I disremember."

Then the Girls Giggled.

It occurred at a wedding in a Kansas City church. The minister was young and nervous and instead of saying, "Who gives this woman?" etc., he asked gravely, "Who gives this man to this woman?"

If the bride had not been four inches taller and many pounds heavier than the groom, the slip would have attracted less attention. As it was, the other girls in the church were not to be blamed for tittering.

Her Aristocracy.

"Every woman is an aristocrat at heart," said the youngest boarder.

"Yes," said the cheerful idiot; "she hates to think of herself as classed with the plain people."—Indianapolis Journal.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

He recovers himself and sits up, a trifle bruised, but not otherwise injured through his rough treatment.

This is a nice predicament, to be shut up in a house in Valetta, while, perhaps, Philander Sharpe returns to the hotel with a story of his succumbing to the wiles of a beautiful enchantress.

The steamer will sail without him, and the dupe must be to pay generally.

John begins, like a man, to wonder if he can do anything for himself; that spirit so distinctive will not allow him to sit down and repine.

Surrounded by gloom, how will he find out the nature of his prison?

He endeavors to penetrate the darkness—a trace of light finds an entrance under the door and relieves the sombre blank. It does more, for all at once John's eyes discover something that rivets his attention.

There are two of them—eyes that gleam in the darkness like those of a great cat.

A thrill sweeps over the doctor; can it be possible they have shut him up in here with some great fierce animal that will tear him limb from limb? Is this Pauline Potter's dramatic revenge?

Who can blame him for a sudden quaking in the region of his heart—such a fate is too terrible to calmly contemplate; but this qualm is only momentary, and then Doctor Chicago is himself again, brave and self-reliant.

CHAPTER VIII.

He begins to reason, to strain his mind in search of all the things he ever heard with relation to a meeting between unarmed men and wild beasts.

The power of the human eye has been held up as an example, and surely here is a chance to try it—the stake, his life.

By this time he becomes conscious of a certain fact that renders him uneasy; the yellow orbs do not seem so far away as before, and it is evident that they approach gradually nearer.

He can even imagine the great body of the animal, perhaps a tiger from African shores, creeping on its belly, inch by inch shortening the distance between itself and its prey.

John cannot retreat—already he is in a corner, with the wall behind, so that all he can do is to await developments.

Nearer still, until scarcely five feet separate him from the glowing orbs, he can even hear the animal's stentorian breathing.

John prepares for a terrible struggle; he holds his hands out so as to clutch the great beast by the throat as he advances, and his muscles are strained in order to sustain the shock.

Just when he expects to hear the roar of a hunger-stricken beast, he is astonished beyond measure at what occurs.

"Scat! you rascal!" exclaims a voice, and there is heard a great threshing sound, as though some one endeavors to intimidate by the swinging of arms as well as by sound.

"What! is that you, Professor Sharpe?" demands the doctor, amazed, delighted, not because he has a companion in misfortune, but on account of the dissipation of his fears respecting an assault.

In another minute the two are embracing; there is nothing like danger to bring men together and make them like brothers.

There is strength in union, and both of them feel better since the meeting.

Of course their thoughts are wholly bent on escape, and the talk is of this. Sharpe has not been so thoroughly searched as his companion, and soon produces a few matches, with which they proceed to examine their dungeon.

It is a gloomy prospect.

The walls are heavy and of stone; there is no opening beyond a mere slit in the corner, through which comes wafts of the sweet air without.

As to the door, it would withstand the assault of giants.

Hopeless indeed does it all appear and yet little do we poor mortals know what the next minute may bring forth.

While they are seated there, seeking to cheer up each other, it is John's keen ears that detect the presence of some one at the door.

This is not a new event that may be pregnant with hope—on the contrary, it is possible the next downward step in the line of Pauline Potter's revenge.

When the key turns in the lock, both men are on their feet ready to meet whatever may be in store for them.

The door swings open.

Instead of a man, they see a woman of Malta. Upon her arm hangs a lantern. She shades her eyes from its glare and looks upon the prisoners.

To say Doctor Chicago is surprised would be putting it feebly; he is amazed at the sight of a woman jailer.

Now she fastens her eyes on his face, he can almost feel her gaze. She advances a step or two.

"Chicago?" she says, inquiringly.

John hardly knows what she means.

"Answer her," says Sharpe, quickly; "she wants to know if you are from Chicago.

"Yes," returns Craig, nodding.

"Name?"

"John Craig, M.D."

"It is good. Come."

He is thrilled with a new hope. Can this mean escape? or does the clever Pauline play a new game with them?

"Shall we go, Sharpe?" he asks, in a whisper.

"Go—well, I reckon we'd be fools to let such a chance as this slip," returns the little man, instantly.

So they proceed to follow their strange guide, out of the dungeon door and along the narrow passage after her.

Again John suspects, and bends his head close to that of his comrade.

"Professor."

"Well, I'm wide awake. What is it you want?" returns the other.

"Do you really mean to trust her?"

"She seems friendly enough. We are out of that abominable place—that I'd as soon be shut up in the Calcutta Black Hole as there.

"But, Pauline——"

"Well, what of her?"

"She is a wonderfully shrewd girl, and this may be only one of her tricks."

"I don't believe it; she had us safe enough before. Besides, John, my dear boy, I seem to have discovered something that has not yet made itself apparent to you."

"Then tell me."

"You noticed how she stared at you and asked your name; why, it didn't matter if a dozen Philander Sharpes were near by."

"Yes, but get down to facts."

"She is repaying her debt."

"To me—she owes me nothing, man."

"You mistake. As you walk, doctor, don't you feel your left arm twinge some?"

"Hang it, yes; but what's that got to do with this Maltese woman with the lantern?"

"Softly—speak in whispers. If you don't want to arouse the house. See she turns and raises her forefinger warningly. Do you mean to say you don't remember her, John?"

"Her face is familiar, but——"

He hesitates, and faces the professor

"I see, you've got it. You saved her child from the death fangs of the mad dog, and a kind Heaven has placed her in a position to return the favor, which she would do, if the most terrible fate hung over her head."

"It seems incredible," muttered the doctor.

Nevertheless it is true; the one chance in ten thousand sometimes comes to pass.

Already has the afternoon's adventure borne fruit in more ways than one; first, it restored him to his former place in the esteem of Lady Ruth, which his refusal to do her foolish errand had lost him, and now it works greater wonders, snatching him from the baleful powers of the actress who, unable to rule, would ruin.

Truly he has no reason to regret that heart affection, that love for humanity which sent him out to snatch the dusky child of Malta from the fangs of the beast.

Now they have reached a door that is heavily barred, proving that their course has been different from the one by means of which they gained the dungeon.

The woman lays down her lantern and takes away the bars. Then she places her hand on John's arm.

"You saved my child, Chicago; I save you."

She smiles, this dusky daughter of Malta, as if greatly pleased at being able to frame her thoughts in English—smiles and nods at the young doctor.

"But you—she may punish you," he says, and she understands, shaking her head.

"She dare not; I am of Malta; also, I shall see her, this proud mistress, no more," which doubtless means that she intends taking French leave as soon as the Americans have gone.

John takes her hand and presses it to his lips; a dusky hand it is, but no cavalier of old ever kissed the slender member of a lady love with more reverence than he shows.

"Go, it is danger to stay," she says, with something of a look of alarm on her face, as from the interior of the dwelling comes some sort of clamor, which may after all only turn out to be the barking of a dog confined in the court where the fountain plays, but which, at any rate, arouses her fears.

They are only too glad to do so; after being confined in that murky dungeon, the outside air seems peculiarly sweet.

It must be very late, and in this quarter, at least, the noise of the earlier night have passed away.

The only sounds that come plainly to their ears are the booming of the heavy tide on the rocks, and the sweep of the night wind through the cypress trees.

Children Cry for CASTORIA.

His Great Sorrow.

"Hard luck!" groaned the fashionably dressed young man on the hotel divan, shifting his feet to the rungs of the chair opposite. "Hard luck—that's my name."

The young fellow at his side, in like attire, kept sympathetic silence.

"Yes, if it hadn't been for my tough luck, I'd have all sorts of money," he went on, pulling his hat down over his eyes and sending a puff of cigarette smoke up against its brim. "I was dead solid with a pretty little girl—cashier in one of the big hotels. She wanted to reform me, make a man out of me, she said. Twice I came in to see her when I wasn't steady on my feet, and she told me that if she ever learned of me getting too much again it would be all day between us. Well, one night I dropped into the hotel when I couldn't tell the floor from the ceiling. She hasn't spoken to me since."

"Can't see anything so bad about that," commented the friend. "There are lots of others."

"Yes, but"—the young man was shaking his head and his voice was sorrowful—"but it was just the next week that an old uncle died and she came in for a cool $60,000."

Again the young fellow at his side kept sympathetic silence.—Chicago Journal.

Poison in the Blood of the Eel.

It has been known for years that the blood of eels contains a highly poisonous principle. A dog inoculated with a dozen drops of eel's blood dies in ten minutes. This discovery was made about ten years ago by two Italian brothers name Mosso. The poison is readily destroyed by heat and by mere lapse of time, wherein it differs from a snake poison, which long retains its virulence. Moreover, eel serum is harmless when taken with food, it invariably succumbs to the processes of digestion. If serum be taken from an animal that has been rendered immune to snake poison and injected under the skin of an eel, the poisonous property of the eel's blood is thereby impaired. Serum taken from an eel is naturally about three times as poisonous as the serum of the most vicious viper.

Although diluted eel serum may protect an animal from so deadly a poison as viper venom, the converse does not hold good; the serum of vipers is no protection against the poison of eels' serum. Serum obtained from animals gradually trained up to withstand fatal doses of serpent venom differs from ordinary serum in the astonishing rapidity of its action. Not only its protective, but also its undoubted curative power has been established.—Good Words.

Easy Plan.

"That young man," said the citizen, pointing to a sharp featured youth across the street, "has made fame both for himself and this his native village."

"As to how?" asked the stranger.

"Simply by sending telegrams of congratulation or condolence, as the occasion called for, to prominent persons."—Indianapolis Journal.

A writer in The Electrical Review inclines to the opinion that as the electric motor superseded the horse car so the perfection of paving will ultimately do away with rails and current altogether and automobile vehicles rule supreme.

MINISTRY FACED CHAMBER.

Waldeck-Rousseau and His Colleagues Declare Their Policy.

In Doing So They Demanded Justice From French Representatives—Their Program Is Sustained After Being Read in Full—Socialist and Other Interpellations Answered by the Premier—Republicanism and Justice.

Paris, June 27.—The new Cabinet Ministry presented themselves to the Chambers yesterday afternoon.

The Chamber was thronged and there was great animation at the opening of the session when it became known that two alleged hostile groups, the Socialist-Radicals and the Democratic Left, had decided to vote in favor of the Government, and that M. Paul de Cassagnac had withdrawn his interpellation.

Identical statements were read in the Chamber of Deputies by the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, and in the Senate by the Minister of Justice, M. Monis.

They were as follows: "The Chamber of Deputies, in expressing itself resolved not to support any Government but one determined to defend energetically Republican institutions and assure public order, has defined the task imposed upon the new Cabinet. The Ministry has no other ambition than to accomplish it.

Delusions Should Be Effaced.

"Then, to accomplish it, in order to bring about the pacification of the country, and to maintain intact our common inheritance, it seemed to us that existing delusions should be effaced, and that the work we are about to undertake required the co-operation of all Republicans. When the aim is definite, though varying according to the methods of different schools, accord becomes easier, and controversies are lost in the presence of the one duty to perform. To end the agitation pursued under disguises easy to penetrate, against the regime which has been sanctioned, and will be upheld by universal suffrage, and to require from all the services loyal assistance and courageous assumption of responsibility, such is necessarily the first duty of the Government. It is resolved to have all judicial decisions respected, and if the first wish of the country is to listen to the voice of justice it will maintain silence and respect while its decisions are prepared.

Army in the Front Rank.

"In the front rank of the important interests of the country, bound up with the conservation of the dignity of the nation, we place the interests of the army, which the republic has constructed on a stronger basis, and which is synonymous with the republic's security, and is the pride of France. We think, with the army's most illustrious and surest guides, that inviolable attachment of discipline is the first and essential guarantee of the army's own greatness. We intend to defend it with the same energy against the attacks and solicitations which constitute the most undeserved of insults. We desire, above all, that appeasement may be accomplished, and it will come quickly, if everyone will give up being a law unto himself, and bow to the law of the land.

Need Co-Operation of Parliament.

"To accomplish the work which has devolved upon us, we have need of the co-operation of Parliament, and its whole confidence. We ask the widest mandate. We take the fullest responsibility. We ask for a truce of the irritating discussion, hurtful to the interests of the country, and that you will vote without delay a law necessary to the good working of the public service. If our efforts are not sterile, disunion among Republicans will vanish, and the republic will thus resume the path of economic and social progress."

At the opening of the session the extreme Leftists shouted, "Vive la Commune," and the Socialists frequently interrupted the proceedings, but M. Waldeck-Rousseau's statement was much applauded by the Leftists and Centrists.

Socialist Interpellations.

M. Ernest Roche, Socialist, interpellated the Government regarding the policy and composition of the Ministry. He declared it was a Government of war and defiance, and violently attacked the Minister of War, General the Marquis de Gallifet. Other speakers followed in a similar vein, and eight orders of the day were moved, only two of them approving the Ministerial statement.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau accepted an order of the day moved by M. Jules Perillier, Radical Socialist, reading as follows: "The Chamber, approving the declarations and acts of the Government, passes the order of the day."

The Statement Approved.

The Chamber adopted M. Perillier's motion by a vote of 268 to 237. An indescribable scene of excitement followed in the lobbies.

The Senate by a vote of 187 to 25 approved the declaration of the Government.

The Premier's Reply.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau replied to the various interpellations, explaining the motives animating the formation of a Cabinet of somewhat divergent views, one of the main objects being to re-unite all Republicans. He added that the Ministers had already assumed some responsibility, but he thought the backing of the Chamber was necessary for further steps, and asked what Ministry could for a moment tolerate acts seeming to create the belief that the army desired to constitute itself the judge of its policy. He further expressed the hope that it would not be necessary to take more severe measures, and said he thought it easy to demonstrate whence came the attacks upon the courts. Explaining the inclusion of General the Marquis de Gallifet in the Cabinet as Minister of War, he said it was because no other general had so spontaneously supported the constitution, and it was thought the necessary punishment of certain military men could be somewhat relaxed if emanating from such a trusted authority as Gen. Gallifet. In conclusion the Premier said: "Our task is heavy. Whatever course the Chamber may pursue, I have done my duty."

The speech of M. Waldeck-Rousseau was much interrupted. The noise at times was deafening, and several members were called to order.

Screamed ... WITH.. Agony
From the Terrible Itching, Burning Tortures of ...
Eczema on the Scalp

Some of the cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment are more like miracles than anything else. The case recorded here was one of the worst ever brought to the attention of Toronto's best physicians, and when doctors gave up all hope of recovery Dr. Chase's Ointment was successful in producing a perfect cure.

Mr. James Scott, 136 Wright Ave., Toronto, states: "My boy Tom, aged ten, was for nearly three years afflicted with a bad form of Eczema of the scalp, which was very unsightly and resisted all kinds of remedies and doctor's treatment. His head was in a terrible state. We had to keep him from school, and at times his head would bleed, and the child would scream with agony. For two and a half years we battled with it in vain, but at last found a cure in Dr. Chase's Ointment. About five boxes were used. The original sores dried up, leaving the skin in its normal condition. To say it is a pleasure to testify to the wonderful merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment is putting it very mildly."

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.
Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 28th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

ARMY AND NAVY CONCERT

Peterborough's Citizens to be Treated to a Good Feast of Music.

In order to meet the expenses surrounding the Grand Old Army and Navy Veterans excursion to Peterborough on Wednesday of this week, Mr Gliddon, bandmaster, and the 57th band have very kindly volunteered to assist Prof. Richardson in carrying out his programme of music in the market hall on Wednesday night, when a grand concert will be given by the combined bands, making seventy-five instruments in all. The programme will include selections of the most popular variety. This is the right spirit and speaks well for the good feeling of the Peterborough band.

The concert will be given all for the trifling sum of fifteen cents or two tickets for twenty-five cents.

Remember when you contribute to your own amusement on this occasion you are also helping to provide a burial fund for some of those who fought and bled for our country and flag. 2d148

A Rich "Pick-up" in Campbellford.

On Thursday evening Mr. H. LeBrun returned from Campbellford where he had been engaged in completing the purchase of Mr W. W. Tyrrell's splendid stock of ready-made clothing. Mr. Tyrrell has been Campbellford's best clothing merchant for the past six years, but has lately decided to move west. He made a private offer to sell out to Mr. Le Brun, whose firm is rapidly pushing its Campbellford branch to the front. Mr. Le Brun closed out the deal and took in the whole stock at 62 1-2 cents on the dollar, a price much below the wholesale figures. Peterborough as well as Campbellford is to enjoy the benefit of the lucky bargain—as the sale is now in full swing at the City Clothing Store, George-st. The stock is right up to the season, well worth a hundred cents on the dollar, and as "good as wheat." These bargains have the right of way and will be railroaded through at express speed. Be on time.

The six last were brethren who had died since last decoration day, five from Peterborough Lodge and one from Otonabee Lodge.

During the time the brethren were engaged in decorating the graves the 57th Battalion band rendered a short and appreciative programme of music.

After the floral tributes had been deposited on the graves, the brethren reassembled about the platform where the ceremony was completed, and speeches, suitable to the occasion, were made by local clergymen. A report of these speeches will appear to-morrow.

The brethren did not return to town in a body but dispersed at the cemetery.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at James Lynch's Drug Store as their giving away to their many customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable remedy, from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases are quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size 50c. and $1.00 Every bottle warranted.

DIVIDING THE DIOCESE.

Mr. Bloomfield States Clearly the Position He Took Before the Synod.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—Your report of the discussion in the Anglican Synod on the proposed new diocese calls for an explanation from myself. My amendment was as follows:—"That no decided action be taken by the Synod until the proposed new diocese be in a position to support its own missions." Archdeacon Allen assumed that my object in bringing this forward was to kill the scheme, and he spoke very bitterly of an old friend for moving it. Mr. Machlen went further than this and abused me in no measured terms. There was no reason for this display of hostility.

In moving my amendment I pointed out that under the proposed arrangement the clergy residing in the new diocese would still be the clergy of the Diocese of Toronto; that neither the Bishop, Mission Board or Synod of the new diocese would have any voice in the appointment, control, transfer, or in fact in any matters in connection with the stipends and grants of the clergy of the new diocese—that, in short, it would be a diocese only in name. This effect is perfectly obvious to anyone reading the resolution appended to the report of the committee on the increase of the Episcopate as reported at the head of your notice. No attempt was made to refute my statement by anyone in the Synod, though I came in for a good deal of unmerited abuse as stated above.

No opinion was expressed by me adverse to the formation of a new diocese, and I confined my remarks in accordance with the ruling of the Bishop to the resolution before the Synod. When Mr Campbell moved his amendment making a straight grant of $2,000 a year for five years to the new diocese when formed, I at once withdrew my amendment. It entirely met my objections. The new diocese would have from the start the control of its own clergy. In withdrawing my amendment I was permitted to say a few words in further explanation of my reasons for introducing it, though they were fully stated at first and not received by the Synod generally in a spirit of derision as might be inferred from your report. I took the opportunity of adding that there was nothing in my amendment to prevent those interested in the new diocese from obtaining aid from the old diocese in other ways, such as personal contributions or parochial aid for work through the Mission Board, or a grant from the Mission Board direct as now proposed by Mr Campbell. This was also accepted at once by Archdeacon Allen on behalf of the committee, so there was but small reason for the anger displayed at the first sign of opposition to the resolution which they considered of vital importance.

Yours truly,
CHAS. JAS. BLOMFIELD.

ITCHING PILES.

False modesty causes many people to endure in silence the greatest misery imaginable from itching piles. One application of Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment will soothe and ease the itching, one box will completely cure the worst case of blind, itching, bleeding or protruding piles. You have no risk to run, for Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is guaranteed to cure piles.

Impudence.

"I have just learned," she said, with a perceptible tinge of asperity, "that I am the ninth girl to whom you have been engaged."

"Well," he suavely replied, "that ought to make you glad."

"Glad!" she exclaimed. "I'd like to know why?"

"Don't you know," he answered, "that there's luck in odd numbers?"—Chicago News.

She Ought to Make Him Confess.

During the first three months of every engagement the girl makes a confessional of the man. Later she wishes she hadn't confessed so much.—Atchison Globe.

Very Hard Indeed.

There are so many things that appear unnecessary, and which for the life of us we can see neither purpose nor end. It may be corns are just one of those thorns in the flesh the why and the wherefore of which we cannot see. Nevertheless they are the kind that are easily removed. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor makes short work of them. Try it and see how nicely it coaxes them out. Use none other than Putnam's Corn Extractor. Sold by druggists.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Wheeling.

Mr C Stan Allen, the newspaper correspondent, who will be remembered by many as the man who handled the megaphone at the bicycle meet here last Dominion Day, purposes putting in the summer in a unique manner. He is out on a genuine tramping expedition, or, as he calls it, "a pedestrian pilgrimage," and intends seeing as much of the country as he can in that way. As a preliminary canter, so to speak, he covered Essex county thoroughly for The Windsor Record, and his "Walks and Talks" make interesting reading.

Lacrosse

Both lacrosse teams go out of town for league games on July 1st. The seniors will play their first game against Brampton, and the juniors will give Hastings their return game.

At Pickering yesterday in an exhibition game Markham defeated the home team by 4 goals to 3.

The Seaforths, who withdrew from the senior C.L.A. some time ago, have applied for re-admittance and have been reinstated. They will play their first game at Orillia on July 7th.

Baseball.

The Toronto 'Varsity baseball team, after touring the Eastern States, was defeated at Kingston yesterday by 16 runs to 1. Sullivan, Kingston's pitcher, fooled the collegians completely.

The Argyles, of Toronto, defeated the Bowmanville team at Bowmanville on Saturday by 14 to 6. The game was very fast.

At the P.A.A.A. grounds on Saturday, Dominion Day, baseball will be the attraction. Cobourg will play two games against the home team, morning and afternoon. McCabe will pitch for the locals in the morning and Connors in afternoon. The matches are expected to be fast and interesting and should draw large crowds. The games will be at 10 o'clock and 3 o'clock. Gents 15 cents and ladies 10 cents.

A number of the baseball boys were over at the grounds to-day and had an excellent practice. The team is in first class shape

They Settled.

Long before the war General Butler, who was then a struggling young lawyer, lived up in a Massachusetts manufacturing town. He had displayed ability at college, but had to wait the usual number of years for his first case. At last a young girl who had worked in a cotton mill came to him for redress against her employers. She had been discharged without wages, and on a request for three weeks' wages was unceremoniously thrust from the door. The case looked blue, for the firm was a very rich one, but she needed money badly. She offered Ben one-half to collect it.

The next morning, while on her way to look for employment, she came upon a great gathering at a crossing. She inquired what was the matter and learned that the factory she had left had shut down for the first time in 30 years. Wondering what could have brought about such a state, she passed on and presently met Butler. He was leaning against a lamppost whittling a stick.

"'Tsall right," he called, waving his knife with a jaunty air. "'Tsall right. I've got 'em!"

"Got who?" ventured the young lady.

"Why, those old skins up at the factory I went to 'em right after I saw you yesterday and demanded the bill. They told me to hustle. I then got out an attachment on their water wheel and shut up the shop. You own $15 worth of the entire machinery. Oh, they'll settle by noon!" And they did.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Mystery of Sausage.

The composition of the sausage is not only complex, but it is often obscure. In this country the preparation of this (as it should be) useful article of food is confined to the employment of minced beef and pork. The only exception probably is the so called "black pudding," which is made with pig's blood and perhaps some heart and kidney.

Abroad, however, the sausage is compounded of a much wider range of substances. These include brains, liver and horseflesh. The last substance is generally considered repugnant, while, of course, it is fraudulent to sell sausages as beef or pork containing horseflesh. Occasionally, however, sausages do not contain meat at all, but only bread tinged with red oxide of iron and mixed with a varying proportion of fat.

As some are To-day.

Pinch your feet in wrong shaped shoes; make you nervous, irritable; spoil your temper; lose your concentration.

You can't expect to go the even tenor of your way in a shoe that cripples.

"Slater Shoes" are made to fit feet—to cover every tender joint comfortably—make you forget you have a painy foot.

They fit the first time they're worn, and ever after, because the stretch and shrink has been for ever taken out of them while six days on the lasts.

Twelve shapes, all sizes, six widths, all colors, styles and leathers.

Goodyear welted, stamped on the soles with name and price, $3.50 and $5.00.

R. Neill, Sole Local Agent

The remarkable feature of horseflesh is the high proportion of glycogen which it contains, and this fact enables the presence of horseflesh to be detected with some amount of certainty. The test which depends on a color reaction with iodine has recently been more carefully studied and with more satisfactory results, so that the presence of 5 per cent of horseflesh in sausages can be detected.—Lancet.

A Street Hustler.

"What's your business?" asked the police magistrate of a man who was before him for abusing his wife because supper was not ready.

"I'm a street hustler," was the reply.

Explanations showed, says the New York Herald, that the man represented a large number of fellows in New York who have no regular occupation, but nevertheless manage to make a good living, particularly at this time of the year. They loiter around the streets until they see a vanload of furniture going somewhere. Then they follow the wagon, oftentimes for miles. The wagon drivers do not take kindly to these men and will not let them ride.

Men who are "handy with their hands," as it was explained to the magistrate, have no difficulty in getting a job laying carpets, cleaning windows and furnaces or hanging out clotheslines. It is a poor wagon chase that does not net from $3 to $4 a load. Sometimes, when two or more men are following the same load, competition is keen. The wagon driver whips his horses, and the prize falls to the man who has the fleetest foot and the greatest wind power.

It Lit.

"Gimme a match, will you, old man?"

Toppington had entered Throttle's office just before the noon hour. "Of course," said Throttle, offering his caller the desired article, and as Toppington lighted his half burned cigar Throttle exclaimed, "Oh, by Jove, old man! Did I show you a novelty that I picked up when I was down in New York last week?"

"No; what was it?"

"A peculiar kind of a match," was Throttle's reply as he rose and dove into the pocket of his overcoat that hung on a peg the other side of his desk.

Returning, he held out to Toppington a handful of matches that looked like the ordinary article.

"What's different about them?" asked Toppington.

"Why, you throw them in the air and they light. See?"

Accompanying his word with the appropriate action, Throttle tossed one of the vestas from his hand. It fell as any ordinary match would have done.

"There," exclaimed Toppington, "it didn't do anything of the kind. It didn't light."

"You're mistaken," was Throttle's reply. "It did, don't you see, it lit there on the floor."

Toppington paid for the luncheons.—Detroit Free Press.

AUSTRALIAN FEDERATION.

Chamberlain Expects a Bill to Provide for It Next Session.

London, June 28.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons yesterday the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, said he hoped a bill providing for the federation of the Australian commonwealth would be introduced in the House of Commons early next session.

The Bill in Victoria.

Melbourne, Victoria, June 28.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday the Federal Enabling Act passed its first reading.

Rioting in Spain.

Madrid, June 28.—At Valencia riots occurred throughout the entire day yesterday. The gendarmes charged the mob, and two of the rioters were wounded. Disturbances also took place at Murcia.

At Saragossa the riots continued after the state of siege had been declared, and Gen. Borbon was wounded.

Saragossa, Spain, June 28.—Many people were injured during the rioting here yesterday. Seventeen persons received dangerous wounds. The troops were obliged to fire on the people. Martial law has been declared at Valencia and fighting has occurred at Grenada.

Banditti in Cuba.

Havana, June 28.—Owing to the murders, robberies and depredations in the vicinity of Guanajay, the peasants are sending their families to town. Several arrests have been made, including a major named Sanz, suspected of complicity in recent robberies. Last night the police captured three supposed bandits. Pedro Nunez, said to be the ringleader, was taken, but he escaped, threatening to shoot an unarmed inspector of police if he were followed. Many dangerous men are leaving the town, and the citizens feel better satisfied, now that the authorities are taking active measures. Orders have been issued for the arrest of ten Cuban officers and two Spanish former guerillas, all of whom are believed to be guilty of serious offences.

Collins Carried His Bat for 628.

London, June 28.—A. E. G. Collins, the 14-year-old Clifton College schoolboy, whose remarkable batting has excited the interest of all cricket players here, carried his bat through the innings yesterday for 628 runs. When his partner was caught out, Collins had been at the bat seven hours. The total for his side was 833 runs.

Alaska Boundary Question Again Badly Tangled Up.

Lord Salisbury and Mr. Choate Had the Thing All Fixed Up When This Pesky Colony Again Meddled With It—Our Latest Demand Wholly Unacceptable to Our Fair-Minded Brethren to the South of the Line.

London, June 28.—The United States Ambassador, Mr. Joseph H. Choate, had a conference at the Foreign Office yesterday morning with the Marquis of Salisbury in regard to the objection raised by Canada on Friday to the suggested modus vivendi in connection with the Alaskan boundary dispute.

Poor Show for the Medus.

Washington, June 28.—The negotiations for a modus vivendi regulating the Alaskan boundary have fallen into a state that jeopardizes a successful outcome and causes apprehension among officials. Nothing has been heard from Ambassador Choate as to the results of the conference he had yesterday with Lord Salisbury on this subject, but the last phase of the case was that the Canadians had come back with a counter proposal, in place of accepting the definite American proposition, which had been carefully drawn with the sole purpose of preventing any future controversy over the points already agreed upon by Hon. Mr. Choate and Lord Salisbury. Instead of following the lines of the American proposal, and confining the counter proposal to a plain statement of the points already roughly indicated as marking the boundary, this last issue proposed a radical change in the line on the Dalton Trail, and was of a character wholly unacceptable to the American side, involving, as it did, the transfer into Canadian jurisdiction of the fortunes and claims of many American miners. Unless there is a decided abatement on one side or the other of the demands, the desired modus vivendi will be as unlikely of attainment as a permanent agreement on the boundary question, and the chances for a reassembling of the joint high commission will fade away entirely.

THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

A Record Being Made of the Work Already Accomplished.

The Hague, June 28.—For the next few days the members of the special drafting committee, who are preparing a record of the work already accomplished, will be the only peace conference delegates occupied. The question of a permanent arbitration board and Germany's relation thereto—the German delegates having received instructions to accept the principle of a permanent tribunal of arbitration, as outlined in the Anglo-American plans—will be discussed Monday.

DREYFUS NOT YET IN SIGHT.

Brest and Its People Are in a State of Great Suspense.

Brest, June 28.—The delay in the arrival here of the French cruiser Sfax, which left the waters of French Guiana June 10, with Capt. Alfred Dreyfus on board, increases the interest in the landing of the famous prisoner. All sorts of reports and suppositions are current.

The authorities continue refusing to furnish the slightest information regarding Dreyfus to the regular army of newspaper men of all nationalities now gathered here, anxiously seeking news of the Sfax.

A St. James' Gazette Scare.

London, June 28.—The St. James' Gazette, which has been remarkable for its utterances on the subject of the Transvaal, capped the climax yesterday by earnestly appealing to the British Admiralty to "Take immediate steps to counteract the plans of the Clan-na-Gael, from the United States, who are now at Pretoria with a view of obtaining authority to start a fleet of privateers under the Transvaal flag with the object of looting Cape liners."

Michigan Man Accused as a Traitor.

Marquette, Mich., June 28.—Richard Nicholl, a former Marquette County miner, was arrested May 15 at Johannesburg, South Africa, and placed in jail in Pretoria on a charge of high treason against the Transvaal Government. Nicholl has written to County Clerk W. Ross for copies of his own and his father's naturalization papers, through which he seeks to establish his American citizenship. He will probably fail in this, as reference to the records show that neither father nor son had anything more than first papers.

Rigo Still on Deck.

Cairo, June 28.—The story or the birth of twins to the former Princess of Caramon-Chimay, and the death from bubonic plague of her Tzigane husband, is pure invention. Both the Princess and her gypsy are still in Cairo, and both are in health.

They Will Fight With Swords.

Paris, June 28.—As a result of an altercation in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday between M. Berteaux, Socialist, and M. Millevoye, Republican Nationalist, those two deputies will fight a duel with swords to-day.

YUKON SCANDALS UP AGAIN

Sir C. H. Tupper Puts His Charges in a Resolution.

He Speaks for Seven Hours, and Makes Vigorous Charges Against the Officials, Mr. Ogilvie and Minister Sifton—He Asks for a Royal Commission to Be Appointed With Proper Powers to Investigate Complaints.

Ottawa, June 28.—Sir Hibbert Tupper, on the motion to go into supply being moved in the House yesterday afternoon, rose and for the second time this session arraigned the Government, and especially the Minister of the Interior, for the maladministration of the Yukon, speaking up to 6 o'clock in general condemnation of the conduct of some of the officials, and being especially severe on Commissioner Ogilvie and his methods in making his investigation. He expressed regret at having to criticize the conduct of officials, and, inasmuch as he would, in the course of his speech, have to animadvert upon the personal character in connection with public matters, he quoted a number of English and Canadian precedents in justification of his course. Amongst the Canadian cases quoted were those of Hon. A. G. Jones' attack on the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, Mr. Mulock's attack on Judge Traverse, and Hon. David Mills' attack on Mr. Hayter Reed and other Government officials in connection with the Bremner fur matter.

The Commission Fad.

Sir Hibbert next called attention to the present Government's fondness for issuing commissions, with very full powers to investigate, on the slimmest suspicion of every trifling case, and compared it with the reluctance with which the Government had approached an investigation of Yukon affairs, and the very limited powers given Commissioner Ogilvie, when an enquiry was tardily granted.

Mr. Ogilvie's Appointment.

He severely criticized the appointment of Mr. Ogilvie to investigate the charges made by the Miners' Association and others, not only on account of his relationship by marriage with the Minister of the Interior, but also on account of the unfitness for the position from lack of experience and legal training, and declared that it was Mr. Ogilvie's legal advisor, Mr. Clement, and not Mr. Ogilvie himself, who really made the rulings and controlled the investigation, admitting or excluding what evidence he pleased. He declared that Mr. Ogilvie was singularly lacking in that authority which English and Canadian precedent showed was necessary for the proper carrying out of an investigation, and instanced his inability to protect witnesses or to pay the expenses of witnesses.

How It Was Conducted.

He read copiously from the report of evidence taken before Mr. Ogilvie, to show the manner in which the investigation was conducted, and said that Mr. Ogilvie and Mr. Clement seemed to think they were holding a court instead of conducting an investigation. He said that, despite the manner in which the investigation was conducted, the result had been to show most nefarious conduct on the part of officials.

Judge McGuire's Advice.

Judge McGuire had given Gold Commissioner Fawcett advice on hypothetical questions with regard to his office, and afterwards became interested in gold claims. He continued, at considerable length, reviewing the evidence taken by Mr. Ogilvie, holding that it disclosed a very rotten state of affairs, amongst other things showing that Gold Commissioner Fawcett was afraid of the very shadow of Major Walsh, who terrorized over him.

A Crack at Landerkin.

After recess, Sir Hibbert continued his criticism. Shortly after a very smart little "scrap" between him and Dr. Landerkin took place. Sir Hibbert was proceeding to show that in the case of the so-called election frauds in Manitoba the Federal Government promptly took action to have detectives sent out to ferret out evidence, when Dr. Landerkin interrupted to know if that referred to an officer of the Inland Revenue Department in Winnipeg, who drew salary for nothing.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1899.

THE DISGRACEFUL GAME ACKNOWLEDGED.

FOLLOWING in the wake of the revelations and exposures made in the South Ontario and West Huron election trials comes the startling and disgraceful fraud, corruption and bribery acknowledged by the Liberal candidate to have been practiced by the Government agents at the bye-election in West Elgin. In the face of this acknowledged fraud and corruption, which has been shown to have been practiced in an organized and scientific manner by the same gang in the Government interests at the several bye-elections, the glory which the Liberal press—the local representative included—drew from these so-called victories for the Government cause falls flat. Facts, acknowledge and stated by no one less than the Liberal candidate himself, show that they were not the victories of good Government, but of fraud and corruption in all its worst forms, practiced in desperation to save from total wreck the discredited combination that rules at Toronto. Let Mr McNish, the Liberal candidate of West Elgin, tell the story of the practices of the Government gang in working to secure his election. Here is the statement he made, signed and handed in to the court :—

ST. THOMAS, June 26th, 1899.

Messrs. Crothers & Price, Barristers, etc., St. Thomas :

DEAR SIRS,—We beg to advise you that Mr Macnish has discussed at length with his solicitors the charges contained in the petition which has been filed against his return as member of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario for West Elgin, and that they have to a considerable extent investigated the charges contained therein and other matters which have come to their knowledge in connection with the election. And the subscribers hereto make the following statements and admissions respecting the same :—

1. That a large number of persons were sent into the constituency by men working on behalf of the Liberal party for the express purpose of taking part on Mr Macnish's behalf in the election held January 12th, 1899, and we believe that fraudulent and corrupt means were used by some of such persons to secure his election.

2. That several of the said persons illegally and without authority acted as deputy returning officers at the said election, and in at least three cases so acted in the names of reputable local men, having, under assumed names, been introduced to the returning officer by local agents of Mr Macnish.

3. That in many of the polling subdivisions of the riding there were grave irregularities connected with the return of ballot boxes and their contents, the voting, and the counting of the ballots thereat.

4. That there were large numbers of persons brought into the riding for the express purpose of personating legitimate voters, and assisted by some of Mr Macnish's local supporters such persons did personate qualified voters in voting for Mr Macnish.

5. That the declared number of votes for Mr Macnish largely exceeded the number of bona fide votes cast for him.

6. That a large number of ballots cast for Mr McDiarmid were in some nefarious and corrupt manner manipulated, whereby the result of the election was rendered doubtful, and that in this connection the voting at Shedden and Middlemarch, and in several divisions in St. Thomas where said strangers so acted as deputy returning officers, merits special mention.

7. That there are good reasons to believe that there are many specific and well authenticated cases where agents of Mr Macnish concealed at their homes some of those strangers, who there paid large sums of money to electors to induce them to vote for him.

8. That Mr Macnish will forthwith deliver to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly his resignation as a member thereof for the said electoral district.

Witness : (Sgd.) DONALD MACNISH.
(Sgd.) A B AYLESWORTH.

Then the Sheriff went into the witness box and admitted that unknown men had been allowed to impersonate reputable citizens as deputy returning officers, and that these unknown paid agents of the Government election workers had stuffed the ballot boxes and been guilty of other gross irregularities to aid the Government candidate and prevent the people expressing a fair and straight verdict at the polls. These unknown men were taken in and housed and assisted by the local Grit workers, and paid out the money in large sums to secure vote for Mr McNish. What do all these admissions mean when viewed in the light of the partial exposures made in the South Ontario and West Huron cases? It is convincing proof of what has been charged—That an organized gang was employed in the Government interests to corrupt the constituencies where bye-elections were held, and there seems to have been no limit to the fraud they would attempt and practice. To what straits must the Government have felt they were put in their anxiety to hold office when such methods had to be resorted to and such practices encouraged, practices which disgrace the good name of Ontario and her people. It was recognized that the sweep of victory that attended Mr Whitney's campaign at the general election could not be stayed by fair means, and hence the resort to foul.

Of course the Government may disclaim knowledge of these things. But if the Ministers are sincere, if Mr Dryden with his hypocritical letter to the South Ontario party managers desires to be free from the contamination of such disgraceful tactics, let them take action to further expose and punish these offenders. Bring to justice those who sent these thugs out to do their iniquitious work. Dare the Government do its duty? Wait and see. Meanwhile the honest and fair-minded people of this province must decide that a change of men and methods is imperatively needed at Toronto. A Cabinet shift will not mend matters, for the new comers would be the very men who worked in these bye-elections. The whole combination must go and give way to a new set of men, of new methods and principles.

THOSE bye-elections were glorious victories for the Government cause.

MR. MCNISH will hardly have the assurance of Mr Dryden and write a letter asking the party managers in West Elgin "to set their faces against corruption." He is more likely to write a letter to Mr Dryden and the other Ministers imploring them "to set their faces against corruption."

AND Mr Preston, ex-Grit organizer, views the scene of disgrace and exposure from a $5,000 Government berth in the Old Country. Mr Preston knows when a game is being too well played, when desperation drives to any length.

MR. MCNISH says the men who came in and worked the frauds and corrupted West Elgin in the Government interests were "sent" there. Who sent them?

FOR the sake of the feelings of the general public let the Grit party cease to talk of purity.

WHAT will the Globe say about the election frauds and political corruption in the face of its candidate's acknowledgements in West Elgin.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

Phyall, proprietor Bodega Hotel, 36 Wellington Street East, Toronto, says: "While living in Chicago I was in a terrible shape with itching and bleeding piles, I tried several of the best physicians and was burnt and tortured in various ways by their treatments to no purpose, besides spending a mint of money to no purpose. Since coming to Toronto I learned of Dr. Chase's Ointment, I used but one box and have not been troubled with piles in any shape or form since."

YOKON SCANDALS UP AGAIN

Persisting in his interruption, after being warned by Mr. Speaker, Dr. Landerkin provoked the observation from Sir Hibbert that the remarks were "maudlin."

Dr. Landerkin (excitedly)—Maudlin! Maudlin, did you say? You ought to be ashamed of yourself!

Sir Hibbert—I am surprised at my own moderation.

Case of Lucille Elliott.

He went over the case of Lucile Elliott again, and attacked Major Walsh for his arbitrary conduct in closing Dominion Creek. He reviewed at some length the Nelson v. Donnelly case, known as the overlapping case, and ridiculed the appeal from the Gold Commissioner to the Minister of the Interior. After continuing in the same strain until nearly 11 o'clock he read 48 typewritten pages containing about 1,500 words, going elaborately into the charges of immorality, etc., against Major Walsh, and misconduct on the part of various officials in the Yukon, and concluding with a resolution that a Royal commission, of two or more judges of the Supreme Court, or of the Superior Court of any of the provinces, be appointed to investigate the charges. He spoke for a few minutes in support of his motion and then moved the adjournment of the debate, which was agreed to by the Premier on the condition that the debate closes to-day.

The following are the charges against Major Walsh, made in the resolution moved by Sir C. H. Tupper in the House to-day:

"That Major Walsh, after the issuing of the ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquor on Sunday, permitted one Lucille Elliott to keep open on the Sabbath a store for the sale of cigars and light drinks, and the said Lucille Elliott sold spirituous liquors by virtue of this order, and in contravention of outstanding and unrepealed ordinances and regulations.

"That while acting as the chief executive officer of the Government of Canada, the Major carried on in the Yukon a liason with one known as Lucille Elliott, who was permitted to enjoy privileges, advantages and favors from the local authorities in said district.

"That while acting as such chief executive officer, Major Walsh was guilty of intemperance and immoral acts which involved him in irregular and improper conduct in the discharge of his public duties and brought contempt upon Canada."

Don't Want Bubonic Plague.

In reply to a question by Col. Prior, the Minister of Agriculture said that his attention had been called to newspaper reports that the bubonic plague had reached Honolulu, and instructions had been given by Dr. Montizambert, director-general of quarantine, to prevent the landing of any cases in Canada.

House adjourned 11.45.

BREEZE IN THE SENATE.

The Drummond County Railway Purchase Bill the Cause.

Ottawa, June 28.—In the Senate yesterday afternoon the Drummond County purchase bill was introduced by Hon. R. W. Scott, and an attempt made to proceed with the second reading, without the Grand Trunk lease bill, but Sir Mackenzie Bowell vigorously protested that the two bills should be discussed together, in the same way they had been in the Commons, although, of course, they would pass as separate bills. The Drummond County purchase, he said, was a simple matter, which could be easily understood, is being merely whether the road was worth what was to be paid for it; but the Grand Trunk lease was a very different affair, involving an immense amount of money and covering the very lengthy period of 99 years, and it behooved the Senate to move with caution, and demand the fullest possible information. There were details which had been asked for and not furnished, and until they were given he must protest against the Drummond County bill being proceeded with.

After some discussion, Hon. David Mills agreed to bring down all the information he could to-day, and the storm blew over. The Senate then passed the final clauses of the Criminal Code amendment act, advanced some other bills a stage, and adjourned at 6 o'clock.

A CHANCE FOR TROUBLE.

Crew of a French Fishing Vessel Threw the Customs Officer Into a Boat and Escape—Columbine Chasing Her.

St. John's, Nfld., June 28.—The French fishing vessel Nouvelle Ecosse, from the Grand Banks, arrived at Cape Broyle, on the southern coast of Newfoundland, yesterday, in quest of herring bait. She was seized by the customs officials for a violation of the fishery laws. An officer was given the custody of the ship and crew, but the latter attacked him, got the ship to sea, threw him into a boat and left the coast. The British special service vessel Columbine was ordered to chase and seize the Nouvelle Ecosse, which has no register, that being in the hands of the customs officials. Serious complications are expected to result from this affair. The French admiral is coming here to undertake an investigation.

CROP REPORTS.

Forecasts of the Harvest From All Over the Province.

Toronto, June 28.—Reports upon the condition of the crops throughout Ontario have been received here. The most noticeable feature of the reports is the large amount of fall wheat which has been winter-killed. As a result, it has been very generally ploughed under, and spring crops have been planted on top of it. The general lack of rain has delayed several of the spring crops, particularly in the west. In the east there has been an over-abundance of rain. Generally speaking, the spring crops are good, the roots especially being well advanced.

Toronto, June 28.—Never before has there been such a world-wide gathering of temperance advocates in Toronto as that of the International Supreme Lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars. The delegates are from all over the world. About 500 of the members have arrived, the majority from Canada and the United States. After routine business yesterday, a resolution cheering on The Hague peace conference was unanimously passed.

Tried to Steal the Strong Box.

Havana, June 28.—An unconfirmed report from Puerto Principe says a mob of insurgents, after surrendering their arms, attempted to overpower the paymaster's guard and capture the money chest. The American soldiers, the report says, fired into the mob, killing nine and wounding many more. Those members of the mob who escaped injury then fled.

OTIS IS SUPPRESSING NEWS.

Statesers Are Beginning to Grumble at His Rigid Press Censorship.

New York, June 28.—An evening paper publishes the following from its Washington correspondent: "The press censorship at Manila is attracting a good deal of attention, not less at Washington than in other parts of the United States.

"General Otis is carrying things, in respect to newspaper correspondence, with a higher hand than any other officer has ventured to in recent years. He does not content himself with forbidding the transmission of certain news by cable from Manila, but goes to the extreme length of saying what shall and what shall not be mailed, under envelope and seal. He has warned the correspondents, also, that any one of them who tries to circumvent his vigilance by sending objectionable matter over for transmission from Hongkong will be treated as if the offence were committed in Manila and might as well pack his trunk for home."

ARTILLERY SCHOOL.

Major-General Hutton Says One Will Be Established at Kingston.

Niagara, June 28.—Major-General Hutton carefully inspected the artillery brigade yesterday afternoon. In speaking after the inspection Major-General Hutton said that the practical drill was as good as it could be, the organization of the camp was excellent; but he hoped soon to see the theoretical part of artillery tactics greatly improved. To this end he prophesied that an instructional school for artillery would be founded in Kingston before 18 months were passed, with Col. Stone at the head. There was no such school in Canada and one was needed badly if Canada was to do her part as a noticeable force in the Imperial idea.

The Artillery Fight Friday.

The artillery fight will take place on Friday and will reach to Queenston Heights. On Thursday the men bang away at the floating buoys in the lake, and on Saturday take part in the grand review.

Iroquois Waterworks Burned.

Iroquois, Ont., June 28. — Monday night about midnight the Waterworks Company's building was seen to be on fire. It was found impossible to stay the ravages of the flames, and the building and machinery were soon a heap of ruins. The loss to the Waterworks Company is estimated at $6,000, $1,500 of which was covered by insurance. In addition, about $2,000 worth of electric plant belonging to Mr. Keefe, that was stored in the building, was destroyed. This also was insured for $1,500.

Reciprocity With Bermuda.

Washington, June 28.—A reciprocity treaty relating to the British West Indies colony of Bermuda has been concluded and the Bermuda commission has left for home with a draft of the treaty, which is to be submitted to the Bermuda Legislature before being finally signed on behalf of the two Governments, by Commissioner Kasson and Mr. Tower, the British charge. Fair progress is being made on the Jamaican treaty, but the negotiations will not be concluded this week.

Allen Holds His Seat.

Belleville, June 28.—The North Hastings election trial yesterday, before Justices Rose and Falconbridge, lasted but a few minutes. Mr. C. S. Grant, for the petitioner, said he had no evidence to offer and the case was dismissed. Mr. W. J. Allen, the Conservative member, thus holds his seat.

American Railway Accountants.

Montreal, June 28.—The Association of American Railway Accounting Officers will meet here to-day.

A MAN LOST.

Lost! No man understands the full meaning of that word like the man who has been lost. He will tell you: "I was in the woods going ahead steadily when I realized I'd missed the trail. With a cry of 'Lost!' I broke into a run heedless or ignorant of the direction I was going."

The first impulse of a man lost in the woods is to run. The only safe thing is to sit right down and reason out the position.

Sometimes a business man gets up at the usual hour, breakfasts, kisses his wife and starts for the office. He has for sometime seen signs that he was off the trail of health. To-day the signs multiply. His brain is dull and dizzy, his heart does not beat right, his breathing is difficult, his limbs feel tremulous. He is scared. He realizes that he's far away from the trail of health, and suddenly like a panther from a tree, the thought leaps on him, "You are a lost man." The first impulse is to run for help, though the way is honey-combed with pitfalls of quackery. But the rational man faces the facts, sits down and thinks over the position and its probabilities.

That is the man we want to talk to.

Disease in almost any form is generally accompanied by the failure of the organs of digestion and nutrition. Re-establish these organs in healthy action, the blood is at once enriched, the body nourished and the general health restored. This result is invariably accomplished by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a stomach-strengthening, nerve-nourishing, muscle-making, blood-purifying medicine. It has cured thousands who thought their health entirely lost. The "Discovery" is not a stimulant and contains no alcohol or whisky. Sold at all medicine stores.

OUR SPECIAL OTTAWA LETTER.

language in regard to the character and career of this overseer.

FEATURES IN THE CASE.

A regular feature in the transaction is the fact that the order-in-council authorizing this enterprise was passed three days before the House met and before a dollar of money had been voted for the service. It is another queer feature of the case that Mr. Charleson was sent out by Mr. Tarte three days before the government passed the order authorizing the Minister to send him, and that the money so far expended by Mr. Charleson has been taken from a supply voted for another purpose. Before leaving for the Pacific Mr. Charleson bought from his son, a retail trader in Ottawa, $5,000 worth of the wire required, at prices said to be higher than the market value.

MET THE WRONG MINISTER.

This is not the whole of the story. Last year two companies were incorporated to establish a telegraph service in the Yukon. One of these was promoted by Mr. Roche, an English member of Parliament, who was associated with Colonel Domville, M.P., of New Brunswick, and Dr. Haley, M.P., of Nova Scotia, both supporters of the Laurier Government. In the spring of 1898 Mr. Roche and his associates had several interviews with the Minister of Railways, who had represented the Government in the committee when the charter was obtained, and who was supposed to have jurisdiction in the matter. Mr. Blair wrote in October to Mr. Roche expressing his pleasure that the company intended to proceed with the enterprise of establishing a telegraph line to Dawson. Mr. Blair added:—

"The Government is extremely desirous that private enterprise should take up this work and that it should be prosecuted without delay. * * You may rely upon receiving the countenance and approval of the Government in carrying this enterprise forward to a successful issue."

Another letter from Mr. Blair to Mr. Roche written at the same time explained that the representative of another company desired to treat with the Government, and added:—

"I told this gentleman very frankly that my department had an understanding with you and that we were giving you the preference, at least until we were satisfied you were delaying in pushing the work unduly; and I said that upon that point we would be in no position to form an opinion until next spring."

Having secured from Mr. Blair the statement that the department of railways had an understanding with the company, that the whole administration was sympathetic and helpful, and that no conflicting enterprise would be recognized by the Government until the spring, Mr. Roche made arrangements in Washington for the Alaska connections and then went to England, where he completed the organization, secured the paid-up capital, made contracts and shipped wire with other material to the Pacific coast.

MR. TARTE ON THE SCENE.

In the following March the Company was surprised to learn that the Government had entirely changed its policy, and that an officer and staff had already been sent by Mr. Tarte to establish a telegraph line over the route on which the Roche-Haley Company were about to build. The Company at once sent to Mr. Tarte a memorial stating the case. The replies from Mr. Tarte and his deputy threw the whole blame on Company directly for the loss sustained. Mr. Roche and Dr. Haley were told that Mr. Tarte had received authority to go on with the work. They were reminded that "the minister (Mr. Tarte) had never been officially apprised, as he should have been (the matter being in his department) of the intention of the Company." Deputy Gobeil further stated to Mr. Roche: "The hon. minister, Mr. Tarte, further believes that if any disappointment is experienced by the Company it is largely and in so far as he is concerned, absolutely due to the fact that he, as the responsible minister in charge of the construction of telegraph lines, has not been informed in time of the fact that an action parallel to his own was intended to be taken by the Company in question.

Mr. Roche and Dr. Haley have reminded Mr. Tarte and Sir Wilfrid of Mr. Blair's own words accepting responsibility for himself and his department, but have got no better answer than that Mr. Tarte's men were on the ground and that the company was too late. Parliament spent an afternoon and evening trying to find out why Mr. Blair negotiated about a matter in Mr. Tarte's department without consulting Mr. Tarte, and how Mr. Tarte got his big scheme through council without learning of the Roche enterprise. There was also some attempt to find out how much Mr. Charleson was likely to draw from the treasury in connection with the project as now under way.

SIR WILFRID'S DEMOCRACY.

A brief discussion of the subject of use of private cars by Ministers took place in supply. It appears that the ministerial private car industry was never so flourishing as it is now. The members who were most concerned because the late Sir John A. Macdonald used a private car, are making no disturbance over the private car journeyings not only of the premier but also of all his colleagues and their families. Sir Wilfrid Laurier admitted on Friday that he travelled in a private car when he was on public business. Otherwise, he said he was still "a democrat to the hilt."

Speaking of the premier he is now sure of the $100,000 gift which his friends some time ago undertook to raise for him. Sir Donald Smith, High Commissioner for Canada, contributes $10,000, and offers to double the money. It is unnecessary to say that the Liberal party has overcome any objections formerly felt to the acceptance of cash testimonials by the Ministers.

A COST OF ENQUIRY.

Two years ago the Government appointed three commissioners to hold an investigation into the management of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary. The accounts covering the cost of this inquiry are now supposed to be all in. One would hope so, as the Solicitor-General has informed parliament that the investigation has cost $18,076.

WHAT WE PAY FOR THE YUKON.

A large part of Friday evening was devoted to discussion of Yukon expenditure. The Mounted Police bill for the fiscal year now nearly ended, is $385,000 more than was estimated a year ago, or in other words, nearly double the original appropriation. Military and Mounted Police in the Yukon cost for the year $1,700,000 according to Mr. Foster's computation. Each mounted police trooper in that country has cost the Dominion during the year $4,370. The cost of each of the soldiers—200 in number—was probably more. The police have done good work, but it does not yet appear that there was any need of the soldiers.

She Married the Hat.

A European government servant was recently married to a native woman in Samarang by the Mohammedan ceremony. It took place in the mesjid, and it was conducted by the penghulu, but the bridegroom was not present. He had given written notice that he would not put in an appearance, but he sent his hat, and that was, according to native custom, quite sufficient. She married the hat.

He Didn't Shoot.

Ever since the Wild West show appeared in Budapest the citizens believe that every American is in the habit of carrying a revolver. "A few nights before my arrival," writes a correspondent, "an American traveler and his friends had been sitting at a table in a music hall ordering such refreshments as may be obtained at that kind of a place. When the American called for his check, the waiter performed a feat in mathematics and learned that three times three made 17.

"The American found fault with this system of multiplication and stood up to protest. The young woman who sold programmes threw herself in front of him and seized his arm. 'Please don't,' she said. 'He is a poor man. He has a wife and family.' The manager came running. 'Wait, wait!' he entreated. 'Please do not make any trouble. I ask you that you should not shoot!'

"Yielding to these entreaties, the American spared the life of the trembling waiter, who had made a run for the stairway. There was another computation, and it was decided that three times three made nine."

TRAVELLING IS MADE A JOY NOW

THE GRAND TRUNK SERVICE BETWEEN TORONTO AND MONTREAL IS UP-TO-DATE.

New Solid Vestibuled Trains, Each Carrying a Cafe Car, Where the Meals are Served on the European Plan.

On the invitation of Mr. M. C. Dickson, the energetic and genial district passenger agent, representatives of the Toronto papers yesterday took a trip on the luxurious vestibuled train leaving Toronto at 6 a.m. for Montreal. Mr. Dickson piloted the party, and Mr. Charles S. Proctor, traveling passenger agent for the district west of Kingston, was also on board, as well as Mr. John Watson, superintendent of the dining car service.

THE NEW FEATURE.

This week the Grand Trunk management inaugurated a new feature, which is explained by the following notice, which, in the shape of a doger, is handed to passengers:

A cafe car is attached to this train, serving luncheon a la carte, at any hour during the day convenient to passengers.

A MODEL TRAIN.

The whole train is a model of elegance and comfort, complete in all devices known to modern ingenuity in the line of car building, but the special feature is the cafe car. There are three compartments — parlor, dining room and smoking room—all of the utmost luxuriance in finish; kitchen, wine closet, ladies' and gents' toilet rooms, and every modern appliance to make travel a luxury. This car obviates the necessity of taking a hurried lunch at a station, and gives one the comforts of a first-class hotel, while bowling along at a rate of 40 or 50 miles an hour. As the new train is a solid vestibuled train, ladies and children can walk from one end of the train to the other while the cars are in motion without the slightest danger. Therefore, the cafe car is accessible to all at all times during the trip. The cars are all built at the Grand Trunk workshops in Montreal, and the finish shows that the company is right up to date.

A RAPID RUN.

A rapid run was made, and the train which left Montreal at 9 a.m. was met between Napanee and Kingston. By pre-arrangement the trains stopped side by side on the double track, and Mr. Dickson and party changed cars for the return home. A party of newspaper men from Montreal changed cars at the same time and returned east.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN WENT EAST.

It is worthy of note that the private car of Mr. Robert T. Lincoln, president of the Pullman Car Company, was attached to the train going east. With Mr. Lincoln were Mr. Leonard, his private secretary, Mr. Maham and Mr. Caton, directors, who were on their way to Woodstock, Vt.

At Belleville the Grand Trunk official train, with Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, Mr. Hays, Mr. McGuigan and party on board, was met. A halt was made, and the two trains were backed together, while the Grand Trunk magnates and Mr. Lincoln and his party exchanged greetings.

The trains made the schedule time both ways. Though fast time was made, the running was very smooth, and it would be difficult to imagine anything safer or more comfortable in railway travel than by these trains over the "billiard-table roadbed" of the Grand Trunk.

This train is known as the "Grand Trunk Limited," and the trip between Toronto and Montreal has been cut down to eight hours.

ST. LUKE'S GARDEN PARTY.

A Delightful Evening and the Event was a Success.

The Young Women's Chapter of St. Luke's Guild have every reason to be congratulated upon the success which attended their efforts in connection with the garden party held in Mr. H. T. Strickland's grounds last night. The weather was all that could be desired and by 8.30 a large company including members of the congregation and their friends were present.

The grounds are beautifully situated just above Little lake. Mr. Strickland is thoroughly versed in Canadian forestry, and no finer trees of evergreen type are to be found than those that adorn his spacious lawns. His cedar hedges are unequalled by any that we have ever seen, and many last night said that to see these was alone worth the cost of admission.

When darkness fell, Chinese lanterns were seen twinkling in the topmost boughs of the lofty spruce and balsams and round the verandah, "half concealed and half revealed," by the Virginian creepers in which it is festooned. The French windows of the drawing room were thrown open, and every one was made to feel perfectly at home by Mr. and Mrs. Strickland.

The band of the 57th Batt'l occupied a beautiful knoll overlooking the lake. The beauty of the scene and the large and sociable company present seemed to inspire them to even surpass themselves. Seldom has a Peterborough audience listened to a finer concert than that to which Mr. Gliddon treated them last night. There was no stint to the programme and it was nearly half past ten when "God Save the Queen" was played. In addition to the band a short programme as follows was rendered from the verandah:—Song, Mr. Brown; recitation, Miss Cook; song, Mrs. Wallis; song, Mrs. Parker; song, Miss Macdonald.

Refreshments, flowers and candies were dispensed from various booths and so great was the demand that by ten o'clock everything was sold. The proceeds will be devoted to the furnishings required for the new vestry which is to be fitted up as a church parlor and a very substantial sum was realized for this purpose last night.

The Medicine Hat News of June 22nd has the following reference to a wedding of local interest: "The Methodist parsonage was the scene of a quiet wedding on Tuesday, the 20th inst., when Mr. John Nicoll, of the Lethbridge Drug Co., Lethbridge, Alta., and Mabel, only daughter of Jos. Edward, Warsaw, Ont., and cousin of Mrs. A. C. Hawthorne, town, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. A. A. Scarlett. The bride was becomingly attired in a handsome travelling costume. After the interesting ceremony, the young couple repaired to the home of Mr. Hawthorne, where the customary luncheon was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Nicoll left on the early morning train for their future home at Lethbridge, Alta."

LOYAL VETERANS FROM TORONTO

INTERESTING VISIT OF THE IMPERIAL ARMY AND NAVY VETERANS.

Heartily Welcomed at the Station—The Parade up Street—Addresses of Welcome and Responses—Notes of the Day.

Though the steady rain to-day lessened materially the number of visitors expected in town to-day on the excursion of Her Majesty's Imperial Army and Navy Veterans of Toronto, it did dampen the ardor and loyalty of that band of gallant old gentlemen, and when their train drew in at the C.P.R. station about eleven o'clock this morning they stepped out on the platform cheerful, happy and bright and prepared to fully enjoy their holiday. The special train brought down about two hundred and fifty passengers in all, many of the veterans' friends accompanying them, a number of these being ladies.

Quite a crowd of townspeople had gathered at the station to await their arrival. The members of the Veterans' Association, of Peterborough, headed by Mr. A. P. Poussette, Q.C., president, had marched down and were drawn up in line when the visitors arrived. Mayor Davis and Aldermen Langford, McWilliams and Corkery were also present and the excursionists were given a hearty welcome, the local vets. giving three rousing cheers.

A procession was then formed and the company paraded up George-st. to the market hall. First came Sergt.-Major Irwin, of the Peterborough veterans, and Drum Major Bourne, of the Army and Navy Veterans, a striking figure in neat blue and red uniform with his massive baton. Next the splendid band of the Army and Navy Veterans, two of their stewards carrying a large Union Jack, topped with maple leaves, and the handsome banner of the corps. They were followed by the Peterborough veterans in double column, the members of the society having turned out strongly for the occasion. Then came the Army and Navy Veterans in their handsome uniform of blue with red facings and almost all wearing medals bestowed upon them in recognition of brave and patriotic deeds. As they marched up the street the band played a stirring march of British and Canadian airs and the effect of the whole parade was indeed fine.

The march was made to the market hall where the whole company assembled and where the formal welcome was made. There was quite a gathering of spectators.

CIVIC WELCOME.

The veterans were drawn up in two lines, and Mayor Davis took the plat-

THE DECORATION OF THE GRAVES

LOCAL CLERGYMEN GIVE SHORT AND APPROPRIATE ADDRESSES.

Many Beautiful Thoughts Inspired by the Impressive Ceremony of Decorating the Graves—The Remarks of Representatives of the Different Churches.

The Decoration Day ceremonies at the cemetery yesterday afternoon were attended by a very large crowd, as is usual on the anniversary, many driving, walking and wheeling down, and a large number passing over the lake by the steamer City of Peterborough and in the flotilla of canoes and sailboats which dotted the sun-kissed waters. The ideal weather, doubtless, had much to do with augmenting the large attendance.

Not the least interesting feature of the afternoon was the series of short and timely addresses delivered by local clergymen after the graves had been decorated. Mr. M. W. Matchell, Noble Grand of Peterborough lodge, presided at the platform and introduced each speaker. A large audience had congregated around and the addresses were heard with much interest.

Mr. Matchett, in opening, expressed pleasure at the large attendance and noted also that each year the general public join more cordially and in larger numbers in decorating the graves of their friends on the anniversary. The Oddfellows felt grateful to the public for making the occasion a memorable one. The ceremony of decoration shows that the departed brethren are not forgotten but live in the memories of those associated with them. He then called upon Rev. J. C. Davidson, M.A., to speak.

Rev. Mr. Davidson's remarks were interesting. He esteemed it a privilege to make a few remarks and recalled the fact that it was ten years ago that he gave his first address on a similar occasion. The anniversary is one of the most notable public functions of Peterborough. In meeting on such an anniversary, Rev. Mr. Davidson pointed out, there are three purposes: First, to commemorate the dead; second, to realize our present connection with the departed; third, to look forward to the future. Rev. Mr. Davidson thought it a most proper time to commemorate those who have rendered service to the town or to their fellow beings. He wished he had on record in the town a roll of honor, on which might be written the names of those who have served the town faithfully. Many of the departed brethren would be found in this list. On such an anniversary, also, we should as Christians realize our connection with the departed ones. They are not dead but live in the pardise of God. Though not seen by our eyes they are our friends still. In closing, Rev. Mr. Davidson remarked that it must give great satisfaction to all to see that the cemetery is kept in such a beautiful condition, and he congratulated the superintendent, Mr. Foard, and the directors, upon the efficient manner in which they have fulfilled their duties.

The chairman next called upon Rev. D. O. Crossley, of Charlotte-st. church. His remarks were not lengthy. He marked that it was the first time upon which he had the privilege to be present at such a ceremony and he had been greatly impressed with the value and importance of the day. It is a good thing to the living to recall the lives of the departed ones. He was glad to see the tokens of love placed upon the graves. He was sure the beneficial effect upon our lives would not be lost. He believed also that on the morning of the resurrection the cemetery will be a joyous and happy place, when on that day the risen ones shall meet the Lord and he hoped that all would so live as to prepare themselves for that meeting.

Rev. Mr. Elliott, of Park-st. Baptist church, spoke next. He had been particularly impressed with the unselfish nature of the service. It had been altogether a labor of love, done with no hope of gain, but solely from love of their fellow men. The ceremony shows the power of human friendship and no better demonstration could be given. But it shows also how our friendship has limits. The ceremony should, therefore, bring to our minds how helpless we are and then come the desire for the greater friendship of God. He was glad that we have the assurance of the love of God himself and Rev. Mr. Elliott entered a plea for Him who was despised and rejected of men, but who gave up His life for us. This friendship that will never end is our greatest privilege.

Rev. J. E. Moore prefaced his remarks by asking the company to sing a hymn, "O think of the home over there." He praised the beauty of the ceremony highly. The two ideas we should put before us and which should govern us in the discharge of our life's duties and obligations are love of God and love of men. God is love; all His acts proclaim it, the gift of His Son being the climax. The speaker pointed out also that the brothers whose graves had been visited are not lost for Christ himself went down to the grave and robbed it of its terrors. We all rejoice in the doctrine of the resurrection, expecting to die but to come forth again raised to glory and immortality.

Rev. J. Bastow, of Murray-st Baptist church, expressed pleasure at the opportunity of being present. It reminded him of the decoration of the graves of the soldiers of '61-'65, on the other side. The ceremony showed a strong and sincere friendship. Rev. Mr. Bastow referred in terms of praise to the I.O.O.F. The Oddfellows society is the most wonderful of societies in its growth. Its creed is a noble one. The purpose is to visit the sick, help the distressed and bury the dead, and not only bury them but to keep their memories green. The speaker was surprised and delighted with the beauty of the cemetery.

Rev. Mr. Kilgour also made a few remarks. He emphasized the idea that our religion is different to all others on earth. They are hopeless but we have a Christian hope. While remembering our departed friends we are preparing to meet them afterwards.

Mr. Matchett closed the proceedings by thanking the clergymen for their addresses and the audience for the attentive hearing.

BACK AND OUT.

Chicago Stock Yard Men Have Gone Back to Work, But in Other Lines Men Went Out.

Chicago, June 28.—The demands of the unskilled Stock Yards workmen in several departments have been met and the men returned to work yesterday, but in other departments the workmen went out during the forenoon to enforce their demands.

Several hundred painters, who demand an increase of 2½ cents an hour, joined the strikers' ranks yesterday. Another conference was held between representatives of the packing firms in regard to arranging a settlement of the troubles. Most of the packers were in favor of granting the demands of the men. It was believed that an amicable agreement would be reached before night, and that by to-day all the strikers will have returned to work. The strikers claim that they have 1,200 men out.

OUTBREAKS AT CLEVELAND.

Non-Union Street Car Men Stoned and Driven Off.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 28.—The riotous outbreaks of Monday were repeated yesterday in several quarters of the city, non-union men on big consolidated lines being stoned and forced to abandon their cars. Only two cars were operated by non-union men on the Broadway line, and those were repeatedly stoned, every window being broken, and the conductors and motormen being repeatedly struck. At Axtell avenue a mob, several hundred strong, was broken up by the police. The non-union car men took to their heels, pursued by the crowd, but made their escape. The abandoned cars were wrecked by the mob. Similar scenes were enacted at noon at Denison and Rhodes avenues, and Burton and Clark avenues. The exodus of non-union men from the city continues.

All Belgian Workmen Will Strike.

Brussels, June 28.—The committee of the Federation of Labor party held a meeting in this city last night and decided upon a general strike of Brussels workmen, as a protest against the Government's electoral bill. The strike will begin on July 15, the day when the debate on the measure opens in the Chamber of Deputies.

Buffalo Strike Off.

Buffalo, June 28.—The strike of the freight handlers along the docks that has been in progress for several weeks was declared off last night, and the new men will return to work this morning. This was decided upon at a meeting of the strikers held last night. The men go back to work unconditionally.

Greenway's Ottawa Graft.

Winnipeg, June 28.—Hon. Col. McMillan arrived from Ottawa yesterday. He states that the Dominion Government have agreed to advance $300,000 from school lands funds and also acknowledged the principle that provinces should administer its own lands. At the same time the session has been stretched out to such length that possibly some legislation upon which the Government is agreed may have to be left over through want of time. Among this may be the legislation Manitoba desires.

Standard Must Pay It.

Montreal, June 28.—An important judgment was rendered yesterday by Judge Lemieux, affecting the responsibility of insurance companies. After the execution of Cordelia Viau and Sam Parslow for the murder of the woman's husband, Poirier, the mother of Poirier sued the Standard Insurance Company for the amount of the policy, $2,000, and yesterday the court decided in the plaintiff's favor. The case will probably be appealed.

Too Much Melon.

Cunningham, Ala., June 28.—John Davis, William Turner, George Alex, Dick Thomas and Asa Stephens, negro laborers at the Easley furnace, after working hard all day Sunday, purchased ten large ripe watermelons at night and each ate two. Then they spent the night on the damp ground in the woods. Colic followed and by noon all five were dead.

40 Million Bushels Wheat.

Winnipeg, June 28.—F. W. Thompson, manager of the Ogilvie Flour Mills, said yesterday that his agents all over the country report the outlook as for a bumper wheat crop in Manitoba and the Territories. Present indications are for a crop of over 40,000,000 bushels, and, allowing for possible set-backs, it will exceed 35,000,000 anyway. Last year's crop, though unusually large, was only about 33,000,000.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

When they turn again, after making an effort to locate themselves, the door in the wall is closed, and the Maltese woman is gone.

There is no cause for them to linger, and they move away.

John Craig has nothing to say. The disappointment has been keen, and he does not yet see a ray of light ahead.

Hope had such a grasp upon his soul, when he started from the hotel, that the fall has been more disastrous.

Not so Philander Sharpe.

An evil fortune has kept him pretty quiet a little while now, and he begins to make up for it in part, chirping away at a merry rate as they push their way along the street.

At first Doctor Chicago pays little heed to what he says, but presently certain words catch his ear and tell him that the professor is not merely speaking for oratorical effect or to hear himself talk.

"What's that you say, sir," she asks.

Cheerfully Philander goes back to repeat.

"I was saying that I experienced queer sensations when I came to. They had carried you away to some more luxurious apartment, but I was left where I went to sleep—anything was good enough for Philander Sharpe.

"At first I was dazed; the soft murmur of the fountain came near putting me to sleep again with its droning voice. Then I suddenly remembered something—a charming face with the flashing eye of a fiend.

"That aroused me to a comprehension of the position, and I no longer cared to sleep. Action was necessary. I knew they cared little about Philander Sharpe, as it was you the trap had been set for—hence I was perhaps in a position to accomplish something.

"I left my chair and prowled around. They had disarmed me, and my first natural desire was to find some sort of weapon with which I could do service in case of necessity.

"In thus searching, I came across a peculiar knife, perhaps used as a paper-cutter, but of a serviceable kind, which I pocketed.

"More than this, I discovered something that I thought would prove of importance to you, and this I hid upon my person, very wisely, too, for a short time later I was suddenly set upon by three miserable rogues, who crept upon me unawares, and in spite of my frantic and Spartan-like resistance, they bore me away along a dim passage, to finally chuck me into that vile den where you came later and alarmed me so dreadfully, as I fully believed it must be some tiger cat they had pleased to shut in with me."

The little professor rattles off these sentences without the least difficulty—words flow from his lips as readily as the floods roll over Niagara.

When John sees a chance to break in, he hastily asks what it is the professor has discovered that interests him.

Whereupon Philander begins to feel in his various pockets, and pull out what has been stored there. At last he utters an exclamation of satisfaction.

"Eureka! here it is. Found it lying on the desk. Was attracted by the singular writing."

"Singular writing! that makes me believe it must have come from my mother."

"It is signed Sister Magdalen."

"Then that proves it; you remember what Lady Ruth said about meeting a Sister in Paris who resembled the miniature I have of my mother. It was a kind fate that brought this to you, professor."

"Well, you see, I always had a faculty for prying around—might have been a famous explorer of Egyptian tombs if I hadn't been taken in and done for by Gwen Makepeace.

"Was there anything particularly interesting in this letter?" asks John.

"I considered it so—you will see for yourself," is the reply.

All is darkness around them. John is possessed of patience to a reasonable extent, but he would like to see what this paper contains.

"Professor, you seem to have about everything; can you drum up a cigar and a match?"

"Both, luckily."

"Ah! thanks," accepting them eagerly.

"It may be dangerous to light up here," says Philander, cautiously, but the other is deaf to any advice of this sort.

There is a rustling of paper, then the match is struck, and Doctor Chicago is discovered bending low in order to keep it from the wind. His cigar is speedily lighted, and his eyes turned upon the paper which Philander has given him—Philander, who hovers over him now in eager distress, anxious to hear John's opinion, and yet fearful lest the rash act may bring danger upon them.

John's lips part to utter an exclamation of mingled amazement and delight, when from a point close to their shoulders an outcry proceeds; the burning match has betrayed them.

CHAPTER IX.

It is impossible for them to understand just at the moment what has occurred.

They are in a part of the Maltese city that Europeans might well hesitate to visit at the hour of midnight, however much they would frequent it in daylight.

The natives of Valetta have not all become reconciled to British rule, and although no open outbreak occurs, more than once has it been placed in evidence that there is a deep feeling of resentful distrust in certain quarters, which only awaits an opportunity to show its ugly teeth.

Knowing this fact, it is general principles more than anything else that causes Philander to have concern.

When those loud cries break forth close at hand, he knows his fears are not without foundation.

John Craig is also suddenly brought to a realization of the fact that he has hardly been prudent in his action.

He stows the paper away with a single movement of his hand. It is precious to him, and must be kept for future study.

Then he is ready to face those who, by their presence and outcries, announce themselves as the foes of foreigners.

There are many secret societies on the famous island besides the Knights of Malta, and it is not at all improbable that an organization exists which has for its main object the eventual uprising of the Maltese and their freedom from the British yoke.

This would naturally be kept a secret, and not proclaimed from the flat roofs of Valetta, or the platform of St. Lazarus.

Philander has shown remarkable traits upon this night of nights, traits which Dr. Chicago never suspected he possessed. He now proves that, in addition to these other commendable qualities, he has wonderful presence of mind, and that no sudden emergency can stupefy his senses.

Just as soon as the outcry is heard, he draws the small, cimitar-shaped paper-knife, which he claimed would make a serviceable weapon.

At the same time he cries out:

"We're in for it, John, my boy! Don't be too proud to run. Legs, do your duty!"

With which remark Philander starts his lower extremities into action, turning his head to make sure that his companion has not hesitated to follow.

If the professor is a small man, he has the faculty for getting over ground at quite an astonishing rate of speed. His short legs fairly twinkle as they measure off the yards; and, given a fair show, he would lead any ordinary runner a race.

The darkness, the uneven street, and his unfamiliarity with his surroundings, are all against him now, so that he cannot do himself justice.

Suddenly he misses his companion. John was close beside him ten seconds before—John, who is a sprinter from athletic education, and who could have distanced the professor with only half an effort had he wished, but who moderated his speed to conform with that of his less favored friend.

The shouts have continued all this while, proving that the citizens of Valetta have steadfastly pursued them, with some dark purpose in view.

Just as soon as Philander Sharpe makes this discovery, his action is one that proves him a hero.

He stops in his tracks and no longer keeps up his flight.

"Turn the other way, boys! At 'em like thunder! As Sheridan said at Cedar Creek: 'We'll lick 'em out of their boots,'" is the astonishing cry he sends forth, as he begins to travel over the back trail.

This speedily brings him upon the scene of action. Several dark figures have come to a halt around a prostrate object. They are the men of Valetta, who have organized this secret vendetta against all foreigners.

It is easy to understand why they thus halt. John Craig is the recumbent, struggling figure on the roadway; John Craig, who has possibly been lassoed by some expert among the pursuers, and who kicks with the vim and energy of a free American citizen.

This Philander understands instantly, and also comprehending that he must do something very speedily, throws himself into the midst of the dusky Maltese thugs.

The advent of a wild-cat could not produce more astonishment and consternation than this sudden coming of the energetic little man.

He accompanies his assault with the most energetic movements of both arms and legs, and his shrill voice keeps time to the music.

As he hold the cimitar-knife in one hand, his movements are not without certain painful accompaniments. The men fall back in dismay. A momentary panic is upon them. Philander is shrewd enough to know this will not last, and he does not attempt to pursue them.

Upon finding that for the time being the scene is left to him, and that he is master of the situation, the professor bends down to free his companion from the noose that binds his arms.

Already has John managed to gain a sitting posture, as the fellow at the other end of the rope forgets to pull steadily upon it in his alarm at the new phase of affairs.

Before he can collect his wits, and once more stretch the line, Philander's keen blade of Damascus steel is pressed against the rope, and as it comes taut it instantly separates.

This is enough for John, who has now gained his feet, and throws aside the entangling rope.

His tumble has had a queer effect on the young doctor; usually cool and cautious, he has been transformed into a Hotspur; there is a sudden desire for revenge.

In his hand he holds a cudgel, which he snatched from the street as he arose. It is the spoke of a wheel belonging to some light vehicle, and which no doubt one of the assailants carried.

With this flourishing about his head, Doctor Chicago leaps in among the Maltese and belabors them right and left.

As Philander, seeing what is going on, and knowing his assistance would be appreciated, springs to his side, the dusky sons of Malta break and run.

They realize, perhaps, that they have waked up the wrong customers, and immediate flight is the only thing that will save them from the result of their impetuosity.

The two Americans make a pretence of pursuing them, but, truth to tell, their course really lies in an altogether different direction, and, as if by mutual consent, they suddenly turn right about face.

Taking advantage of the enemy's discomfiture, they are enabled to make good their escape, and presently reach the vicinity of the hotel, rather out of breath, and looking somewhat the worse for their strange adventures.

Professor Sharpe has been glowing with pride and satisfaction up to the moment they reach the caravansary, then, all of a sudden, he seems to collapse.

A sound comes from the window above; a clear, sibilant sound; a human voice uttering one word, but investing it with a volume of reproach beyond description.

That word:

"Philander!"

The doughty little professor who has proved himself as brave as a lion in the face of actual and overwhelming danger, now shows positive signs of flunking. He clutches the arm of his fellow-adventurer and whispers:

"John Craig, remember your solemn promise."

"Never fear; I'll stand by you, professor."

"Philander Sharpe."

This time the inflection is more positive and acrid. It is no longer a tone of pliant entreaty, but touches the Cordelia lecture style. Of course, he can no longer ignore the presence of his better half.

"It's I, Gwendoline," he says, meekly.

"Oh, it is! You've condescended to take some notice of me at last. Well, I'm glad to see you. Come up stairs at once, and confess that you've treated me abominably, you bad man."

"For Heaven's sake let's get in before a crowd gathers," groans the professor, with a glance of horror up in the direction of the white-capped head protruding from the second-storey window.

Craig is amused, but takes pity on his companion, so they enter the hotel together.

WORLD'S COUNCIL OF WOMEN

The Five Sections Are Now in Full Swing at Westminster.

A Paper Opposing Female Franchise Read—Speakers Too Hard on Men, Said One Lady, and She Created Some Excitement—Mrs. Harty Described the Ontario and Quebec Factory and Shop Acts—Women as Lawyers.

London, June 28.—The International Council of Women, which assembled yesterday in the Convocation Hall of Church House, Westminster, is divided into five sections, or meetings, which are all crowded. Great interest is taken in the political section, which discussed the "Parliamentary Enfranchisement of Women," the vice-president of the council, Mrs. Kay Wright Sewall of the United States, presiding.

A Storm Was Raised.

Miss Susan B. Anthony, one of the American delegates, detailed the progress of the movement in America, and the announcement that a paper would be read in behalf of an American woman's society opposing female franchise was met by a storm of hisses.

Mrs. Sewall protested against this intolerance, pointing out that no one was obliged to remain, but that it was their duty, if present, to listen courteously to all speakers.

The paper was then read, punctuated by ironical cheers and derisive laughter. It was written by Mrs. Frances Scott of Massachusetts.

In the professional section Madame Antoinette Stirling created some excitement by declaring with much emotion that she thought the speakers were too hard on the men, and adding that women only realized the full value of a husband when the latter was lost.

Factories in Ontario.

In the legislative section Mrs. Kelly read a paper on the condition of tenement labor in New York, and Mrs. Harty described the operations of the Factory and Shop Acts in Ontario and Quebec.

Miss Octavia Bates of Detroit deplored the fact that the profession of barrister was not open to women. Yet women, she pointed out, were the natural confidants of their sisters. In America, the speaker continued, medicine and the church were open to women, but public opinion, she claimed, was not sufficiently advanced to favor women lawyers, though the law colleges were open to both sexes, and many women, like Miss Helen Gould, who desired to manage their own estates, qualified. There was great need of the development of the public conscience, and women with knowledge of the law would give the feminine side of marriage and divorce, "now only treated from man's standpoint."

The Prisons Section.

The Duchess of Bedford presided at the meeting of the prisons and reformatories section, where Mrs. Johnson of Washington described the success of women's reformatories in Massachusetts, advocating a system of trades whereby women might regain their self-respect.

At the International Council of Women yesterday afternoon Mrs. Boomer of Canada read a paper on "Paternal Responsibility," and Mrs. Maria Weeks of the United States one on "Education as a Preparation for Life."

An Arbitration Proposal.

An immense meeting, attended by more than 2,000 persons, was held in Queen's Hall last evening for the discussion of a resolution, proposed by Baroness von Suttner of Austria, calling upon the International Council of Women to do all in its power to advance the interests of international arbitration. Archbishop Ireland was introduced and spoke strongly in favor of the resolution.

RUMPUS AT BRUSSELS.

Marseillaise Sung and Vive la Republique Shouted in the Chamber.

Brussels, June 28.—Stormy scenes were witnessed in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday in connection with the debate on the electoral law introduced by the Government. The Socialists accused the Questors of bringing legal officers of the Crown to the Chamber for the purpose of taking notes of the proceedings. The Questors hotly protested, and an inconceivable tumult ensued. The sitting was eventually suspended. The Socialist Deputy, Furimont, sang portions of the "Marseillaise," and all the Socialists joined in the chorus. Shouts of "Vive la Republique" were also raised.

The Chamber later voted, by 88 to 16, to debate the Franchise bill July 5, and the House adjourned amid a terrific uproar.

Vatican Party on Top.

Rome, June 27.—For the first time since 1870 the Vatican party has obtained a majority in Rome in the municipal elections, and the fronts of the churches are fantastically illuminated nightly in honor of the success.

Another Big Deal.

Montreal, June 28.—There is some prospect of the Dominion Steel & Iron Company of Sydney purchasing the Wellington nickel mines at Sudbury. This mineral deposit, which has the reputation of being the richest nickel mine outside of New Caledonia, has not been worked for several years. The property before the death of Mr. Duncan McIntyre was valued at about $750,000. However, it is thought that at the present time it could be purchased for considerably less.

Entertained at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 28.—The members of the New Ontario Legislature touring party were entertained yesterday by the aldermen of the city and the Board of Trade. The majority left Winnipeg last night for home.

Toronto, June 28.—Receipts of live stock at the cattle market were large yesterday, 82 carloads, composed of 1,300 cattle, 600 sheep, 1,200 hogs and 60 calves. The quality of fat cattle, stall-fed, was fair, but there were a large number of grassers of inferior quality. THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.
Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Shedden, February 28th, 1898.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

OUR SPECIAL OTTAWA LETTER

DISCUSSING THE BUSINESS AND HAPPENINGS OF LAST WEEK.

Explanations Hard to Get—Ministers Who do Not Know—Mr. Tarte's Yukon Operations—Mr. Roche Got the Ministers Mixed.

(Special Correspondence to The Review)

Ottawa, June 24.—For the greater part of this week the House has been in supply. Progress is reported every day with true parliamentary mendacity, but on some days very little money is voted. The Opposition members claim it is almost impossible to drag explanations out of the Ministers, either as to expenditures made or outlays proposed. Hours are spent in cross-examining Ministers who either cannot or will not give details of expenditure in their departments, or explain why money has been spent without parliamentary authority, or why the established rule requiring contracts to be let by tender has been broken. For instance, the Minister of Militia comes to the House and asks for some $300,000 additional to the amount estimated by him at the beginning of the year. It is fair to say that a part of this money is to pay the expense of the camps which the Minister perhaps did not intend to hold this year, but in other expenditures for the department the estimates made were from 25 to 75 per cent. short of the money that has been needed or at least that has been used. On the item of militia supplies, some discussion took place on a contract for blankets. The contract was made two years ago at a certain price and was filled. This year the department without calling for a new tender extended the old one, so that a bargain for $2,000 worth of goods was made to cover about nine times that quantity. It happens that the price of wool had fallen, so the farmer members say, from 19 1-2 cents to 13 1-2 cents. The price of blankets should have come down accordingly but this favored contractor, who was said to be a warm supporter of the Government, seems to have been allowed the benefit of the fall in prices. One of the Ontario members points out that Mr. Mulock will not allow a mail carrying contract for $20 a year to run over the time if he can re-let it a dollar or two cheaper, especially if the mail carrier is not a good Government supporter. This member finds a considerable difference between the treatment of the humble mail carrier and the privileges allowed to the more opulent contractor for supplies.

MR. TARTE AND MR. CHARLESON.

The longest as well as the warmest debate of the week took place over the question of telegraph lines in the Yukon. Mr. Tarte, as Minister of Public Works, has sent Mr. J. C. Charleson to the Klondike, at the head of a party of men with instructions to provide telegraph lines, improve river navigation, erect buildings, and perform other services estimated to cost $150,000 to $200,000. Mr. Sharleson attained a certain eminence during the Mercier regime in Quebec in connection with politics and finance. Mr. Tarte when he became Minister of Public Works, soon found a place for Mr. Charleson in his department at Ottawa. Mr. Charleson was next heard from in connection with the Crow's Nest Pass Railway. While drawing pay from the Dominion he went about engaging men to work for private parties in the Crow's Next Pass. It is not forgotten that many of the men engaged found their way home a few months later complaining of deception and cursing the day they ever met the person who persuaded them to go to the Rocky Mountains. The last we hear of this Mr. Charleson is that Mr. Tarte gives him $4,000 a year and expenses, and sends him to the Yukon with $15,000 cash and authority to draw indefinitely for more. Mr. Pergeron and other members are emphatic in the statement that Mr. Charleson had not their confidence in money matters, and some of them used very direct

Very Hard Indeed.

There are so many things that appear unnecessary, and which for the life of us we can see neither purpose nor end. It may be corns are just one of those thorns in the flesh the why and the wherefore of which we cannot see. Nevertheless they are the kind that are easily removed. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor makes short work of them. Try it and see how nicely it coaxes them out. Use none other than Putnam's Corn Extractor. Sold by druggists.

A Military Service on Sunday.

It has been decided that the service at St. John's next Sunday afternoon will be a purely military service and not open to the general public. It is expected that every officer and man in the 57th Battalion will be present, especially in view of the fact that the Battalion is much below its ordinary strength. Some of the men have already given up holiday excursions in order to be on parade. "O" Squadron of the Prince of Wales Dragoons have accepted an invitation to be present, and it is quite possible that Capt Johnston's Company, of the 46th Battalion, which will return from the Niagara camp on Saturday, will also join in the parade.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at James Lynch's Drug Store as their giving away to their many customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable remedy, from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases are quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size 50c. and $1.00 Every bottle warranted.

A Rich "Pick-up" in Campbellford.

On Thursday evening Mr. H. Le Brun returned from Campbellford where he had been engaged in completing the purchase of Mr W. W. Tyrrell's splendid stock of ready-made clothing. Mr. Tyrrell has been Campbellford's best clothing merchant for the past six years, but has lately decided to move west. He made a private offer to sell out to Mr. Le Brun, whose firm is rapidly pushing its Campbellford branch to the front. Mr. Le Brun closed out the deal and took in the whole stock at 62 1-2 cents on the dollar, a price much below the wholesale figures. Peterborough as well as Campbellford is to enjoy the benefit of the lucky bargain—as the sale is now in full swing at the City Clothing Store, George-st. The stock is right up to the season, well worth a hundred cents on the dollar, and as "good as wheat." These bargains have the right of way and will be railroaded through at express speed. Be on time.

form and read the following address of welcome:

To the Officers and Members of the Army and Navy Veterans Association:—

Gentlemen,—It is with a great deal of pleasure, indeed, that I welcome you to Peterborough to-day. Every word in the name of your Association—Army, Navy, Veterans—is one that commands a welcome from every loyal heart and awakens enthusiasm in the mind of every Briton. The flag of Britain waves in every corner of the world, and gives freedom to so large a portion of the world's population, including ourselves, because the men who carried that flag forward and defended it from every assault were soldiers and sailors who knew not fear or fatigue. They fought and died, or they fought and conquered, but they did not leave the field of battle except as victors. We have a grand heritage—not merely in lands and homes, but more specially in freedom and security, a heritage for which our best gratitude is due to the veterans of the army and navy of Great Britain. In the making and defending of this great Empire, you had a share, for before me are men who helped to fight our battles in the Crimea, in India and in Africa, and, not less important, men who shouldered their weapons to beat back ruthless invaders from our own beloved Canadian shores. Your Association, which brings together comrades of the battle field and by which you assist each other to the comforts of life in your declining days, is a commendable one, and I voice the sentiments of the whole people of Peterborough when I tell you that you are most heartily welcome. We would fain hope that the war drum will be heard no longer and that the battle flag will be furled, and the fact that the great nations of the world can even meet and discuss ways of keeping the peace of the world other than by arming most of its able-bodied inhabitants, shows that civilization is beating back the spirit of war and that the dream of a time when war shall be no longer may yet be realized. But that time has not yet come. There are nations that are not restrained by the views and feelings that hold back the sword in the hands of a Briton until it must be used to avert a greater evil, and until these nations are more advanced, and have been more strongly influenced by the civilization of which Great Britain is the foremost representative, Britons must not forget how to wield the sword or sail a man-of-war. It is therefore, most gratifying to you and us to know that while you have retired, with well earned laurels, from the active service of arms, your successors can, as they so nobly did at Omdurman, uphold the honor of the British army and the British flag, Canadians must, as well as all other Britons, be prepared to do their part in the defence of home and native land. It is a pleasant idea to cherish that we need not be apprehensive because our only neighbors are our cousins to the south, but should the struggle that all Europe fears some day break out we may find that idea, an erroneous one, for the waters of the peaceful ocean might bring turbulent visitors to our shores. But we are glad that we have the confidence, born of knowledge and experience, that should the necessity most unfortunately arise our militia would not be slow to respond to the call of duty.

I hope your outing this year will be most pleasant, When we bid you welcome we do so earnestly, and you can be assured that anything we can do to make your visit here a pleasant one will not be left undone, and we hope that you will thoroughly enjoy yourselves.

A. L. DAVIS,
Mayor.

VETERANS' WELCOME.

Mr. A. P. Poussette, president of the Peterborough Veterans' Association, on behalf of that body extended to the visitors a cordial welcome to the town. It was an honor to have as guests men on whose flag were inscribed the names of many of the greatest battles in the history of the British empire since the beginning of the century. He pointed out that it was a great satisfaction to any man that he has been able to do something for his country. He emphasized the fact that all British soldiers are volunteers, there being no conscription now, and the credit to them is all the greater that they fight not for pay really but from ideas of duty and patriotism. He again extended a hearty welcome and regretted that the weather was disagreeable.

THE REPLIES.

Mr. Wm. Simmons, president of the Army and Navy Veterans, and late of the Royal Navy, took the platform and called upon his men for three cheers for Peterborough. These were given in the vigorous British soldier style.

Mr. John R. Gray, secretary of the Army and Navy Veterans, then read an address in reply to the welcome that had been extended. He explained the nature and purposes of their organization. Their society included men who had fought in all the great battles from Navarino down to the last Egyptian campaign. The beautiful flag they carried had been presented to them last year in commemoration of the Queen's diamond jubilee. They felt that they could not select a better town in Canada than Peterborough in which to spend a loyal day. He thanked the citizens and the veterans of 1866 for their hearty welcome and desired also to publicly thank Mr. Lem. Felcher for the great interest he had taken in making their outing a success.

Mr. Simmons expressed the intention of the veterans to have an enjoyable day and hoped that they would leave with the good will of the people.

NOTES.

Mr. John Nunn, chaplain, of the Army and Navy Veterans, introduced Mayor Davis to all his comrades personally.

Drum Major Bourne was formerly with the Grenadier Guards, the Household troops, London, England.

The visitors are making the Palace hotel their headquarters for the day.

The rain this afternoon prevented the visitors from seeing the town as they would wish to see it, and as the citizens would like to have seen them see it.

The event of the evening will be the grand band concert to be given in the market hall. The Army and Navy Veterans band is a fine one.

The special train of the visitors will leave the C.P.R. station for the return trip after the concert this evening.

Messrs. LeBrun and Felcher had the store next the hotel fitted up as a dining room, and Mr. Jas. Blaine, who was in charge, extended hospitality.

This afternoon the rain had driven all the visitors indoors. The Veterans' band, and it is an excellent musical organization, were the guests of Mr. Lem Felcher, and were comfortably quartered in the third flat at the Palace restaurant, where they rendered several selections. Their music is all right, and will be heard to advantage at to-night's concert.

Although kept inside the veterans were not down-hearted, but made the most of a bad job. They gathered where the band was and seemed to enjoy themselves. Several members of the local Veterans' Association were initiated into the Army and Navy Veterans. Among those so honored was Mr. A. P. Poussette, President of the 66 men.

Mr. John Nunn, the first president of the Veterans, is with the visitors according to promise, and none regretted the rain and disagreeable weather more than he did. It played havoc with the attendance, although he said that owing to the number of tickets bought and not used they would come out all right financially.

The handsome and historic flag of the Veterans—referred to in the Review before—was seen this afternoon and greatly admired. It could not be unfurled on parade owing to the rain.

How One Proud Monarch Manages to Exist in Captivity.

Some interesting details in regard to the present condition of Samory, the dethroned African monarch, have just been received by the French Minister of the Colonies. Samory is now at Kayes, where he occupies a camp, which is guarded by a company of soldiers. He has 15 wives with him, and 16 of his children and several servants. He spends his time in reading the Koran and smoking cigarettes.

To outward seeming Samory is calm and contented, but at heart he is quite the reverse. He cannot rid himself of the idea that he will be murdered some day, and whenever one of his guards happens to fire a shot he is confident that his last hour has come. He brooded so much over his coming doom that he quite lost his senses recently, and made a determined but futile effort to commit suicide.

Samory still retains with him a few pieces of his barbaric furniture, but all his gold and silver treasure, which mainly consists of gold rings and silver plates, has been confiscated by the French Government, and is to be sold. His silver cuirass, however, a massive and unique work of art, will be placed in the War Museum at Paris. Samory, it is said, has grieved much over the loss of these treasures, and it is considered doubtful whether his captors, no matter how kindly they may treat him, will ever be able to reconcile him to his lot.—New York Herald.

OTONABEE COUNCIL.

At the last meeting of the Otonabee Council all the members were present. The following communications were received:— From Wm. O'Brine, clerk of Douro, requesting the Otonabee Council to appoint a deputation to meet a deputation appointed by the Douro Council, presenting statements showing the number of days statute labor and amount of money expended on the boundary line between Douro and Otonabee during the last five years. Councillor Grady and Clerk Drummond were appointed to meet the Druro deputation at Morgan's Hotel, Peterborough, on Saturday, the 24th; from Wm. Doherty, pathmaster, requesting that steps be taken to have the fences removed off the road opposite lots 31 and 32, as he wishes to make the road in its proper place. Councillor Grady was appointed to look into the matter. In the absence from the afternoon session of Reeve Johnston, who was going out with volunteers to Niagara camp, Councillor Lancaster was voted to the chair. Jeremiah Fitzgerald was present as to having the ditch widened and Whitlaw's creek cleaned of obstacles. He was instructed to have the parties interested notified to meet and agree to the respective work each has to perform. A resolution was passed appointing Robert Evans pathmaster instead of John Gainer, who declined to act. The following accounts were passed: John Renwick, $1, for removing culvert planks from the edge of creek on base line to prevent them floating away; Wm. Drury, gravel, $4. The Council adjourned to meet as Court of Revision on Thursday, the 27th July.

OTIS TO HAVE MORE TROOPS.

40,000 Men to Be in Philippines to Fight After the Rainy Season.

Washington, June 29.—Secretary Alger, Adjutant-General Corbin and Col. Bird, Assistant Quartermaster-General in charge of transportation, had an hour's consultation with the President yesterday relative to the question of reinforcements for General Otis. A definite decision has been reached to continue recruiting men at all the recruiting stations for service in the Philippines, and Secretary Alger said when he left the White House, after a conference, that General Otis would have 40,000 men when the rainy season closed for a resumption of active operations. Arrangements are to be made at once for increasing the transportation necessary to get these additional troops to the Philippines.

An Exodus of Spaniards.

Manila, June 29.—General Jaramillos, who is settling Spain's military affairs here, has received a cable message from the Minister of War at Madrid, General Polavieja, announcing that the pay of all soldiers who are in the hands of the insurgents will be continued during their captivity. The families of many of these officers and soldiers are in Manila, without means of support here or on their return to Spain. The new Spanish consul here, Senor Luis Marinas, says his foremost business is to secure the release of the prisoners. The Spaniards are fast leaving Manila. The steamer Isla de Luzon sails for Spain soon, taking several hundred persons, civil and military officials and their families. The Spanish commercial men are selling out, and some of the largest interests here will soon pass into the hands of English capitalists.

Will Move to Toronto in September.

Hamilton, June 29.—The clerks in the head offices of the Canadian Life Insurance Company have been notified that the office will be removed to Toronto in September, and that if they wish to remain in the employ of the company they will have to go to the Queen City in that month. The wages of the staff have been increased, the increases ranging from $100 to $1,000 a year. It is needless to say the clerks will go with the offices.

Sifton Is Ahead.

THE GOVERNMENT IS TIED UP.

No Hope Now of C.P.R. and I.C.R. Renewing Traffic Agreement.

C.P.R. President Shaughnessy Says the Grand Trunk Appears to Have Matters Clinched for Some Time to Come—Will Parliament Intervene to Upset the Bargain Made Between the Government and the Grand Trunk?

Montreal, June 29.—There will be no renewal in any form of the agreement between the Dominion Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway with regard to running powers or traffic facilities for the company over the Intercolonial Railway between St. John, N.B., and Halifax, N.S. Mr. Shaughnessy, the president of the C.P.R., has returned from Ottawa, where he had a long interview with the Premier on railway matters yesterday. He says the Government have tied their hands forever, by the agreement they have entered into with the Grand Trunk, from entering into traffic arrangements with any company. By one of the clauses of the arrangement in connection with the acquisition and working of the Drummond County Railway, the Grand Trunk have secured for all time the right to every ton of traffic bound for the west that the Intercolonial Railway brings into Montreal. Mr. Shaughnessy thinks that the Government could not have understood the far-reaching consequence of the agreement or they would never have consented to it. He pointed this out, he says, to Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday, "and," added Mr. Shaughnessy, "I made it clear to him that the Government were debarred now from entering into any traffic arrangement with the C. P.R. I fancy the question will be discussed from one end of the country to the other before we are many days older. I pointed out to the Premier that the best thing to do under the circumstances was to get Parliament to pass a bill abrogating the agreement. What action he may take I cannot pretend to say, but I know what I would do if I found I had made a mistake."

Is There Anything in This?

It was stated here yesterday that since the agreement between the Grand Trunk and Intercolonial Railways became better understood, that this fact greatly contributed to Hon. Mr. Tarte's trip to the other side of the water. It is now known that the Canadian Pacific Railway will take strong grounds against the ratification of the 99-years' lease by Parliament, and as Mr. Tarte is a friend of the Canadian Pacific Railway, his departure was due to the unwillingness of Sir Wilfrid to see a conflict between Mr. Blair and the Premier's Quebec idol.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER

And Only Given 10 Days in Jail for Killing a Man.

Fredericton, N.B., June 29.—At the trial of Gover, the man who killed McLean after finding the latter with his (the prisoner's) wife, the jury last evening, after an hour's deliberation, reported that they had acquitted the accused on the charge of murder, but found him guilty of manslaughter. The prisoner's counsel appealed for clemency, stating that Gover's wife, who was filled with remorse, had mortgaged her home to furnish funds for the defence, and hoped to win her husband's pardon.

Judge Van Wart, amid applause, in which the jurymen joined, sentenced Gover to ten days in jail. The trial was one of the most sensational that ever took place in New Brunswick.

THE CANADIAN LEAGUE.

St. Thomas Deserts the League and Pays Up Its Players.

St. Thomas, Ont., June 29.—The St. Thomas Baseball Club have withdrawn from the Canadian League; team disbanded and players all paid off. The Woodstock Club was here yesterday, but there was no game. The club have not been playing in their usual form of late, and about half of them are laid up with injuries. The attendance has been small and the management losing money.

Technical Education.

Toronto, June 29.—The committee appointed at the recent conference of boards of trade on technical education met yesterday morning at the Board of Trade building. Mr. J. D. Allen presided, and submitted his report, which was adopted. The report showed the great necessity there is for a technical education in this country. Messrs. J. D. Allen, W. F. Cockshutt, Brantford; Hoodless, Hamilton; A. M. Wickens and G. F. Wickson were appointed a committee to formulate a provincial system of technical school, and to report on it as early as possible.

Toronto to Be Married.

Toronto, June 29.—Miss Florence Brimson, better known to the musical world as Mlle. Toronta, will be married in Grace Church, New York, on Wednesday evening, July 12, to Mr. C. L. Graff, manager of the Damrosch Opera Company. Mlle. Toronta will make no more public appearances as a singer after her marriage, but will continue to sing in Emmanuel Temple, in New York, where she is at present engaged.

THINKING OF PROROGATION.

Legislators Object to Swelter in Parliament in Dog Days.

Government Is Evidently in a Dilemma Over Sir Hibbert Tupper's Yukon Charges, for, Instead of Mr. Sifton Continuing the Debate, Sir Wilfrid Moved Its Adjournment—What Will Be the Fate of Sir Hibbert's Motion?

Ottawa, June 29.—Intimation was given last night by the Government that it is beginning to think of the close of the session. Sir Wilfrid Laurier gives notice that he will move on Friday that the last private members' day (Monday) will be taken as a Government day.

There is a growing impression that prorogation will take place between the 15th and 25th of July. The Premier and other Ministers want to go to Quebec by Aug. 2, unless the Anglo-American conference is again postponed; Sir Charles Tupper has an appointment in London on Aug. 8 which he would like to keep, returning to Canada immediately after; Mr. Foster is anxious to go to British Columbia, where important business matters require his attention, and few, if any, members on either side of the House want to swelter here through August if it can be avoided.

The redistribution bill will not, it is now said, prove the stumbling block that was expected, and will only be debated in the Commons for a few days and sent to the Senate, where it will either be passed or killed without ceremony, and the estimates will not meet with any obstruction, although they will be fully and freely discussed. Under these circumstances, it looks as if there was a reasonable hope that the session, which is 106 days old to-day, has entered upon its last month.

It is, however, but fair to say that one or two members, if so disposed, may spoil this program, and the Premier seems to be taking this into account, for he is said to be negotiating with the United States authorities for a further adjournment of the Anglo-American conference.

The House Proceedings.

In reply to a question by Mr. Fraser of Lambton, Solicitor-General Fitzpatrick said an action had been entered in the Exchequer Court against the British American Bank Note Company. The contract with the company required that stamps should be printed from steel plates, but instead some of them were printed from lithographic stone. These were 70 per cent. less valuable than those from steel plates and were more easily counterfeited. The Government claimed damages to the extent of $800,000. The defence of the company, in brief, was that the Minister of Inland Revenue had accepted the stamps as being up to the terms of the contract.

The Minister of the Interior informed Mr. Rosamond that he had not yet formulated a scheme for assisting the sons of Ontario farmers to settle in the Northwest on the same terms, and with the same assistance, as had been given to the Doukhobors and other foreigners.

The Yukon Charges.

Sir Hibbert Tupper then resumed his speech on the Yukon charges, and in support of his motion for the appointment of a royal commission to investigate the conduct of the Minister of the Interior, Major Walsh, Judge McGuire and other officials in the Yukon, he spoke until a quarter to 6, going over portions of the evidence taken by Commissioner Ogilvie, quoting instances of misconduct and commenting on it, and in conclusion, said:

"Until the information that I have frankly brought to the knowledge of this House is removed or explained, and the impression founded thereon removed from the public mind, as it alone can be by a thoroughly impartial and judicial tribunal, the tribunal called with powers that Mr. Ogilvie has never pretended to have and does not possess, powers that are required now to be given by special legislation, as in the cases of other corruption, this Legislature itself agreed should be given to tribunals investigating matters of that kind, that impression of wrong doing must remain in the pub-

THE SENATE'S RECORD.

In reply to the Grit charge that the Senate is partisan, the Mail and Empire produces from the Canadian Encyclopedia figures which go to show that the House of Commons has, almost without exception, concurred in the Senate amendments, thus testifying to the wisdom of the same. The following are the figures showing the number of bills so amended and concurred in :—

Year.	Number of bills.	Year.	Number of bills.
1867-68	14	1884	50
1869	15	1885	22
1870	8	1886	37
1871	9	1887	36
1872	29	1888	29
1873	22	1889	26
1874	29	1890	26
1875	34	1891	23
1876	17	1892	13
1877	40	1893	21
1878	17	1894	21
1879	28	1895	15
1880	24	1896	4
1880-81	9	1897	0
1882	44	1897	2
1883	28		693

And the following table shows the number of bills introduced by the Government, first in the Senate, and amended by the Senate :—

Year.	Number of bills.	Year.	Number of bills.
1867	15	1888	7
1869	14	1885	6
1870	5	1886	1
1871	4	1887	0
1872	4	1888	1
1873	5	1889	5
1874	0	1890	10
1875	3	1891	4
1876	1	1892	4
1877	0	1893	6
1878	1	1894	8
1879	5	1895	1
1880	6	1896	3
1880-81	9	1896	0
1882	7	1897	1
1883	6		142

These figures are good evidence of two things. First, that the Senate has dealt with the legislation of a Tory Government as freely as with that sent to it by Liberals, and, secondly, that the Senators' amendments have been in the line of betterment of bills proposed. There seems to be some usefulness in the Upper House after all.

Our local evening contemporary is not as enthusiastic over that great Liberal victory in West Elgin now as it was in January last. The glory has faded from sight in a cloud of the most disgraceful fraud and corruption on Canadian records.

No wonder Preston, the Grit organizer, went to look after Finns as immigration agent when he saw the West Elgin exposure in sight. They sent him to deal with the Finns. Well he seems to have been handling rather "fishy" people during the bye-elections, so he still keeps in the same line.

The Globe has a long leading article pretending to deal with the West Elgin bye-election exposure, but it talks, as usual, in high-sounding phases of corruption and fraud at elections without demanding any action on the part of the Government or condemning the men, its friends, who arranged and generalled the whole disgraceful business. Come, let the matter be dealt with.

After Sir Hibbert Tupper's second arraignment of the Government on the Yukon mismanagement and his demand for a royal commission to investigate the charges, staking his political future on the result, the Tarte-Laurier-Sifton combination can only have one reason in refusing a fair and full enquiry. That reason would be that they fear the exposure that might follow.

He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. Duel and Hand-Shake.

Paris, June 29.—A duel was fought yesterday morning with swords between M. Berteaux, Socialist, and M. Millevoye, Republican-Nationalist, as a result of the altercation which took place between them in the Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday. After M. Millevoye had wounded M. Berteaux in the left cheek the two Deputies shook hands.

DEATH OF ADMIRAL HORNBY.

Apoplexy Cut Him Off Suddenly While at a Business Meeting.

London, June 29.—Admiral Sir Windham Hornby, K.C.B., retired, died suddenly of apoplexy yesterday afternoon while presiding at a meeting of the Hotchkiss Ordnance Company.

Sir Windham Hornby was born July 28, 1818, and was the eldest son of Rev. Geoffrey Hornby, rector of Bury, Lancashire. His mother was the Hon. Georgina Byng, daughter of Viscount Torrington. His first wife was Augusta, daughter of Sir William Call, Bart., of Whiteford, County Cornwall, and his second Catharine, widow of Capt. Howard, and daughter of the late Charles Tottenham of Ballycurry, County of Wicklow. Deceased was educated at the Royal Naval College, Portsmouth, was made a lieutenant in 1838, commander 1841, captain 1856, rear-admiral 1865, admiral 1877. He was a prison commissioner from 1877 to 1892.

Lively Riot in Brussels.

Brussels, June 29.—The electoral law introduced into the Belgian Parliament is meeting with much popular antagonism. Last night the neighborhood of the Parliament houses and the palace in Brussels was the scene of serious rioting between the mob and the police and soldiers. Several were wounded on both sides, and many windows and street lamps were smashed.

Strike Riots at Bochum Mines.

Berlin, June 29.—Serious strike riots have broke out in the Bochum coal mines. The troops who were called to protect the non-strikers were attacked by the rioters and compelled to use their side arms and firearms. Many persons were injured. The strikers fired on the miners' houses and the gendarmes returned the fire.

Three strikers were killed during the rioting. The number of men wounded is not known, as many of them were spirited away to private houses. Thirty-six arrests were made yesterday and troops to protect the non-union strikers were sent to the scene of the disturbance.

Fell 10,000 Feet.

Vienna, June 29.—Signor Merighi, an Italian aeronaut, ascended yesterday at Graz, Syria, to a height of 10,000 feet, when his balloon burst and fell. When about 40 feet from the ground, the aeronaut leaped from the car, and was picked up unconscious with a broken leg.

SCHOOL GIRLS' NERVES.

Many a pale, weak school girl, suffering the evil effects of an exhausted nervous system, and thin, watery blood, has been fully restored to the vigor and buoyancy of robust health, by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. The healthful glow on the cheek and the brightness in the eye tell of the building up process which is taking place in the body.

He mind, and, if a commission of that character were granted, I would willingly sink into a position of obscurity, into a position of contempt, into any position that this House or the people of this country would place me, so long as by the fact of a thoroughly fair, judicial and impartial tribunal, the good name of Canada was upheld, and the reputation of Canada, which never aforetime deserved the odium that has been cast upon it, was restored. Whether hon. gentlemen on the treasury benches will use their influence and their power to prevent this inquiry I do not know. I have said several times that the time had come, and come it has, I believe, in the minds of most people in this country, and of a great many people in the Motherland, when Parliament should take this thing up.

Responsibility Is on Parliament.

"The responsibility is on Parliament. I say seriously, Mr. Speaker, that I do charge the Government with gross neglect and incapacity, followed by a carnival of corruption in the Yukon, but bad as all the crimes may have been in that district, it will be a national scandal and a national shame for this Parliament to refuse a judicial commission of inquiry upon the fair and reasonable terms covered by my motion, which I have put in your hands, and the statement of which I have already given and wish to be considered responsible for, as therein stated."

The hon. gentleman resumed his seat amid long and ringing applause from the Opposition, after having spoken over 8¾ hours altogether.

Business After Recess.

After recess the Montreal Island Belt Line Railway bill was referred back to the railway committee, and three bills from the Senate were advanced a stage.

Sir Hibbert Tupper's resolution was then read in English, but not in French, which took three-quarters of an hour and the debate was, on motion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, adjourned until to-day.

Bills Advanced.

The following bills passed through committee, and were read a third time and passed after some discussion:

Respecting the jurisdiction of the Exchequer Court as to railway debts—Mr. Fitzpatrick.

Further to amend the Postoffice Act—Mr. Mulock.

Further to amend the act respecting the Protection of Navigable Waters—Sir Louis Davies.

The Senate amendments to the act to amend and consolidate the acts relating to the Quebec harbor commissioners were concurred in, and the House adjourned at 11.15.

One Bill Withdrawn, One Thrown Out.

Ottawa, June 29.—In the banking and commerce committee yesterday morning the bill to authorize the Bank of Nova Scotia to issue sterling notes for circulation in the Island of Jamaica was withdrawn in consequence of the Government bill covering the same ground for all banks.

The Senate railway committee yesterday morning threw out the Portage du Fort & Bristol Railway bill.

TO BUILD A GRAND HOTEL.

The Projected New C.P.R. Building at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 29.—Robert Kerr, general passenger traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, returned from Montreal yesterday. He said yesterday: "Plans are being prepared for a combined C.P.R. station, general offices and hotel. It will certainly be a most magnificent building."

No More Subsidies.

The following resolution was passed unanimously at the Deloraine Liberal convention: "That the Liberals of the constituency of Deloraine, met in convention here to-day, take the opportunity of protesting against any further subsidy being granted to any private individuals or corporation for the building of a road from Winnipeg to Port Arthur for the present, until the country has had an opportunity of endorsing such legislation."

The meeting was the largest of the kind ever held at Deloraine, the hall being crowded.

Hon. G. W. Ross Visited Schools.

Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education for Ontario, visited a number of the city schools yesterday morning, including the Collegiate Institute. The Minister and Mrs. Ross left last evening for Ontario.

TO GET TRADE.

Americans Somewhat Resentful Concerning Canada and the West Indies.

Washington, June 29.—In official circles the course of Canada in seeking to deal with the British West India commission which have recently been here to negotiate reciprocity treaties is regarded as significant of Canada's desire to enjoy all the trade concessions which this country secures with its British neighbors. The invitation to the several commissions comes from the Canadian Government and not from London, as was at first stated. It was transmitted through the British embassy, and two of the commissions—those of British Guiana and Bermuda—have already accepted it and are in Ottawa conferring with the authorities there. Canada and Bermuda have a convention with a "favored nation" clause, but besides the same rates as are granted to the United States Canada desires further trade arrangements, and doubtless will secure concessions, though the great distance between the ports of Canada and the West Indies is likely to negative these advantages to a large extent.

LIQUID AIR A SURE THING.

Plant Operating in New York With a Daily Capacity of 1,500 Gallons.

New York, June 29.—The liquid air plant built after the designs of Mr. Oscar P. Ostergren and Mr. Moriz Burger to demonstrate the fact that this new force can now be made in large quantity and at low cost, and can be put to many practical uses, will be opened to-day for a demonstration before an invited company of newspaper men and chemists. The plant has been running during the past week and shows the great capacity of 1,500 gallons of liquid air a day. Mr. Ostergren has also invented some vessels in which the liquid air can be controlled safely.

South Perth Election Trial.

Toronto, June 29.—The South Perth election trial will go on at Stratford to-day before Judges Street and Rose. H. J. Wickham will act as registrar of the court. The examination for discovery of Valentine Stock, the defeated Liberal candidate, against whom there is a cross-petition, has been filed at Osgoode Hall. In it he denies all the charges made against him.

The petition against the Conservative member-elect, Mr. Nelson Monteith, and the cross-petition will be tried simultaneously.

No Milk Trust Yet.

Toronto, June 29.—The milk dealers of the city have not as yet accepted the offer of the New York syndicate to purchase their milk routes. The syndicate's offer of $1,000 for each eight-gallon can of milk delivered daily is considered by the dealers in a very favorable light, but nothing definite can be done until the association finds out if the syndicate is willing to agree to their conditions.

Casualties at Montreal.

Montreal, June 29.—Yesterday morning a Madame Martel of Manse street was found on the sidewalk in front of her house, and it looks as if she had fallen or been thrown out of the window. She will die.

A man named Ferrows was run over by a train on the wharf at the foot of McGill street, and died immediately.

"Not a Word of Truth in It."

Ottawa, June 29.—Enquiries of the Government yesterday morning as to the despatch from Washington stating that Canada raised an objection last Friday in the Alaskan negotiations elicits the information that "there is not a word of truth in it," and that "Canada has not budged from the position she has taken from the first."

SERIOUS FIRE AT LETHBRIDGE.

No. 2 Shaft of the Mine Is Closed for Some Days in Consequence.

Winnipeg, June 29.—A Lethbridge despatch says: The fans, air compressor and building of No. 2 shaft were destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The brigade's work saved the hoisting machinery and other buildings. The mine will be closed for some days until the air supply is restored. Loss about $10,000.

London Street Railway Strike.

London, Ont., June 29.—The striking street railway employes held a meeting yesterday morning and decided unanimously to reject Vice-President Smallman's proposition for a settlement of the strike by taking back 25 of the old men, whom he named, to fill positions on the force still vacant. It is understood nothing further will be done towards a settlement until after July 3.

The Crescent Athletic Club has completed a big boxing card for Dominion Day in the Mutual Street Rink, Toronto, as follows: Jim Smith, Toronto, vs. Ed. Lenny, Philadelphia, 20 rounds for featherweight championship of Canada; Pat Kilty will endeavor to knock out two men in 10 rounds; Tom Maher vs. Tug Wilson, 5 rounds. Referee, W. O. Kelly, Buffalo.

Do You Dream?

The fullest examination into the nature and origin of dreams has been made by M. Moreau, the French scientist. He divides dreams into the dreams of health and the dreams that are the result of a diseased state of mind or body.

With regard to the latter it need only be remarked that persistent dreaming is one of the most invariable symptoms of insanity, and as it is a psychological fact that genius is near allied to madness men of genius must be expected to dream more than ordinary men.

With regard to the dreams of health, they are the result of an imperfect state of consciousness or an imperfect state of sleep, according as we look at it. It is obvious that the mind of the clever man, that is constantly occupied with many schemes and thoughts, is more liable to be awake when his body is asleep than that of the dullard, whose mind is often asleep when his body is awake.

Thus the sleep of the plowboy has become proverbial on account of its undisturbed nature. In most cases a man of lively imagination and quick brains is undoubtedly more liable to dream than the dullard.

Part of a Murder Story.

The rising sun had scarcely kissed the snow capped hills that surround our peaceful city last Saturday morning when an awful tragedy occurred on one of the most public thoroughfares. The whiplike crack of a rifle sounded on the clear morning air, and a leaden messenger of death crashed through the brain of a human being, summoning his soul to the judgment bar of God without a moment's warning and with all his sins full blown and "ripened on the tree." The fatal bullet had been sent upon its deadly mission by a hand that a few hours before clasped his victim's hand in friendship. One now lies in the cold embrace of death and occupies a mound in the silent city on the hill; the other languishes in the county jail, alone with his conscience and his deed as he awaits the outcome of the trial for murder that must surely follow.—Lonaconing (Md.) Star.

The mayor of Atlanta was a journeyman printer when elected.

Mayor Quincy of Boston does not wear socks. He is a Christian Scientist.

Samuel J. Swartz is the new mayor of Columbus, O. He succeeds Samuel L. Black. Swartz is German for Black.

TWO MARCHES.

The French are making much of a hundred men of a hussar regiment who have just ridden from Marseilles to Tarascon and back, a distance of 120 miles, in two days.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

At the time of the battle of Wounded Knee General Lawton marched his troop of 100 men 100 miles in 24 hours and brought in every man safe and every horse without a saddle gall.

Four Ugly Beasts.

There are four beasts in the world that can give long odds in the way of ugliness to anything else that lives.

One of them is a monkey, a grewsome looking beast called the bearded saki. This is so utterly grotesque a beast that it would scarcely be safe to let a child or nervous person see it. The ugliness is not of an amusing kind, but of an evil, sinister nature. The beast has a sort of beard and a countenance unlike anything else in shape and lines. The monkey itself is not particularly savage, but is so hideous that the natives of its country, South America, say that no beast of prey, however hungry, will tackle it. Even a hungry jaguar would starve in a cageful of sakis.

Then there is a tree climbing beast that is as queer a nondescript as one could hope to see. It has a sharp face and long, jointed fingers and is called the aye-aye, from its cry. This looks like one of the most appallingly weird of all those strange beasts one sees in nightmares and cannot get away from; but, like the sakis, is of a gentle disposition. It lives in South Africa. A full grown aye-aye looks like a blend of jackal, pig and monkey. Then there is the Tasmanian devil of the antipodes, which is as savage as it is ugly, and, lastly, a species of Asiatic ground rat called the bund.

How Banks Use Their Millions.

Many people wonder how banks use all the money deposited in them and how they manage to pay interest thereon and yet come out at the end of the year with a big profit on the business.

What they do is trade with the money. To the depositor they pay between 1 and 2 per cent, but the money they lend brings them in 3, 5, 6, 7 and even 8 per cent.

For instance, they give loans on all sorts of securities, such as railway debentures, government stock, public company shares, dock warrants, bills of lading, etc.

They also lend money on the security of houses and land, but not to a great extent, as repayments are slow.

When a couple of substantial business men or farmers or professional men back a bill, the bank often lends without any security at all, but now and again they have heavy and ruinous losses on these loans.

All banks, however, have large sums of money constantly lying idle, for they must keep sufficient cash at the various branches to pay checks and even to be more or less prepared for panics. Still, the difference between the 1 or 2 per cent they pay and the 3 to 8 they receive on millions of dollars leaves them an immense profit on the year's business.

Two Dangerous Trades.

File cutting and glass polishing are the two trades in which the operatives are constantly subjected to the slow and stealthy growth of industrial disease. The danger in their case is even more alarming than in those which have been previously dealt with, as the power which daily menaces them is that most pernicious and treacherous evil, lead poisoning. In the case of file cutters the mischief is contained in the bed upon which the file is placed for cutting. This is composed of metallic lead, for, although other substances have been tried, it is declared that none of them give the desired amount of resistance without resilience obtained by a lead bed.

Glass polishing is dangerous in that the powder with which the edges of cut glass are treated contains 60 to 70 per cent of oxide of lead. Here, again, the same remedies are demanded, and fortunately they are not so difficult of attainment. In both these cases the poison pursues its victims with a malice as relentless as it is appalling, which kills or maims as surely as does any explosion or accident by violence.—Fortnightly Review.

OTTAWA EXHIBITION.

The Central Canada Fair this year will undoubtedly be the best ever given in Eastern Canada. Having decided, at the request of patrons, to extend the Fair over two weeks, the directors are sparing no expense to make the Fair equal to any held in Canada. With this object in view there has been large expenditures on new buildings and improvements, the prize lists have been increased while an unusually excellent lot of specialties is being secured.

A feature of the show this year will be the art exhibit, for which a new building has been erected.

A new horticultural hall, has been erected with a running fountain in the centre, and electric light effects on the falling spray will make this building one of the most attractive of the fair.

The exhibit in the dairy department will likely be the largest and best ever seen in Canada, for the directors have not only increased the prize list but have made arrangements to place all cheese and butter exhibited and remaining unsold at the close of the fair in cold storage until disposed of by the Association at seller's own price.

In the horse department special classes, open to farmers only, for carriage horses and heavy draught horses have been added to the prize list and also a class for French Canadian horses.

A special class for Canadian bred Shropshire Down sheep has been put in the premium list in the sheep department.

The main hall is being re-arranged, now that a separate building has been erected for ladies' work.

The specialties will include trotting and running races, for which $3,000 in prizes will be given.

A large lake is being constructed, in the lacrosse field in front of the grand stand and there will be several grand water specialties including a Log Rolling Competition for which large money prizes are being offered.

Already one sensational attraction has been secured for the fair. Miss Ida Le Roy, balloonist will ascend in a common baloon, from which she is fired and makes a parachute decent.

As usual there will be a night spectacular, and the one selected for this year, "The Bombardment of Pekin," is said to be the finest ever produced by Messrs. Hand & Teale, of Hamilton, who have so successfully staged such productions in the past. It is a sea and land spectacular and the lake in front of the grand stand, which will be 200 feet long, 50 feet wide, and three feet deep, will be utilized in the production of the piece.

Another feature will be military exercises by Ottawa's school cadets. An addition is being made to the grand stand and when completed the stand will accommodate 15,000 people.

The directors further announce that this year all who buy a ticket to the grounds after seven o'clock in the evening will get a ticket of admission to the grand stand free of charge.

The Central Canada Fair will open this year on September 11th and close on the 23rd.

Mr. Ed. McMahon, the Secretary, will supply all information wanted.

Cheese and Butter.

Montreal, June 28.—Receipts of cheese to-day were 396 boxes. While there is no apparent change in the market, an undertone of anxiety was evident to-day as to whether prices had not gone too high. The tenor of private cables and another decline of 6d in the public Liverpool cable, to 42s all round, was not calculated to allay this, and should there be any further decline in England, reaction on this side seems inevitable. There was not much doing on spot to-day, and prices were largely nominal, 8 3-4c for finest Ontario, and 8 5-8c for finest Quebec.

Receipts of butter were 1,309 boxes. The market here for creamery does not follow the high prices that were reported yesterday from the country, and they cannot be reconciled with spot conditions. Here prices for creamery range from 17 1-2c to 17 3-4c, and dairy 13 1-2c to 14c.

The regular weekly sale for the Association of Cheese and Butter Manufacturers, was held at the Gould Cold Storage, corner William and Grey Nun streets, yesterday. There was a good attendance. Mr. Wm. Moir, Mr. A. J. Bryce, and others bid freely. The offerings were 178 packages of creamery. The best lot, one of 49 boxes, rapidly reached 17 7-8c; 69 packages of good quality brought 17 3-8c; 22 packages of another line, 16 5-8c, and 22 packages 15 1-4c. This latter line was of fair quality, but cloudy, and the packing was not up to the mark. It is affirmed by the trade that the line sold at 17 7-8c touched the highest figure of to-day's market. In fact, an outside figure. Mr. Leclair, president of the association, and Mr. L. E. Morin, jr., manager and treasurer, were pleased with the sale and said they were determined to make it an honest, business-like success on its real merits. Mr. Potter acted as auctioneer for the butter men.

Ingersoll, June 27.—Offerings to-day, 920 boxes; no sales; 8 1-4c highest bid. Salesmen holding for 8 1-2c.

Campbellford, June 27.—At the cheese meeting held here to-day 1,330 boxes white, were boarded; 685 were sold at 8 7-16c. Watkins bought 235; Hodgson, 205; Alexander, 245; balance unsold.

New York, June 26.—Cheese—There is a good demand by the home trade to-day at 8 1-4c to 8 1-2c for white and colored, both in large and small sizes, and in one or two cases, an 1-8c more was paid for special marks. In export, but little business passing; no sales were made, and prices left open till country markets heard from. Market quiet; some shippers claim to be without orders.

For the Boys' Camp.

A unique announcement has been sent out for the second annual camp of the Y.M.C.A. boys at Sandy Point, Clear lake. The card or announcement is in the form of a tent, the flaps of which have to be lifted in order, to read the announcement inside. The idea has been worked out in first-class style, it being the work of an amateur, Ross Dobbin. The boys will appreciate the design as well as the announcement that is made of their outing, especially as it ends up with the satisfactory statement at the close of "'ot meals at hall hours."

Notice to Bell Telephone Co. Subscribers.

The Subscribers Directory for 1899 will be delivered this week and subscribers are asked upon receiving the new list to destroy all previous lists. It will be noticed that a large number of the subscribers' numbers have been changed, and it will be necessary to give the number from new lists so as to avoid mistakes. Operators will not pay any attention to name, numbers must be given in every case. Subscribers must not allow non-subscribers to use their telephones. It impedes the service, is an injustice to those who pay for their telephones, and is a violation of the contract between subscribers and the company.

TO RE-MODEL THE ORGAN.

Extensive and Up-to-date Changes Made at St. Paul's Church.

That the officers of St. Paul's church heartily appreciate the efforts of their choirmaster and choir and that they believe that progress is not opposed to church work is shown by their decision to have the church again entirely re-modelled and greatly improved. The keyboard is now behind the choir and in this position the organist is unable to direct the vocalists. It will be brought down between the minister and the choir, this being the position recommended by the best makers and organists now. Greater ease and facility in the execution will also be acquired by introducing the tubular pneumatic action in place of the old Tracker equipment. The R. S. Williams Co., organ builders, have the contract and it is expected that they will begin work next week. While their men are at work the organ will be thoroughly cleaned and overhauled from top to bottom.

WEDDING BELLS.

Two Nuptial Events of Interest to Peterborough People Celebrated.

At noon yesterday a pretty event occurred at the residence of the bride's mother, 104 Dublin street, when Miss Minnie Finney was united in holy matrimony to Mr. James G. Cameron, of Franklin, Pa., and formerly of the Peter Hamilton Mfg. Co., Peterborough. The event was solemnized by Rev. Dr. Torrance, of St. Paul's. The bride was attired in a travelling suit of pearl cloth. She was assisted by Miss Clara Sanderson, of Smith, while Mr. W. Cameron, of Norwood, assisted the groom. A delicious repast followed the ceremony, after which the happy couple left on the 4.45 C.P.R. train for their future home in Franklin, Pa. The bride received many costly gifts, one of which was a handsome gold watch from the groom and an elegant tea set from the staff of Mr. C. H. Moore, grocer, George-st.

BARRIE—FAINT.

An event event of much interest was celebrated at the residence of Mr. Wm. Faint, Ashburnham, last evening at 7 o'clock, when his daughter, Miss Effie, was united to Mr. Wm. G. Barrie. Both young people are well known and much esteemed in town.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Shorey, of George-st. church. The bride looked charming in a gown of blue silk, with chiffon trimmings. Miss Clara Faint, sister of the bride, made a very pretty bridesmaid, and Mr. J. S. Stanford, of Toronto, assisted the groom.

The young couple left on the evening express for a wedding trip to Toronto and western points.

Peterborough Will be in Line.

Apropos of the proposal that Dominion Day (July 1) should be celebrated on July 3, did anybody ever hear of a proposal that the celebration of the Fourth of July should be postponed until July 6? If these patriotic anniversaries are worth anything, it should be worth while observing them on the correct date.—Brantford Expositor.

That's the talk. The Express has been saying the same thing. There ought to be sufficient patriotism in this country to make the national holiday worth celebrating for its own sake.—Woodstock Express.

Peterborough will be in line and celebrate the national holiday on the proper day.

FINE PROGRAMME OF BAND MUSIC

CONCERT BY THE ARMY AND NAVY VETERANS' BAND, OF TORONTO,

Assisted by the Band of the 57th Battalion —A Large Audience Present and the Work of the Musicians Much Appreciated.

The concert given in the market hall last evening by the band of the Army and Navy Veterans, of Toronto, assisted by the 57th battalion band, was a very successful event. The audience was large and was highly appreciative of the excellent music discoursed. In the programme high grade operatic music was nicely varied by the popular things of the day and all were rendered in effective style. A large platform had been erected at the north end of the hall and on this the performers took their places, the mingling of the scarlet of the 57th with the blue of the Army and Navy making a pretty picture. Drum Major Bourne of the Army and Navy Veterans acted as master of ceremonies.

The programme was opened with a stirring Canadian march by the combined bands, the Maple Leaf air being received with loud applause. The overture from the Bohemian Girl was next given by the Army and Navy band. Their next selection, from Verdi's opera "Lombardy," was a grand effort, perhaps the best of the evening, both solos and chorus work being very fine. A medley of popular songs was heard with pleasure and the bands combined for the next, the Springfield Commandery march, Mr. Gliddon conducting. The rich, strong, powerful effect was brought out perfectly under Mr. Gliddon's leadership and his porplarity, as well as the fine music, was evidently part cause of the loud and continued applause which followed. The piece had walk song, with vocal variation, caught the crowd and Mr. Richardson was obliged to give it again to satisfy the audience.

Shortly after ten o'clock the programme was concluded. Mr. Richardson, the leader of the Army and Navy band, was heartily congratulated by many upon the splendid playing of his men.

The special train with the veterans and their friends left for Toronto about 10.30.

During the afternoon some military contests were held by the veterans. In the bayonet exercise the winners were: 1, Sergt. Gibbs; 2, Private Turner; 3, Secretary Gray. In the lance exercise: 1, Corporal Lee; 2, Secretary Gray.

THE HOLIDAY EVENT.

The St. Joseph's Picnic Will be a Great Event This Year.

The annual picnic to be held on the grounds at St. Joseph's hospital on Saturday next, Dominion Day, is going to be no ordinary event. This year time, trouble and expense have not been spared in making this a holiday celebration worthy of Canada's national day. In the morning there will be attractions; in the afternoon the programme will continue, and in the evening there will be one of the grandest displays of fireworks seen here in years. Thus the whole day is covered. The 57th Battalion band will be in attendance and will supply a generous programme during the day and in the evening.

Every one should make it a point to attend this picnic. The programme will well repay you, while the funds realised are for a most worthy charitable object. Spend the afternoon and evening at least in the beautiful grounds at St. Joseph's. Dinner and tea will be served on the grounds. 1d151

WILL VISIT ENGLAND.

Rev Father Bretherton, of Emily, Taking a Trip to His Native Land.

On Sunday last the pastor of Emily parish, Rev C S Bretherton, took leave of his congregation in anticipation of his departure for England on Saturday next. A large congregation was present, and among them a number of friends from outside the parish who wished to see him and say good-bye. The occasion was taken advantage of by his loving parishioners to express their appreciation of his services as parish priest and of presenting him with a handsome and well filled purse and a most beautiful bouquet of artificial flowers, most of which came from his native land, as a token of their esteem and love. On the purse was painted a neat design and scroll bearing Father Bretherton's name in full. The address was read by Mr H Matthews, and the presentation was made by two little girls of the parish, Miss Gertie Lucas, daughter of Mr John C Lucas, and Miss Olive Herlihey, daughter of Mr Ed Herlihey.

Rev Father Bretherton suitably replied.

Rev Father Bretherton has a year's leave of absence. Rev Father Scanlon, of the cathedral staff, has been appointed to take charge of the parish, the interests of which will be safe under his faithful labors and energetic management.

A YOUNG MAN'S DEATH.

Mr. Gordon White Passes Away at an Early Age.

The death of Mr. Gordon Percival White, youngest son of the late Samuel White, occurred early this morning at the family residence, 273 Charlotte-st. The deceased young man had been in failing health for some time, and for the last week was sinking rapidly. The end, however, came quietly and rather unexpectedly this morning. The deceased was only twenty years of age. He was a native of Peterborough and was a young man of much promise and a great favorite with his associates. After leaving school he was employed for some time in the county treasurer's office, where by faithful service and courteous demeanor he won the confidence and esteem of his elders with whom he was brought into contact. Leaving there he went with the Peterborough Hardware Co., and there again was a conscientious employee. Nearly two years ago he was taken ill and weakness developed which finally caused his demise. His death will be sincerely regretted by his many friends, who will also extend the deepest sympathy to the sorrowing relatives, who only a few months ago were called upon to mourn the death of another member of the family, Mr Sam White. The funeral takes place from the family residence to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

MAKING NIGHT BRILLIANT.

An Evening Display That Will Attract Thousands—Where it Will be Given.

It is some time since a really good exhibition of fire-works has been given in town, and knowing that general interest would be taken in such an event the committee having in hand details of the annual St. Joseph's Hospital picnic have arranged for a display that will eclipse anything seen here for years. It will be simply grand. The programme is both ample and spectacular. A good deal of money has been spent on it and the committee deserve credit. The fireworks can be seen by attending the picnic at St. Joseph's Hospital on Saturday, July 1st, during the evening. Preceding the display a promenade concert will be given by the 57th Battalion Band. The admission to the grounds is only 25c. Do not fail to see the big display of fireworks and hear the concert. Buses will run every five minutes during the day and evening. 2d

A WANDERING NEGRO.

A Colored Man From Jamaica Living in the Wilds of Smith.

County Magistrate Edmison had a queer prisoner before him yesterday, a coal black representative of the colored race. He gave his name as Richard Johnson and told a queer story with triple tongue speed. He was living away up in the northeastern part of Smith township, but all the women and half the men of the section became afraid of him, probably without reason, and being without means, he was arrested as a vagrant. He said yesterday that he came from Kingston, Jamaica, and that he had been a school teacher there. He became afflicted with a strange disease in one of his legs and said he was curing himself by living in the open air in cool places. The Magistrate promised to dismiss him on Monday next on condition of his leaving the county.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at James Lynch's Drug Store as their giving away to their many customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable remedy, from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases are quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size 50c. and $1.00 Every bottle warranted.

Brevities.

—There was no business at the local police court this morning.

—The Grand Trunk is improving its facilities for handling freight at Lindsay.

—Householders are reminded that on account of Saturday being a holiday tomorrow will be market day.

—The Canadian Canoe Co. to-day shipped a handsome skiff back to Alderman John Sawers, who is resticating at Stony lake.

—The George-st. choir went up to Stony lake this morning on their annual outing. They went up from Lakefield the guests of Mr. J. J. McBain.

—The 15th Battalion, of Belleville, have changed their minds, and have now decided to go to Rochester for July 4th. The 41st, 14th and Toronto Highlanders also go.

—Messrs. J. J. Kennedsley and D. McClay, of Toronto, were in town yesterday and registered at the National hotel. They were arranging for the excursion of the Gooderham and Worts employees, which will be run to town on July 27th.

—The sky was remarkable about ten o'clock last night for a wide streak of perfectly white cloud which stretched across the heavens in the form of a rainbow. It was noted with interest by many. Northern lights were also very noticeable during the night.

—A joint excursion under the patronage of the Canadian Foresters and the Sons of England of Ballieboro, to Bobcaygeon, was held yesterday via Peterborough, Lindsay and steamer Crandella. Owing to the rain the attendance was not as large as was expected.

—Chief Roszel wants an owner for a purse found on the street. Among other things it contains a number of Peterborough and Ashburnham street railway tickets. It is hoped that this valuable security will not be the means of allowing any but the rightful owner to claim the property but it must be acknowledged that the temptation is great.

—Messrs. Sutcliffe & Sons are issuing a souvenir pin, which is a neat thing and handsome as well. They have had these pins made and engraved, "Stony Lake" and "Chemong," on a blue enamel ground with silver border, the whole in the form of a small banner. This is the first thing of the kind got out here and is a credit to the enterprise of the firm. Copies of the pins may be had at the store of Messrs Sutcliffe.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Taffeta foulard and taffeta soyeux woven with beautiful oriental borders are among the latest novelties in silks.

Bayadere and perpendicular stripes appear on every sort of fabric from the simplest cottons to the richest silks and satins.

A season of fancy cotton fabrics is already assured, judging by the large sale of organdies, batistes, dimities, zephyr goods, india muslins, etc.

Very pretty are the costumes of silk warp mohair, drap d'ete and creponette, trimmed with shepherd's check silk in various new artistic color mixtures.

Attractive color blendings appear upon the new matelasse grenadines. The various grounds are craped or basket woven, and the raised designs are in shaded silks.

The most attractive form of the modified blouse waist in tailor style is a model cut low and rounding in the neck, with a deep slashing each side of the open front. All the edges are finished with braid or velvet ribbon.

Wedding gowns in princess style made of satin, duchess and peau de sole, with elegant garnitures of venetian lace and corresponding net draperies, will be in marked favor for brides of this season.

Tiny gold buttons continue to be used by French stellers on toilets of ceremony, made of white lace, net, mousseline de sole, crepe de chine, etc. The buttons are not lavish in number and are consequently effective.

Even with the tailor costume very many women will this summer discard the high, stiff linen collar. In its place will be worn the most dainty and becoming of little turnover styles in cambric, bishop's lawn and insertion.

Many of the leading modistes are making graceful and attractive little stole fronted shoulder capes to wear en suite with various spring and summer costumes. A jacket is not an easy garment to put on or take off, and a cape is no trouble whatever.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

"Will you tell her all?" he asks.

"She'll never rest content now until she discovers it," says Philander sadly.

"Then make a clean breast. I give you permission to speak of my affairs, only——"

"What?"

"Somehow, I'd rather not have Lady Ruth know about Pauline Potter, and the foolish whim that causes her to pursue me."

At this Philander chuckles, being able to see through a millstone with a hole in it.

"I'll warn Gwendolin, then. She entertains a warm feeling for you, John—always has since making your acquaintance; and after the event of today, or rather yesterday, since it is past the witching hour of midnight, she is ready to do anything for you."

"Well, good-night, professor," with a warm shake of the hand, for what they had passed through in common to-night will make these two the best of friends.

When John Craig finds himself alone, he does not at once retire to his small room. Sleep is one of the last things he thinks of just at present, his mind has been so wrought up by the events of the night.

The hotel remains open. It is not customary, for there are no late trains to come in at Valetta, and the people keep early hours, as a usual thing, but this is an exceptional time of the year, preceding Lent, and there may be some other reasons besides that cause an all-night open house.

Doctor Chicago finds a chair, and seats himself, first of all to reflect upon the singular train of events that has marked a red cross in his career since the last sunrise.

His stricken arm pains him, but he has not the slightest fear as to the ultimate outcome of their episode; the self-inflicted scorching with the hot iron effectually ended that.

At last he draws out the piece of paper which Philander secured in the room that marked their downfall, the paper that bears the signature of Sister Magdalen.

Lady Ruth's reminiscence has thus proved of great value to him.

He takes out one of the notes which came periodically to him—it is the one that bore the postmark of Valetta, Malta. Holding the two side by side, he eagerly compares them.

"Yes, the same hand penned both—I would swear to that."

Long he muses, sitting there. The papers have been put away, his cigar falls unheeded to the floor, and his thoughts fly far away.

Finally he arises, with a sigh, and seeks his room, to rest very poorly, between the pain of his arm and the worry of his mind.

Another day dawns upon Valetta.

As yet, the tourists, who sojourn at the city of Malta by the sea, have received no intimation that the disabled steamer is in a condition to proceed.

This means another day on the island, for which few are really sorry, as Valetta is not an unpleasant place in winter.

Our friends gather around the breakfast table, and conversation is brisk. More than once Lady Ruth watches the face of John Craig. She is anxious to hear what success he met with on the preceding night, and will doubtless find an opportunity for a quiet little chat after the meal.

On his part, Craig is uneasy, feeling that he owes her a recital of facts, and yet loth to tell her anything about Pauline Potter, for he is ashamed of his boyish infatuation with regard to the Chicago actress.

So he dallies over his breakfast, hoping that something will turn up to lead her thoughts in another channel, and at least give him a longer respite. Perhaps a message will come from the steamer announcing an immediate sailing.

He is eager to be off. Whatever was in the note Philander picked up in the house of the Strada Mezzodi, it has given John a feverish anxiety to reach some other port.

Ah! here is the good captain of the Hyperion himself, a jolly sea-dog whom every passenger clings to in time of storm and trouble, and who buoys up trembling souls, fearful of the worst, with his hearty, good-natured manner.

He announces aloud for the benefit of his passengers that a notice just posted in the office of the hotel gives the time of the vessel's sailing at seven in the evening, and all passengers are requested to be on board before that hour, if possible.

This means another day on shore. It means that John Craig cannot longer elude the recital of his night's adventures to Lady Ruth.

CHAPTER X.

Lady Ruth captures him very soon after breakfast by means of a clever little piece of diplomacy. John is really amused at the manner in which she manages this affair, and allows himself to be carried off to enjoy a bird's-eye view of the harbor which she has discovered at the end of the piazza, and which he must pass an opinion on.

The others do not follow, Philander and Aunt Gwen, because they know what is going on, and Sir Lionel, on account of a bore of a nobleman who has fastened upon him, and talks an incessant streak.

Miss Caprice, as Aunt Gwen has christened Lady Ruth, suddenly develops a new phase in the conversation.

"Do you know what time it was when you came in last night?" she says, shaking a finger at him, wherein John laughingly declares his ignorance having failed to take note of it.

"Just a quarter of two."

"Is it possible? Really, I——"

"Now, it would be only justice to myself to tell how I happened to know. Awaking from sleep with a slight headache, I arose to get my smelling-salts, and noted the time.

"Just then I heard Aunt Gwen's angelic voice calling down. My first fear was that Uncle Philander had gone off on some sort of racket, and was returning in no condition for a gentleman, for which suspicion I humbly beg his pardon, for he's just as lovely as a man ever could be."

"A fine little fellow, I'll declare, and he stood by me like a hero," declares John, with great earnestness.

"Well, I'm a woman, you know, and curious. I poked my head out of the window, and saw that you were with the professor. Of course, I knew he was all right then."

The charming naivete with which she makes this engaging remark almost takes John's breath away. He feels a mad desire to take her in his arms, and to call her "you blessed darling," or some other similarly foolish pet name.

Fortunately he contents himself with putting his feelings into a burning look, the ardor of which causes the cheeks of the young ma'mselle to grow as red as fire, and she looking the other way at the time.

"I promised to tell you what success I had in my search" he begins, knowing the confession to be inevitable.

Now she looks at him eagerly, expectantly.

"Yes, and I have tried to read the result in your face, but fear that it has not been flattering."

So he tells her all, dealing lightly with the matter of Miss Pauline, though she is such an important factor in the game that she cannot be ignored.

Lady Ruth looks him directly in the eyes with her own steel-blue orbs, so honest, so strong, that John has always delighted to meet her gaze, nor does he avoid it now.

"Perhaps I have no business to ask, Doctor Craig, but this Pauline Potter—what is she to you, what was she to you that she goes to all this trouble? Have you a secret of hers which she desires to gain?"

"I desire to retain your good opinion, Lady Ruth, and consequently am anxious that you should know all. I shall not spare myself one iota.'

So he explains how the fascinating actress caught his boyish fancy some two years previous, and how devoted he had been to her until he learned of her duplicity.

Then followed his denunciation in the presence of several admirers, after which he had not seen her again until the night before.

All of which is told in a frank way, and listened to with earnestness.

At the conclusion of his narrative, John looks again into Lady Ruth's face to see whether she condemns him or not, and is gratified to discover a smile there.

"I think you are a little to blame, Doctor Chicago. Like all young men, you were dazzled by the bright star that flashed before your eyes; but your illusion lasted only a brief time, for which you may be thankful. As to this woman's endeavor to regain your regard, it shows what a brazen creature she is."

The fine contempt she feels is written on her face, and John is glad he made a full confession of the whole matter.

"I hope I will never see her again," he says, in a penitent way.

"So do I," she echoes, and then turns a trifle red, hastily adding, "for your sake, doctor. Now, tell me what you hope to do about finding your mother."

Thus, with the diplomacy of a general, upon finding herself growing uncomfortable she instantly changes the situation and brings a new question to the fore.

John does not notice this. He is too well pleased with the fact that she overlooks his indiscretion, and still grants him her valued friendship.

He goes on to explain his plans.

They are now elaborate. The paper which Philander Sharpe discovered gives him a new clue, and this he means to push to the utmost.

He anticipates success, but is gradually learning to tone down his enthusiasm, realizing that difficulties beset his way.

Thus all has been told, and he has not lost rating with the proud English girl, for whose good opinion he is coming to be solicitous.

Presently Aunt Gwen is heard calling her niece, and they think it time to join the rest, as the plans of the day are being discussed.

There are still many things to be seen on the Island of Malta by the curious. A few even start for the city of Civita Vecchia, in the centre of the island, but our friends decide against such an expedition, as there is a chance of delay, and the captain may refuse to hold his vessel an hour longer than is absolutely necessary.

Again they start out, and in seeing various curious things the day is gradually spent.

John is glad that no sign is discovered that would indicate the presence of Pauline Potter near them.

He has feared lest the vindictive actress might take it into her head to suddenly appear, and publicly denounce him as her recreant lover, and, thinking thus, is especially glad that he told Lady Ruth the whole story.

So the day ends.

It has been a remarkably pleasant one to all of them, and John has certainly enjoyed it to the utmost. When I say all, there should be an exception, for Sir Lionel is in anything but an angelic frame of mind.

He has been wont to look upon the young American's chances with regard to winning Lady Ruth as exceedingly slim, when such a hero as himself enters the field.

This is an Englishman's egotism, sure enough. To him Doctor Chicago seems only a boy, and he looks upon John's daring to enter the lists against him as a specimen of Yankee assurance.

This day teaches Sir Lionel that nothing can account for the vagaries of a girl's mind. She even shows a decided preference for the society of the American, allows him to carry her parasol, to assist her up the steps when they visit the signal tower, and on several occasions they manage to slip off by themselves, and can be seen eagerly comparing notes and exchanging opinions respecting the magnificent views that are to be suddenly discovered at various points.

The British soldier is too old a campaigner not to know what all this signifies, though the bull-dog elements in his composition will not let him dream of giving up as yet.

"It's all owing to that beastly little affair of yesterday. The boy made a big jump in her estimation, when he saved that child. It was a brave act. I don't want to say a word to the contrary, and the lad has grit, more than I ever dreamed of; but I want Lady Ruth, by Jove, more than I ever wanted anything in all my life, and, as I've said before, when a British soldier fails to succeed one way he will another."

Thinking thus, Sir Lionel cudgels his brains during the day, in order to invent some coup de grace by means of which he may cleverly regain his lost prestige.

When a man allows his passions to get the better of his judgment and sense of fair play, he is really but a single step from being a scoundrel, and although Sir Lionel would have vehemently scouted the suspicion of his doing anything to sully his fair name, he nevertheless, in his desperation at being worsted in a love affair by a mere boy, goes about some things that are hardly fair.

An Honest Admission.

KRUGER IS STILL STUBBORN.

Persists in His Demand for Arbitration as a Condition.

Sir Alfred Milner Backed Up by an Immense Mass Meeting at Cape Town—Sir John Gordon Sprigg, Former Premier, Said That Unless Sir Alfred Milner Was Supported There Was Danger of Colonial Secession.

London, June 29.—The Johannesburg correspondent of The Standard says President Kruger, it is understood here, persists in his demand for arbitration as an essential condition in any settlement. In the meantime the Transvaal continues buying provisions and war material, and it has arranged with the Netherlands Railway Company to have absolute control of the railway lines in the Orange Free State in the event of war.

Big Meeting at Cape Town.

Cape Town, June 29.—A meeting of 4,000 loyalists, under the presidency of the mayor of Cape Town, was held here last evening, and adopted, with the greatest enthusiasm, resolutions supporting Sir Alfred Milner, Governor of the colony and British high commissioner in South Africa, in his recent negotiations with President Kruger, and thanking the Canadians and Australians for their offers of assistance. An immense overflow meeting was also held. The former, at which the Right Hon. Sir John Gordon Sprigg, former Premier of the colony, and numerous other political leaders, were present, was addressed by several Johannesburgers. Sir Gordon Sprigg also addressed the meeting, declaring that unless Sir Alfred Milner was absolutely supported there was danger that the Cape Colony would secede from the Empire. He declared himself convinced that Great Britain was solidly behind the Imperial Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, whose recent speech before the Unionists of Birmingham, England, dealing with the Transvaal problem, he warmly commended.

Free State's Mediation.

Pretoria, June 29.—Differences between President Kruger and Fischer, a member of the Executive Council of the Orange Free State, who was the bearer of 65th-promise suggestions from the Free State in the matter of the disputes between the Transvaal and Great Britain, have been concluded. The general impression is that Fischer's mission has been successful. He afterward conferred with Mr. Conyngham Greene, the British diplomatic agent here.

EDUCATION WAS THE TOPIC.

Work Done by the International Council of Women on Wednesday.

London, June 29.—At yesterday's session of the International Council of Women, Mrs. Stanton Blatch read a paper on "Primary Education," advocating the use of manual works at every step of education, but deprecating the introduction of domestic occupations and trying to adapt trades to educational processes.

Mrs. Miller advocated her well-known views on physical development through the reorganization of the food question.

Miss Carlyle's Paper Read.

At a meeting devoted to women inspectors, the Hon. Mrs. Lyttleton presiding, a paper by Miss Carlyle of Canada, was read by Miss Carty. It showed the strides made in Canada in regard to female inspectors and labor legislation generally.

American Lady Died in London.

London, June 29.—Miss Ellen C. Johnson, superintendent of the Massachusetts Women's Reformatory Prison, died suddenly yesterday morning at the London residence of the Bishop of Rochester, the Right Rev. Edward Stuart Talbot, D.D., where she was a guest. It is believed she expired from heart failure, resulting from excitement in reading a paper at Tuesday's meeting of the International Council of Women. The deceased was attended by Mrs. Dr. Barrows of Boston.

VERDICT FOR $20,000

Awarded to Madame Resal, Whose Husband Was Lost in La Bourgogne Disaster.

Paris, June 29.—The action for damages brought by Madame Resal, as a result of the loss of her husband by the sinking of the French Line steamer La Bourgogne, in collision with the British ship, Cromartyshire, July 4, 1898, off Sable Island, Nova Scotia, has resulted in a verdict against the company of 100,000 francs. The plaintiff at the same time was debarred from claiming any money lost with M. Resal which may hereafter be recovered. The court found the company responsible for the acts of the captain, who was declared to be at fault in not bringing the ship to a standstill after the collision, in losing time in launching the boats, and not furnishing the passengers with lifeboats.

The Danger of PILES

Too frequently overlooked, Dr. Chase's Ointment a Prompt and Positive Cure.

The suffering caused by the intense itching and burning sensations of piles is only one of the horrors of this disease, for there is always great danger of piles developing into fistula, one of the most disgusting diseases imaginable.

Even the great danger and expense of an operation are preferable to running the risk of contracting this most loathsome of diseases.

But there is no necessity for a surgical operation for piles. Dr. Chase's Ointment is guaranteed to cure any case of piles, no matter of how long standing, or how aggravated the case may be, so long as piles have not become fistula.

It is only by rare chance that internal treatment will cure piles. But it matters not from what cause they arise, Dr. Chase's Ointment will at once stop the itching and burning, and soon effect a perfect cure.

You can use Dr. Chase's Ointment with fullest assurance that what has cured scores of thousands of cases of piles will cure you. For sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.
Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 28th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.

Very Hard Indeed.

There are so many things that appear unnecessary, and which for the life of us we can see neither purpose nor end. It may be corns are just one of those thorns in the flesh the why and the wherefore of which we cannot see. Nevertheless they are the kind that are easily removed. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor makes short work of them. Try it and see how nicely it coaxes them away. There's none other than Putnam's Corn Extractor. Sold by druggists.

Ladies, Joyful News!

It is not very often that the ladies of Peterborough have an opportunity of having among them Prof. Dore Lewend, of Toronto, the world known hair goods artist, whose skill in the manufacture of both ladies' and gent's wigs, toupees, wavey bang fronts, switches, etc., is second to none. He will be at the Snowden house, Peterborough, on Saturday, July 8th, with a full sample line of hair goods styles.

AN ACTIVE LIFE.

Interesting Story of the Life of Major Howard.

The following reference of the late Major Howard, of Hastings, which appears in last week's Star, will be read with interest by his many friends in Peterborough:—

"On Monday afternoon, the 12th inst., our village was startled by the sudden and unexpected death of one of its most widely known and most respected citizens, in the person of Mr. John A. Howard. Though for several months in a poor state of health, but able to attend to business, no one anticipated any immediate danger. He was only a short time before on the street and at the very time of his death was in the act of raising up from the floor, where he was making some change in the telephone office. For 43 years he has been a citizen of Hastings and intimately associated with all of its interests. That he was a genius of more than ordinary make up, was fully exhibited in the starting and successfully establishing of the Hastings Star, without any prior knowledge of the business or educational advantages whatever. By trade he was a carriage maker, which he prosecuted up to the time of publishing the Star, 1878. He also possessed a natural taste for mechanics and it was more than an ordinary piece of mechanism he could not take apart or put together.

"Though of Irish extraction, he was born in Sidney, New South Wales, Australia, on the 12th January, 1835, his father being Sergt. Mathew Howard, of the 17th Regt. Foot. His mother died while he was a child, and at sixteen years of age he came to Canada, to a sister, Mrs. Henry O'Neill, who at that time lived in the township of Cavan, Durham Co., but who has since returned and is at present living in Australia. For a time he lived in Port Hope, afterwards coming to Otonabee, living for some time at Mather's Corners. Here in January, 1856, he married Catharine Roach, the nuptial knot being tied by the late Rev. Father Farrell, of Peterborough, late Bishop of Hamilton. She with three of four sons survive to mourn his loss, viz., Patrick and Thomas of Hastings, and Chester, of Ottawa.

"It was in 1859 that he became a citizen of Hastings. In the early sixties, with others, he took an active part in the organization of a volunteer corps. He soon rose from a private to an ensign, then captain, and in 1866 was raised to the rank of major.

He also took an active part in the incorporation of Hastings into a municipality, and for several years with T. Coughlan as Reeve, filled the position as councillor, along with H. M. Fowlds, John Peters and William Orr, with John Sharpe as clerk, all of whom but H. M. Fowlds have passed over to the great majority.

"In 1878 he started the Hastings Star, the first several issues being printed on a small letter press. From the encouragement which he received from some of the citizens, particularly the late John Peters, he purchased a printing plant. It may be of interest to know that for some time the type was set in a galley without the aid of a stick, so little knowledge did he possess at the time about the business. Perseverance and ingenuity, however, overcame every obstacle and success followed the labor of his mind and hands. The big fire of 1882 wiped out the printing plant, but Phoenix like it was speedily replaced and not one issue was missed. For nearly seventeen years he remained at the helm and in May of 1894 sold out to the present manager.

"In politics he was a Conservative of Conservatives, a man of strong convictions and sanguine temperment, not easily baffled or discouraged in anything he undertook. In religion a Roman Catholic. His long residence, and seventeen years as editor of the Star and associations with other matters, made him widely known. The remains on Tuesday afternoon, after receiving the rights of the church, were interred in the Hastings R.C. cemetery. The family have the sympathy of the entire community."

DALLEY'S SYRUP of HORE HOUND AND ELECAMPANE is warranted a cure for coughs.

A Rich "Pick-up" in Campbellford.

On Thursday evening Mr. H. Le Brun returned from Campbellford where he had been engaged in completing the purchase of Mr. W. W. Tyrrell's splendid stock of ready-made clothing. Mr. Tyrrell has been Campbellford's best clothing merchant for the past six years, but has lately decided to move west. He made a private offer to sell out to Mr. Le Brun, whose firm is rapidly pushing its Campbellford branch to the front. Mr. Le Brun closed out the deal and took in the whole stock at 62 1-2 cents on the dollar, a price much below the wholesale figures. Peterborough as well as Campbellford is to enjoy the benefit of the lucky bargain—as the sale is now in full swing at the City Clothing Store, George-st. The stock is right up to the season, well worth a hundred cents on the dollar, and as "good as wheat." These bargains have the right of way and will be railroaded through at express speed. Be on time.

THE CHURCH PARADE.

The Annual Service for the 57th Battalion on Sunday Next.

All members of the 57th Battalion are reminded of the annual church parade, which will be held on Sunday next, July 2nd, to St. John's church. As this is the only march out that the battalion is having before the fall drills it is of special interest and all the men of battalion are earnestly requested to attend. Following Dominion Day it will be partly in the nature of a celebration of the national holiday. A full attendance, therefore, is expected. C Squadron of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons and Capt. Johnston's company of the 46th have been asked to assist. Any of the battalion who are without proper equipment are requested to see the captains immediately. The men will fall in at the drill shed at 3 o'clock.

AT ST. ANDREW'S.

Pleasing Entertainment Given by the the Rines Brothers.

Owing to the band concert and other attractions last evening the entertainment at St. Andrew's school hall was not very largely attended, about one hundred people being present. The programme was furnished by the Rines brothers, well known in town. The first part was chiefly musical, a number of solos and duets being sung. Following this a series of excellent limelight views descriptive of a trip from Canada to Rome was presented. The explanations and references accompanying these were very interesting and the entertainment was both pleasant and instructing.

ART SCHOOL EXAMS.

Record of Peterborough Institutions at Provincial Art School.

The result of the recent examinations at the Provincial Art school are out and Peterborough does not come off without honors. In the Public Library mechanical course Peterborough students were awarded 5 proficiency certificates. Galt Public Library is the only other one mentioned in this class, securing 2 proficiency certificates in the primary course and 2 in the mechanical course. In the High School and Collegiate Institute class, proficiency certificate was secured by a student of the Peterborough Collegiate, and Mr. Stanley W. Matthews is awarded a teachers' certificate in the primary course.

REMEMBERED THE ORGANIST.

Mr. Percy Owens Recognized at St. John's—The Rector on the Choir.

The St. John's choir enjoyed a reunion in the school house last evening. It was a complimentary function to Mr. Percy Owens, the late organist, now of Toronto, who was present. A pleasant evening was spent, vocal numbers and choruses being contributed by different members of the choir. Rev. J. C. Davidson called Mr. Owens forward and presented him on behalf of the choir and congregation of St. John's with a substantial sum of money as an evidence of the warm feelings of the choir and congregation towards him.

Mr. Owens returned thanks in a few informal words, remarking that in his three years' term of office he had had no unpleasant experiences of any kind in connection with the choir and he could always look backward with great pleasure on his connection with St. John's.

The Rector then took occasion to express his appreciation and that of the congregation of the faithful work of the choir. They remembered that many past members who had done excellent service in their time. There were few posts in which people could serve the church more effectively than in the choir, upon the efficiency of which the proper conduct of the services so largely depended. Though their work was done for higher objects still he wished them to know of his personal gratitude and that of the congregation.

Refreshments were then partaken of and the evening brought to a close.

The Queen Kept the Letter.

The late Mrs. Keeley used to tell the following story about the visit she paid to the queen at Buckingham palace on the occasion of the jubilee in 1887. Being incredulous of the genuineness of the invitation, she was disposed to treat the royal command as a joke and wrote a rather sarcastic letter to the official, a personal friend, who had addressed it to her. This he gave to the queen, and the veteran actress was a little disconcerted when her majesty told her she had read the letter. Mrs. Keeley begged that it should be restored to her. "No, no, Mrs. Keeley," answered the queen, "it is safely pasted in my autograph book. You'll never get it again."

Benny's Failure.

Benny, the 4-year-old member of the family, had been trained to believe in the deep water form of baptism. This is believed to be the reason why he was trying to plunge the household cat into a bucket of water. The animal resisted. It howled and scratched and clawed and used violent language. Finally Benny, with his hands covered with scratches and with tears in his eyes, gave it up. "Darn you!" he said. "Go an be a Methodis' if you want to!"—Chicago Tribune.

Modern Surgery.

"The average man would be greatly surprised to know how far the surgical world has moved in the last quarter of a century," said a prominent New Orleans practitioner. "It's hard to realize, even for one in the profession. We do things as a matter of course at present that only a few years ago would have been looked upon as downright murder.

"I remember back in the seventies I was called to attend a man who was shot through the intestines with buckshot, making a number of perforations. I promptly opened the abdominal cavity and sewed up the wounds, which at that time was regarded as a wildly daring operation. The man died from unavoidable complications, and his friends were determined to prosecute me for killing him. In fact, I had a close squeak from unpleasant consequences, for a great many other surgeons condemned my procedure in the severest terms.

"Just think of it! Today things are exactly reversed, and a surgeon who failed to open the abdomen in such a case would undoubtedly be punished for malpractice. This is one instance out of many. It is no exaggeration to say that the modern surgeon saves thousands of lives that his earlier brothers would have abandoned without an effort. 'Necessarily fatal' would have been the verdict and the sufferer assisted into the valley of the shadow by a merciful opiate."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Effort to Create Life.

The news that Wohler had obtained, in 1828, out of inorganic stuffs a certain substance, urea, which occurs in nature as a distinct product of vital activity in animals, upset current ideas. Then, later on, Liebig in Germany and Frankland in this country made several important syntheses, and in 1860 Berthelot published his epoch making work, "Organic Chemistry Based Upon Synthesis," in which he proved that the synthesis of organic bodies must be pursued and may be achieved in a quite systematic way, going step by step over the whole series of organic compounds.

At the present time about 180 different acids, aromatic oils, fats, coloring matters, and so on, which are only found in nature as products of vital activity, have already been prepared in our laboratories out of inorganic matter. Some of them are already fabricated in this way for trade. Every year brings some new achievement in the same direction; so that the main interest now lies, not so much in adding a new product to the already long list of chemically prepared organic substances, as in catching the secrets of the tiny living laboratories in the vegetable and animal cells.—Prince Krapotkin in Nineteenth Century.

Without Shuffling or Evasion.

From Fenimore Cooper and other authorities we have gained the impression that the Indian is a stolid, severe individual, with no sense of the white man's humor, but one red brother showed himself quite a civilized joker in the United States court. He was on the stand in a hotly contested case, and Attorney D. R. Bailey of Sioux Falls was after him in the most approved fashion of cross examination. Finally, after apparently frightening the Indian with the awful consequences which would follow the slightest deviation from the truth, Mr. Bailey took his most portentous tone and solemn manner and demanded:

"Now, sir, I want you to tell me the exact truth, without any shuffling or evasion. I want you to look me square in the eye and tell me how you get your living, sir."

The Indian looked straight at Mr. Bailey, and, with that imperturbable air familiar to all acquainted with the red men, simply said, "Eat."

The courtroom roared, even Judge Carland smiled and Mr. Bailey let the witness go.

Good For a Whole Chapter.

The overturned coaches lay at the foot of the embankment, where they had rolled when the train left the track. The wrecking train had arrived, the crew had gone to work, and the wounded had all been cared for.

"Will you please tell me your personal experience in the accident?" asked a reporter, whipping out his notebook.

"You will read about them, sir," replied the solemn looking passenger with a slightly foreign accent, whom he had addressed, "in the book I shall certainly publish about this country."—Chicago Tribune.

Well Answered.

In the course of a lecture to an unimpressionable Scotch audience De Rougemont, talking of "the dear, dead days," explained that he had a good memory and a better imagination. An unbeliever in the unreserved seats persisted in asking unanswerable questions, which ultimately brought out an interesting reflection.

"I have always found," said the wanderer, "that it was enough for one ass to bray at a time."

And thereafter he had peace.

London, June 30.—Queen's Hall was crowded last evening by a public meeting convened by the political section of the International Council of Women. The case was worked up by Special Treasury Agent Lewis of New York, who found Busch in Toronto, followed him to Hamilton and Detroit and ordered his arrest here.

TITHES BILL READ TWICE.

House of Commons Put It Through by a Good Majority.

London, June 30.—The House of Commons last evening by a vote of 314 against 176 passed the second reading of the Tithe Rent Charges bill, which relieves the clergy of certain local rates. The bill has been hotly opposed by certain Liberal-Unionists, and the Government's large majority is due to the abstention of the Irish members.

Mr. George Whitele, Conservative member for Stockport since 1893, has resigned his seat as a protest against the bill.

BRUSSELS IN MOB'S HANDS.

Storm of Verbosity Renewed in the Chamber of Deputies.

The City in a Revolutionary Flight—Tram Cars Overturned and Used as Barricades—Several Inoffensive Onlookers Were Wounded by the Police—A Member Dubbed "Murderer," "Bandit," Etc., in the Chamber of Deputies.

Brussels, June 30.—The storm of verbosity was resumed in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. The Socialists hurled anathemas at M. J. Van Denpeereboom, who endeavored to explain the action taken by the police on Wednesday, and the Socialists persistently interrupted and insulted the Premier, reproaching him with being responsible for the conflicts between the people and the police. Later it was announced that King Leopold had a long conference with MM. Van Denpeereboom, Bergeron and Beernaert, who has been summoned from The Hague.

It is reported that MM. Van Denpeereboom will resign.

The Liberals, being in a hopeless minority in Parliament, abandoned the idea of fighting the bill by Parliamentary methods, and started a campaign of obstruction.

Yesterday the city wore a completely revolutionary aspect. Tram cars were overturned and used as a barricade. The commander of the Civic Guard asked to be supplied with 15,000 cartridges. Street lamps were smashed, the rioters pricked the horses of the gendarmes with needles, and many of the animals fell with their riders. Several inoffensive onlookers were injured by the swords of the police.

The scene in the Chamber quite beggars description. Van Denpeereboom was dubbed "Murderer," "Bandit" and "Minister of civil war," by the Socialists, who declared that they would appeal to the King.

PACIFIC CABLE PROJECT.

A Deputation From the Eastern Cable Company Sees Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach.

London, June 30.—The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, received yesterday afternoon a deputation for the Eastern Telegraph Company. The Marquis of Tweedale and others expressed objection to the state competition with private enterprise, referring to the proposed Pacific cable, and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach promised to furnish a written reply. In the meantime, he reminded the deputation that the Pacific cable project was not new, and was one the Government had a perfect right to undertake.

Mr. Chamberlain said that while customers justly complained of the existing high rates, it was mainly for the sake of an all-British cable connecting all portions of the Empire that the Government entertained the present project.

TO CIVILIZE CHINA.

Dr. Gilbert Reid's Institute Meets With Great Favor.

London, June 30.—The United States is taking the lead in the foundation of the new international institute at Pekin, which owes its origin to Dr. Gilbert Reid. The object of the institute is to place both the newest inventions of Europe and America, as well as the latest ideas and sciences, within reach of the mandarins and learned classes of Pekin, without any idea of religious proselytism. As far as possible each great power is to have a museum of its own, forming part of the institute, and $100,000 has already been raised for the purpose in this country, $60,000 in Germany, while now Dr. Reid has addressed circulars to the various foreign Governments, appealing for financial support. The circulars are strongly endorsed by each of the foreign envoys in Pekin. Pekin is not only the administrative headquarters of China, but also the intellectual centre of the empire, and it is anticipated that through this international institute the work of civilization will be rapidly extended and fostered throughout China.

SIFTON'S REPLY TO TUPPER.

The Minister of the Interior Declares His Innocence.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Backs Him Up—Mr. Clarke Wallace Pointed Out the Shallowness of the Defence Put Up—A Beast by Hon. George E. Foster—House Had Another Late Sitting—Debate Adjourned.

Ottawa, June 30.—The debate on the resolution of Sir Hibbert Tupper impeaching the Government on the maladministration of Mr. Sifton in the Yukon has been more protracted than was anticipated, and at 2 a.m. was still progressing with but a slim chance of a division being reached before daylight. The debate has been marked by good speeches from Messrs. Wallace and Foster, both of whom were severe in their condemnation of the Government, and a rather lame defence of the Government by Mr. Sifton, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Louis Davies and Mr. Paterson, about the only point made in the four speeches being the promise by Mr. Sifton, endorsed by the Premier, that if the final report received from Mr. Ogilvie was not satisfactory a further investigation would be held. This sounds well, but does not mean anything, because the final report is pretty sure to be satisfactory to the Government.

MR. SIFTON'S REPLY.

The Minister of the Interior Challenges Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper to Definiteness.

Ottawa, June 30.—After a few unimportant questions had been answered in the House yesterday afternoon, Hon. Mr. Sifton rose to reply to Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper's attack on him and his administration of the Yukon, as embodied in Sir Hibbert's resolution. Mr. Sifton was received with applause by his friends, and was repeatedly cheered during the two hours and a half he occupied in speaking. He commenced by claiming that in all the length of his speech, and in the long resolution he had introduced, Sir Hibbert had not made one charge of personal dishonesty against him (Sifton) or any official in the Yukon. He challenged the member for Pictou (Tupper) to rise in his place and on his responsibility as a member of Parliament make a charge of personal wrongdoing against him (Sifton), and pledged himself that if this was done the matter would be referred to the committee on privileges and elections in less than 15 minutes. (Government cheers.) He criticized Sir Hibbert's speech and resolution at great length, claiming that there was nothing whatever in them but a rehash of the newspaper yarns which had appeared last autumn. He ridiculed some of the charges, such as Major Walsh being connected in any way with a claim located by his cook, and commented severely on the vague and indefinite nature of the so-called charges. He defended the investigation made by Mr. Ogilvie, of whom he spoke in the highest terms of praise. He said that all of the evidence had not been received, and that when it was, it would be carefully examined, pledging himself that if anything was found to show any necessity for further investigation, further investigation would be had. He held that the attack on him was a political one, and ridiculed the idea of questions of governmental policy or departmental administration being referred to a commission of judges.

Tribute to Walsh.

Continuing, he paid a high tribute to Major Walsh, who, he didn't believe, had done anything that was corrupt or improper. As to his private character he (Mr. Sifton) didn't want to go into that, but thanked God his position was that of defending a brave man rather than to traduce his character and follow him into private life. (Liberal cheers.) The hon. member had cited the case of the Pacific Railway commission, but that was a commission appointed by Sir John Macdonald to investigate the conduct of his opponents. He had cited, too, the case of the Curran bridge, but in that case the Minister just sent down an officer of his own department to investigate, and that was what the Government was doing in the case of the Yukon. But

WORSE AND WORSE.

No one who knows Mr. Macnish will believe that he had any act or part in the reprehensible tactics that were employed in West Elgin. We may be sure that the dishonest element would take good care not to let Mr Macnish know what they were doing, and anyone who reads Mr Macnish's disclaimer may see how deeply wounded he is by the disclosures which have been made.

This is from an article in which the Globe is letting down Mr. Macnish and Mr. Dryden. If Mr. Macnish did not know that the Government's lantern brigade was working in such a high-handed and wholesale manner in his interests he must have been living away above his campaign workers, for these outsiders seem to have permeated the whole election, corrupting the voters, working the sheriff, living with Mr Macnish's agents and making themselves generally useful. According to Mr Macnish's own statement they were taken into the houses of his friends, were introduced by local Grit workers, and where was poor, innocent Mr Macnish all this time? But admit that the Globe is right and Mr Macnish, poor man, was imposed on by those who indulged in "the reprehensible tactics," what does it show? Surely that the Grit headquarters, the managers who had charge of the bye-elections were accountable for the presence of the gang who were guilty of this disgraceful and reprehensible conduct. This, then, brings the guilt nearer the fountain head, nearer the Government, and emphasizes the necessity for a cleaning out among the men at the head who imposed on Mr Macnish and counselled this corruption and fraud.

And then in Mr Dryden's case, does the Globe's version of it not expose the insulting and hypocritical character of that letter Mr Dryden wrote to the local "party managers" in South Ontario. The Globe says the corruption and fraud came from outside, and, notwithstanding that the local men were innocent, Mr Dryden writes and says they must "set their faces against corruption." Would it not have been more consistent if the Globe is right and Mr Dryden is sincere for him to have written his letter to the party managers at headquarters and asked them, the men who had been guilty, to "set their faces against corruption."

The whole record is of such monstrous iniquity that the hypocrisy practiced since is simply disgusting to honest men. The whole combination must go in order to better things.

THE West Elgin exposure and disgrace has made more emphatic than ever the feeling that it is time for a change at Toronto. These corrupters must go.

ANYTHING to hold office was the watchword of the Liberal leaders, and their election organizers were equal to the call and shewed their readiness to resort to any fraud, to practice any corruption to win an election.

THE West Elgin case has done one good thing—it has sealed the fate of the Hardy-Ross combination. The people will demand new men and new methods when the opportunity comes.

MR. TARTE, who is now on his way to Europe, may meet Mr Preston while on the continent, and there they will be able to exchange greetings in the light of the West Elgin election exposure. Preston was evidently a man who is in full sympathy with Tarte, who said that "prayers would not win an election." Preston evidently did not depend on prayers, although he was in the business some when at home in Toronto.

THE Toronto Telegram (independent) hits the nail on the head when it says:—

It is not corruption, but the exposure of corruption, which causes the Globe to roll its pious eyes in horror at the thought of the country finding out the height and depth and length, breadth and iniquity of the means employed to keep the Ontario Government in office.

To-morrow will be Canada's national day and the day will be observed as a public holiday by all loyal citizens of Peterborough.

there was no investigation into the attempts of Tory friends to steal the half-breeds' homesteads, which led to the Northwest rebellion, nor to investigate the plundering and robbery by some of the men who were sent up to put down the rebellion, or when a Minister admitted he took $25,000 from a railway subsidy to corrupt electors with. What involved the fair name of Canada, which the hon. gentleman had talked so much about, was the character of her public men, not whether an Indian dog driver took in Dawson City, or a cook got a mining claim. "The fair name of Canada," said Mr. Sifton, in conclusion, "has never suffered when a Liberal administration was in power, and if there is no change of Government, it will not be likely to suffer again." (Prolonged Liberal cheers.)

Mr. Wallace Rubs It In.

Mr. Clarke Wallace said that in the whole history of Parliament no more serious charges had ever been made against Ministers than those formulated by the member for Pictou (Sir C. H. Tupper) against the Minister of the Interior, the Postmaster-General and the Minister of Customs. He severely criticized the light and airy manner in which the Minister of the Interior had dealt with the very grave charges of wrong-doing in the Yukon, which had been so clearly set forth in the resolution, and claimed that the Government had shown the utmost recklessness in the administration of the Yukon and an utter disregard for everything except a railway scheme, behind which was hidden the most disgraceful piece of robbery that had ever scandalised the history of Canada.

Sir Wilfrid Backs Sifton.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that Mr. Sifton had made a full and complete answer to the charges made in the resolution, and argued that with reference to the allegations against Judge Dugas, Sir Hibbert Tupper had acted improperly in introducing his name at all, unless he was prepared to impeach him. Major Walsh, he said, was no longer in the service of the Government, and he characterized the allegations that that officer had been guilty of intemperance and immorality as wanton cruelty. He said that if, when the full report on the investigation by Mr. Ogilvie was received, it was considered by the Government to be insufficient, or unsatisfactory, a further investigation would be held. As to the personal charges against Mr. Sifton, the only one of any account was that he had been guilty of favoritism and partiality, and he did not think that very serious. He denied that Phillips was a partner of the Minister of the Interior in a dredging lease, and said that if anyone could show that Phillips had obtained dredging leases in collusion with the Minister of the Interior, a committee of investigation would be appointed without a moment's hesitation.

Mr. Foster's Remarks.

Hon. Mr. Foster said the Government pretended to want more facts, but had not attempted to disprove those adduced by the member for Pictou. The statement had been made that the investigation would not stop until every allegation of mismanagement and misconduct had been probed to the bottom, and if that was acted up to, he thought the Government had a pretty long and tough job ahead of it. The whole subject of Yukon maladministration, he claimed, should be thoroughly examined into, and this could only be done by an independent and impartial tribunal, with full authority, such as was proposed by the member for Pictou. He laughed at the idea that Judge Dugas' conduct could not be inquired into except by impeachment, and said if that argument was sound then all the Government had to do is to appoint a Yukon council, composed entirely of judges, and their conduct would be above criticism. Mr. Sifton had only dealt with one or two matters, but had ignored the great bulk of the charges.

Mr. Foster then proceeded to deal with some of the charges, taking them up separately, and pointing out their serious nature and the flippant manner in which they had been treated by the Government.

Sir Louis Davies to the Rescue.

Sir Louis Davies followed at considerable length in a general defence of himself and his colleagues; claiming that no wrongdoing of a serious nature had been shown, and that the charges made were vague and groundless.

The debate was continued by Mr. McNeill, Mr. Paterson and Mr. Powell, who was speaking at 2 o'clock. Messrs. Davin, Sproule and one or two others are expected to speak, so that it will be 4 o'clock before a division is reached.

A Champion for Dugas.

Montreal, June 30.—Lawrence A. Wilson is on the rampage. He has his accepted cheque for $5,000 and will summon Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper to put up or shut up. He will write a letter to the press and say if it can be proved that Judge Dugas has committed one illegal act he will forfeit the cheque in question.

MANITOBA CONSERVATIVES

Will Meet in Convention on July 10—Hon. Mr. Greenway in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 30.—A requisition is in circulation asking Mayor Andrews to run as the Conservative candidate in Centre Winnipeg. Liberal-Conservative provincial convention, which has been postponed from June 27th, has, by direction of Hon. Hugh John Macdonald, been called for July 10. The principal business of the convention will be to formulate a platform on which the Conservative party will meet the electors in the coming campaign, and also to perfect arrangements for a tour of the province by Hugh John Macdonald.

What Premier Greenway Says.

Mr. Greenway arrived from the east yesterday. Upon the success of his mission he would not say more than he hoped the province would receive $300,000 from the school lands fund this year. However, the Opposition is obstructing so steadily that it will be impossible to say when the legislation will get through. It is gratifying, however, to have the Dominion Government admit that the province ought to control these lands.

Did He Commit Suicide?

The body of Alex. Taylor, bookseller, who has been missing since Monday last, was found in the Assiniboine River, near the Northern Pacific bridge, last evening about 9 o'clock. It is supposed that he committed suicide. He was very well connected here, and being of a very sociable disposition he had a host of warm friends in the city.

SOUTH PERTH PROTEST.

Case Opened Before Hon. Justices Meredith and Street.

Stratford, Ont., June 30.—Precisely at 1.15 p.m. the presiding judges, Mr. Justice Street and Mr. Justice Meredith, took their seats on the bench to hear the evidence in the protest against the election of Mr. Nelson Monteith as member for South Perth.

The only important evidence adduced during the day was that Mr. John O'Brien of St. Mary's received $10 from some unknown person to spend in buying votes for the Conservative party. Mr. O'Brien acknowledged having offered Mr. Alex. Brown, auctioneer of St. Mary's, to wipe out a coal bill of $6 if he would vote for Mr. Nelson Monteith.

Messrs. Marshall and Mr. Bolting, St. Mary's, swore that one John McCabe offered them money to stay away from the poll. Several other witnesses were examined, but nothing particular was brought forward. Court reassembles at 9 o'clock Friday morning.

IMPERIAL HONORS MOOTED.

Hon. Wm. Mulock, Mr. C. M. Hays and Chief Justice Jette Mentioned.

Ottawa, June 30.—There is a good deal of speculation here as to what honors, if any, will be distributed on Dominion Day, but no very positive information can be got on the subject. From what can be learned, however, it would seem as if Mr. Mulock's objections to receiving honors had been overcome, and that he will receive a baronetcy on Saturday in recognition of his services in assisting at the establishment of imperial penny postage.

Knighthood for Mr. Hays.

It is also said that the inaugural ceremony on Saturday in connection with the formal opening of the new Victoria bridge will be marked by the conferring of the honor of knighthood on Mr. C. M. Hays, general manager of the Grand Trunk.

K.C.M.G. for Judge Jette.

Lieut.-Gov. Jette will, it is said, be created a K.C.M.G. in pursuance of the policy of knighting the Lieutenant-Governors of the leading provinces.

Devilry at Lima, Peru.

Lima, Peru, June 30.—The Confederation of Artisans of Lima has decided to take criminal action against the chief of police, who is accused of torturing members of that body. The Attorney-General has brought an action against some priests, who are charged with illegally treating a child at a school near Chincha, who was suffering from a disease. The accused priests have fled from the country.

Cloakmakers Strike.

Toronto, June 30.—One hundred cloakmakers, men and women, struck at T. Eaton Company's immense workshop. They demand an increase of 15 per cent. in wages, and wish certain restrictions which oppress them to be removed. A mass meeting will be held on Tuesday to discuss their fate.

DOUBLE EVIDENCE.

Two Letters Which Throw Light on the Case.

Both From the One Man—Dated Years Apart—But They do Not Conflict in Their Testimony.

Toronto, June 30.—In April, 1896, the case of Mr. Charles Gilchrist was reported in the Canadian press. His own statement was printed, and the gentleman referred to in a despatch published last week, has a clipping in his scrap book which describes Mr. Gilchrist's case in his own words.

"I have been a sufferer," he said, "for ten years, with Diabetes and Kidney disorder. At times my urine was of a dark bricky color, which would cause intense pain in passing. I have tried everything in the way of medicine and about everything in the way of doctors but could get no help. I was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. I did so and am happy to say was cured."

This was what Mr Gilchrist had to say about Dodd's Kidney Pills in 1896. In 1899, three years after, his cure still held good. And further he was still grateful for the medicine that brought it about—Dodd's Kidney Pills.

The following letter was lately received from Mr. Gilchrist:

Port Hope, May 26, 1899.

Dear Sir,—Your letter came to hand this morning. I was in a pretty bad state when I first used Dodd's Kidney Pills. I had a fearful pain in my back and was in perfect misery all the time. I am well now and owe it all to Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have answered fifteen other letters to parties who said they saw my testimonial and a good many people of this town came to me and I told them Dodd's Kidney Pills were first class.

Yours truly,
CHAS. GILCHRIST.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are for sale by all druggists or will be sent on receipt of price by the Dodds Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A MIDNIGHT ADVENTURE

"I walked up and down the upstairs landing all last night," said Brown, the junior partner.

"Baby?" asked the bookkeeper.

"Worse than that," said the junior partner.

"Impossible," said the bookkeeper, aghast.

"Blame sight worse than that," repeated the junior partner, emphatically.

"What was it?" asked the bookkeeper.

"Well," said the junior partner, "it was a cross between cholera and smothering."

"Sounds bad enough," said the bookkeeper.

"The sound is nothing to the feel," said the junior partner. "I thought I was a goner at one time there. I had a fearful pain in the stomach. I was walking up and down the landing like sixty, and presently I felt as if I was being smothered. I hung on to the banisters for I was perfectly dizzy, and then I distinctly felt my heart miss a beat. I always knew I had a weak heart, and I thought my time had come sure, so I crawled back to the room and woke my wife. What do you think she said? Said I'd been eating something indigestible and gave me a Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet. I knew I'd only had a supper of cold ham and radishes and a glass of ice-water, but I swallowed the Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet like a lamb. Would you believe it I went right back to bed and was asleep inside fifteen minutes?"

"Get out," said the bookkeeper.

"Those Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are the finest things in the world," said the junior partner.

"How much are they?" asked the bookkeeper.

"Fifty cents for a big box," said the junior partner. "Any drug store."

HYPOCRISY SCORED.

The Globe Vigorously Dealt With on its Corruption Sermon.

(Toronto World.)

It is, after all, little to the purpose to say that the Conservative party is in this respect no more free from reproach than our own. Our main business is to set our own house in order. —Globe, June 28.

Our text for this morning's discourse is taken from the Globe of yesterday. The words are those of a man who is in a penitent mood. He is full of sorrow at the backsliding of certain members of his party. But while he is penitent he does not give way to his emotions. There is no tearing of the hair, no meaningless supplications for deliverance from wickedness. The author of our text is a philosopher. He recognizes his evil plight and, instead of wasting his time in vain regrets, he speedily arrives at the conclusion that his main business is to help to set his house in order. The idea that he wishes to convey to the reader is that he and his party are at heart good men, that they have been betrayed by their friends, but that they will set to work at once to set their house in order and thereby re-establish themselves in the eyes of the world. This is what the writer would have us believe.

As a matter of fact the words of our text emanate from the mouth of a hypocrite. His penitence is assumed. His resolve to set his house in order is a premeditated fabrication. If the Globe were really penitent, and if it seriously meant to set the Liberal house in order, there is no uncertainty as to the method it would adopt. The way to set a house in order is to clean it up, to throw out the dirt and rubbish, to get rid of disease-bearing filth. The way to set the Liberal house in order is to clean out the rascals who have defiled it. But this is exactly what the Globe will not insist on, or even suggest. It does not mean to set the Liberal house in order. Its penitence is all hypocrisy. The Globe preaches a column sermon on the iniquity of bribery and corruption and would have the people believe that it desires to elevate the standard of political morality. If such were its real sentiments it would not waste all its force moralizing. It would insist on some definite action. The law has provided machinery for bringing to justice all the culprits in the West Elgin election fraud. The names of these parties are known. They can all be located. Why doesn't Globe insist that the laws which have been passed to prevent these very frauds should be set in motion? The law of the land prescribes the method for setting a house in order when it is overrun with political vermin. Why doesn't the Globe insist on this method being adopted in the present instance? A drastic application of the law in this case would have a wonderful effect in setting the Liberal house in order. It would effect a wonderful transformation in the corrupt practices which prevail at elections. The jailing of the ringleaders in the West Elgin frauds would purify our elections such as nothing else can do. The way, and the only way, for the Globe to set its house in order is to call on the Attorney-General to arrest Sheriff Brown, Immigration Agent Preston, Alexander Smith and the rest of the notorious gang. If Preston, the ringleader, were dispossessed of his job and sent to the penitentiary for two years, and if similar treatment were administered to his accomplices, the backbone of bribery and corruption at elections would be broken. We would have comparatively pure elections thereafter. That is the way to set the house in order. But the Globe is standing in with the gang. Its principal concern now is to shield the gang, not to set its house in order.

The Globe's hypocrisy makes honest men sick. The hypocrisy of the Liberal party as a whole turns our stomach. Mr Mullen, the stickler for economy, formerly could discern a needle in the public accounts' hay stack. Now he cannot see an elephant. Minister John Dryden and Minister Davis pose as religionists and yet they associate daily with Hardy. South Ontario has given us Mr. Dryden's moral measure. Even when the party is caught red-handed in the greatest election scandal in Canadian history, its organ slobbers all over like a moral idiot. As for Hardy, we must confess he has one redeeming feature. He is less of a hypocrite than any of his associates. He is not a class leader and does not shine at revival meetings. He makes no profession of morality, but he is a big sinner all the same. Hardy is an honest sinner, and one could frankly shake hands with him. One's sense of self-respect and manhood would receive a shock if he were compelled to fraternize too familiarly with some of Mr. Hardy's Jeckyl-and-Hyde confreres. Taken all in all they make a bad gang. They have brought dishonor on this fair province. The people of Ontario are ashamed of them. Their own friends are ashamed of them. A shout of joy will be raised throughout the whole province when the gang is routed.

If not, Why not?

A Child's Suffering.

MR. WM. MCKAY, CLIFFORD, N.S., TELLS OF HIS DAUGHTER'S CURE.

She was First Attacked With Acute Rheumatism, Followed by St. Vitus' Dance in a Severe Form—Her Parents Thought She Could Not Recover.

From the Enterprise, Bridgewater, N.S.

William McKay, Esq., a well-known and much respected farmer and mill man at Clifford, Lunenburg Co., N.S., relates the following wonderful cure effected in his family by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills:—"About three years ago my little daughter Ella, then a child of ten years, was attacked with acute rheumatism. It was a terribly bad case; for over a month she was confined to her bed, and during most of the time was utterly helpless, being unable to turn in bed, or in fact to move at all without help. She could not even hold anything in her hand. All power or use of her limbs had entirely gone and the pain she suffered was fearful. By constant attention after a month or so she began to gain a little strength, and after a while improved enough to be taken out of bed and even walked around a bit after a fashion by means of a support. But now she was seized with a worse ailment than the rheumatism. Her nervous system gave way, appeared completely shattered. She shook violently all the time, would tumble down in trying to walk. In attempting to drink from a cup her hand shook so as to spill the contents all over herself. She was a pitiable object. The doctors were called to her again and said she had St. Vitus' dance in the worst form. She took the medicine prescribed and followed the instructions of her physician for some time, but without apparent benefit. She wasted away almost to a skeleton and we gave her up for lost. About this time I read in a paper an account of a great cure of nervousness effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and resolved to try them. I bought six boxes and the little girl began using the. The good effects of the first box were quite apparent and when four boxes were used, she seemed so much improved that the pills were discontinued. She kept on improving and after a few weeks was as well as ever. We were told that the cure would not last, that it was only some powerful ingredient in the pills which was deceiving us and that after a time the child would be worse than ever. All this has proved false, for now nearly three years she has had unbroken good health, nerves as strong as they are made, and stands school work and household work as well as a mature person. We have no doubt about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills restoring to us our little girl, whom we looked upon as doomed to an early grave."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a specific for diseases arising from an impoverished condition of the blood or shattered nerves, such as St. Vitus' dance, locomotor ataxia, rheumatism, paralysis, sciatica, the after effects of la grippe, headache, dizziness, erysipelas, scrofula, etc. They are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to the female system, building anew the blood, and restoring the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. Protect yourself against imitations by insisting that every box bears the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. If your dealer does not have them they will be sent, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BLOW THE HORN

Or Sound the Drum and the Caterpillars Come Down—A Novel Cure.

With the caterpillar pest a live subject in Peterborough district, the following from the Mississippi Valley Democrat and Journal of Agriculture, June 15, 1899: will be read with some interest: "Up in the Catskill Mountains, N.Y., where the caterpillars have been very destructive to maple and apple trees, a novel and effective way to fight the pests has been discovered. A woman blowing a horn under a maple tree was surprised to see the caterpillars fall to the ground by the hundreds, and continued to do so at each succeeding blast. She told her story and the noise cure was immediately adopted by her neighbors. Horns and drums and couch shells were brought into play Caterpillars by the bushel dropped to the earth and were gathered up and destroyed. Couch shells seem most effective, though a well beaten brass drum does good work. Although rather late the caterpillars have almost eaten the foliage from the trees. It is believed that May orchards and other trees which they live on threatened with destruction may yet be saved."

BRUTAL AFFAIR AT HAVELOCK

A WOMAN ATTACKED AND MALTREATED BY THREE MEN.

Her Son, Who Attempted to Defend Her, Also Beaten—The Woman Now in Town and Still Suffering From Her Injuries.

Warrants are out for the arrest of the three Havelock men, who are or have been railway employees, charging them with assault, with intent to rape. The men have not yet been arrested for they found out that the officers were after them and kept out of the way. The assaulted persons, Mary Kellogg and her son, Walter Kellogg, are at present at a hotel in town. The young man is about twenty-five years of age and the woman who was attacked is apparently about forty-eight or fifty. She is suffering from various injuries. One ankle is badly sprained and she must have received very rough treatment.

The Kelloggs state that they live in Toronto at 312 King-st .west. They had been in Quebec and were on their way back to Toronto. At Montreal the mother met with an accident and they were delayed three weeks, their means thus becoming almost exhausted. They had only enough money to buy tickets to Havelock. They did not reached the village on Monday last. They then decided to wait till the end of the evening and walk to Peterborough, where the young man expected to get work for a time.

As they left the village about dark, as they state, they were followed by three men and when about half a mile down the track these latter overtook them and seized the woman. The son, Walter Kellogg, tried to defend her but was thrown down by the men and held. He was unable to seize any weapon which he might put to use. The woman was thrown down by her assailants and dragged some distance by the bush but she struggled violently and screamed so loudly that the men were frightened off. Help came opportunely, the nightwatch at the station having heard the cries.

The men who made the attack escaped and the constables have not been able to apprehend them. Walter Kellogg states that he believed he saw two of them in town yesterday and that they went west. It is thought, however, that they have been around Havelock during the week.

Mrs. Kellogg was taken in charge by Mrs. Wm. Matheson, who kept her at her house on Monday night. She was attended by Dr. Jeffs, who found her badly bruised and otherwise injured. He brought her up to town on Tuesday. She is still unable to walk, and a pair of crutches had to be provided for her yesterday.

The affair is altogether a most disgraceful one and it is hoped that the offenders will be brought to justice.

Owing to Saturday being a holiday there will be no letter of the "Trip to the Eternal City" series published this week. The series, however, will be completed without further interruption.

Quiet Market Day.

Business to-day seems to have been pretty dull. The market was a small one. The number of people coming in by the morning trains and boats was much below the average for market days.

ENGLISH ARMY BLACKING holds its polish longer than others.

The Steamers Up.

The steamer Beaver brought up some passengers to-day on her weekly market trip. The North Star brought up a load of wood. The City of Peterborough ran a trip down to Jubilee.

They are Perfectly Satisfactory.

Dr. J. Tate, Tate Optical Co.,

DEAR SIR,—I feel very grateful to you for the great care you took in the examination of my own and my wife's eyes. The glasses you have fitted for our eyes are perfectly satisfactory, and my wife says she has not had a headache since beginning to wear the glasses you so carefully fitted. Hoping that others may get the same satisfaction. I remain, respectfully yours, MR ALEX SCOTT.

AN OUTING ON STONY LAKE

PLEASANT EXCURSION OF THE CEORGE-ST. CHOIR.

A Sail on the Waters of Beautiful Stony Lake—The Route and Incidents of the Trip.

The members of the George-st. choir and a limited number of friends had an outing at Stony lake yesterday and spent a most delightful day. The party, numbering about thirty-five, drove to Lakefield in busses, arriving at the village about nine o'clock. Here through the kindness of the owners, Messrs. J. J. McBain, John Nugent and J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., the jolly party boarded the neat steam yacht the "Mollie," being welcomed by Messrs. McBain and Nugent. Owing to logs in the river there was a delay of half an hour before the sail was commenced, and the picnickers viewed the sights of the village. Steam was then gotten up and a fast run made up through Clear to Stony lake. A number of points were called at and the pavilion at Juniper island was reached about noon. Lunch was enjoyed at the pavilion, the stay of the choir being made more pleasant by Mr. T. W. Robinson, superintendent of the George-st. Sunday school, who was present at the store and who performed a number of kindnesses for the visitors. At this point small boats were provided and many of the party took advantage of these and enjoyed a sail on the beautiful waters. The "Mollie" was again boarded, the party proceeding to Burleigh, where the picturesque scenery was viewed. Progress was then made to Bear island, where the cottages of Messrs. McBain and Nugent overlook the lake, and here they were royally entertained for an hour or so, Mesdames McBain and Nugent extending the hospitality of their summer homes in a charming manner. The entire party then proceeded to Boschink and the head of the lake, and this part of the trip and the sail back to Juniper island in the cool of the evening was particularly enjoyable, the many places of interest being pointed out as they were passed. At Juniper the party again had lunch, after which the trip was continued to Lakefield.

The party gave cheers for Messrs. McBain Nugent and Stratton, not forgetting the "Mollie," and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered by Mr. R. Chowen, seconded by Mr. H. Moora. Mr. Chowen in a few words expressed the appreciation of the choir of the kindness of the hosts of the day and their wives for the manner in which the trip had been made so enjoyable.

The leader and choir wish to sincerely thank the owners of the "Mollie" for the privilege enjoyed. The outing was a most delightful affair and was entirely due to the magnanimity of the gentlemen.

BREEZES.

Mr. Hubert McBain used his sailboat for the pleasure of some of the passengers as much as its carrying capacity allowed.

The popular organist was adorned with a brand new straw hat, a bargain picked up in Lakefield.

Members of the party cast net and trawling lines into the sea but neither industry nor earnest wishes, nor nets, nor trawls could land a fish.

The stem of the boat was occupied by a quiet party who were deeply impressed with the vast and wonderful beauties of nature.

The photo artists, alias fiends, were Messrs. Thulis and Alexander, who took a number of shots of the party and are threatened with annihilation if these do not turn out well.

Mr. Walden was not the only sufferer in headwear for one of the ladies lost her hat in the water on the return trip.

TWELVE LIVES LOST.

Steamer Margaret Olwill Goes to the Bottom of Lake Erie in the Storm.

Chicago, June 30.—The steamer Margaret Olwill, owned by L. P. Smith of Cleveland, went down in the storm off Loraine, Lake Erie, last night. Twelve people were lost, including Capt. John Brown, his wife and son, and Miss Baldwin, a passenger. The Olwill, of 554 tons, was bound from Kelley's Island to Cleveland, with limestone, her cargo shifting in the heavy sea, sending her down by the stern. Seaman Coyle was the only man saved. He was picked up by the steamer State of Ohio.

John Smith, mate; Alex. McRae and Engineer Schenoki were picked up by the steamer Sacramento and taken to Loraine. This makes the number of drowned nine.

According to Coyle's story the steamer was caught between two waves and as she was borne along the top of one of them, she rolled over on the side. The cabins were torn loose and floated on the water, while the rest of the ship went to the bottom. Coyle caught hold of part of the after cabin and climbed upon it. Heffron, one of the wheelmen, was clinging to a part of the same cabin. Capt. Willoughby of the steamer State of Ohio sighted the wreckage about 5.15 in the morning, and immediately put into service her lifesaving crew. Coyle was rescued. Heffron was thrown a line, but he was too weak to take hold of it, and went down in the presence of a large crowd on board the steamer.

BETTER THAN SERUM.

Washington Physician Develops a New Treatment for Germ Diseases.

Washington, June 30. — Dr. Oscar Loew, one of the expert vegetable pathologists of the Agricultural Department, has developed to what he believes is a point of practical use a new treatment for germ diseases, which promises to supersede the serum treatment now in use in diphtheria, fevers and many other diseases. The experiments have reached a stage where they can be tested in hospitals. The treatment is similar in some respects to the serum treatment, but depends on a different principle, the basic idea being the presence of a class of ferments known as enzymes, which are produced by the same bacteria that produce the disease. It is because of the production, or rather overproduction, of a certain enzyme that a disease such as typhoid will "run its course," and then die out of the system. The bacteria in this case, it is stated, are simply killed out by the ferment they produce.

The object of the new treatment is to produce a pure enzyme, which, introduced into the human system, will kill the disease germs without injuring the patient.

While the funeral procession of the late Cardinal Schoenborn, Prince Archbishop of Prague, was passing from His Eminence's late residence to the railway station on Thursday one of the horses attached to the hearse shied and the team dashed into the crowd that lined the route. Panic followed, men and women were trampled, two were killed and many more were seriously injured.

50,000 MEN WILL BE IDLE.

All the Tin Plate Mills in U. S. to Close Down.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 30.—As a result of the failure to settle the tin-plate wage scale at the Chicago conference, all the tin-plate mills in the country are preparing to close down, and to-day at midnight there will be a general suspension. Nearly 50,000 men will be thrown idle by the shutdown. How long it will last is a matter of speculation.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

It has been decided that the little party shall go aboard after supper, by the light of the young moon, which will be nearly overhead.

Two boats have been engaged to wait for them at the quay.

It is at this time Sir Lionel hopes to make his point, and to accomplish it he does not hesitate to descend to a low plane, and even imperil human life.

When they reach the quay a breeze is blowing, but not strong enough to cause any uneasiness.

The party place their luggage in one boat.

Then comes a pretty piece of by-play that really reflects credit upon the engineering skill of the soldier, for it is his hands that pull the strings.

Lady Ruth steps into one boat. One of the men having stopped John to ask him something, the colonel is given a chance to occupy the same boat, and, when Doctor Chicago arrives, he is told by the boatman that this craft having two passengers, and being smaller than the other, can carry no more.

Sir Lionel, as they push off, sings out to him, pleasantly:

"A Roland for an Oliver, Chicago."

John smothers his chagrin and enters the other boat with Aunt Gwen and the professor. After all, it is only for a brief time, and surely he can afford to give Sir Lionel that pleasure.

Thus they set out.

Lady Ruth appears to be in good spirits, for they can hear her voice in song, blending with the bass of the baronet, floating over the waves, which are really rougher than any of them had anticipated.

The lights of the steamer can be seen, and they head for her.

Suddenly the song ceases to float across the water. It comes so suddenly to a stop that John Craig sits up in the other boat and clutches the arm of the professor.

"Listen! I thought I heard a slight scream."

"Nonsense!" exclaims Aunt Gwen.

"That British prig——"

"Sir Lionel is a gentleman. He would not sully his reputation by a word or deed."

"There—again."

"That time I heard it, too. Boatman, bend to your oars and pull. There is something wrong with the other boat," cries the professor.

Then across the bounding waters comes a hail, in the lion-like voice of the Briton. A hail that stirs the blood in their veins until it runs like molten lava—a hail that tells of danger.

"Ho! there, this way, quick! We're sinking! sprung a leak."

Such is the cry that comes to them.

All are at once alarmed. The boatman is pulling well, but, to John's excited fancy, it seems as though they hardly move.

He springs up and takes one of the oars.

"Professor, mind the helm!" he cries.

"Ay, ay!" sings out that worthy, adapting himself immediately to the situation.

The young American is hardly an athlete, although he belongs to one of Chicago's best boat clubs.

He has an incentive now which causes him to strain every muscle, and under the united strength of two men the boat dances over the billows in the quarter whence the cry of help was heard.

It nevertheless takes them nearly five minutes to reach the scene, and this is the longest five minutes John ever knew.

Only the voice of the boatman is heard, still calling, and by this they know that the climax has already come.

A dreadful fear almost palsies John's heart as they reach the scene.

The boatman is discovered clinging to the oars, and showing some evidence of alarm. Perhaps he has had more than he bargained for.

John helps him in.

"Where are the others?" he cries, hoarsely.

"I am afraid, lost."

"Just Heaven! What has happened?"

"Boat sprung a leak—go down fast. Soldier say he save lady, but struck his head on boat and lose senses. I saw them no more."

It is horrible!

"Did the boat sink?" asks John, huskily.

"I do not know."

"Would it sink under such circumstances?" he asks their own boatman, who also has the appearance of being rattled. When they entered into a little trickery with Sir Lionel, they had no idea it would turn out so tragically, and the possible serious consequences now staring them in the face make them uneasy.

"No; it could not," returns that worthy.

"Then, if floating still, we must find it. Our only chance lies there."

Fortunately, John is, in a measure, self-possessed. He at least shows himself equal to the emergency.

They pull in the direction where it is most likely they will find what they seek.

John twists his neck as he rows, and endeavors to scan the sea around them. Again and again he calls out, hoping in the fulness of his heart that some answering cry may come back.

What leaden seconds those are—never can they forget them.

"I see something," says Aunt Gwen, who is crouching in the bow, regardless of the spray that now and then sputters her.

"Where away," demands John, eagerly.

"Straight ahead."

They pull with fierce energy.

"Can you make it out?"

"It's the swamped boat," replies Aunt Gwen, who has remarkable eyes for one of her age.

John shouts again.

"Boat ahoy!"

This time an answer comes back, but not in the roar of the British lion.

"Here—come quickly—I am nearly worn out!"

John's heart gives a great bound.

"Thank Heaven! It is Lady Ruth!" he says.

CHAPTER XI.

John can hold back no longer, but gives his oar to the boatman, and seeks the bow in place of Aunt Gwen, who allows him the privilege.

They are now almost upon the floating swamped boat.

"Careful now. Don't run into the wreck. I see her," and with the last words John, who has kicked off his shoes in almost a second of time, throws coat and vest down in the boat and leaps overboard.

His hands seize upon the gunwale of the nearly submerged boat, over which waves break. He pulls himself along, and thus reaches Lady Ruth, whom he finds holding on to one of the tiller ropes which has formed a loop, through which her arm is passed.

"Thank Heaven! You are safe! Here comes the boat! You must let me help you in, Lady Ruth!" he says, dodging a wave, and ready to clutch her if she lets go.

"I am not alone. You must take him in first," she gasps.

Then John for the first time becomes aware that she is supporting Sir Lionel, whose arm has also been passed through the rounded tiller rope.

He seems to hang a dead weight.

Amazed at the action of the brave English girl, John at once takes hold of the soldier. The boat by this time comes up.

In getting him aboard, a spill is narrowly averted, and now a new trouble arises. The boat will hold no more, and is dangerously loaded even now.

What can be done? Lady Ruth must be taken aboard. Her strength is almost gone, and John, in deadly fear, lest one of the hungry waves should tear her away before their very eyes, passes an arm around her waist.

He takes in the situation.

"Here, you!" to the already wet boatman, "tumble overboard, quick now. We can hold on behind, I reckon."

The man hesitates, and this is a bad time for deliberation.

Professor Sharpe suddenly seizes upon him, and in almost the twinkling of an eye has the fellow overboard, more through a quick movement than any show of strength.

"There's a boat from the steamer coming this way. Hail it, Philander!" exclaims Aunt Gwen, and this gives them new life.

Lady Ruth is now taken into the boat with some degree of caution.

Sir Lionel shows no signs of life, and both ladies are extremely solicitous about him, so the professor bends down to make a cursory examination.

"He'll be all right when the water is pumped out of him," he announces.

The boat from the steamer comes up, led to the spot by Philander's shrill whoops, and the men in the water are rescued.

In ten minutes they reach the side of the steamer and go aboard. A terrible disaster has been narrowly averted, and John cannot but feel amazed at the wonderful grit shown by this girl, who saved the baronet from a watery grave.

It proves his estimation of her qualities at the time she assisted to bind up his arm was not out of the way.

As the two boatmen are about to go down into their craft again, the one who has not been in the water beckons John, who has not yet sought his cabin-room to change his soaked clothes.

"Will the gentleman recover?" he asks.

"You mean Sir Lionel? Oh, yes! He is already back to his senses. Strangely enough, the first question he asked upon learning that Lady Ruth was saved, concerned your companion, and when he learned that the boatman had also survived, he said: 'The devil!'"

At this the man chuckles.

MACHINERY HALL GONE.

Toronto Industrial Exhibition Company's Big Building Destroyed by Fire.

Toronto, June 30.—Machinery Hall at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition grounds was completely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon.

The blaze was discovered at 4.15 o'clock. In 15 minutes the building, which was a frame structure, was completely enveloped in flames, and the firemen found the building almost a total wreck on their arrival. Agricultural Implement Hall was slightly damaged. The shafting, pulleys and an engine in Machinery Hall were also completely wrecked. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been a spark from a passing engine. The wind took the flames along with great rapidity. Machinery Hall was valued at $18,870. The insurance on the building was $6,000, and on the boilers, engines and shafting $8,250. The loss on the latter reaches some $5,000.

The bullet entered upper the part of the left chest and lodged in the lungs. He was carried into the house of his grandfather, Mr. John Kelly, where he was attended by Dr. Campbell. The result is doubtful. The boy is about 14, and was in the village attending the leaving examinations. Arrests are likely to follow.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Shedden, February 28th, 1898.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

GRAND LODGE IN SESSION.

Good Templars Committees and Annual Reports Presented.

The Grand Lodge of Good Templars of Canada held its opening session on Wednesday morning in Richmond hall, Toronto. The officers present were:—G.V.T. Mrs. W. L. Scott, Ottawa; G.J.T, F. S. Morrison, Hamilton; Grand Secretary Duncan Marshall, city; G.T. G. W. Powell, Peterborough; G.G. Miss M. E. Shirley, of Manchester, Ont.; G.S. H. Holland, City. In the absence of several of the other officers appointments were made pro tem.

The Grand Lodge degree was conferred on 21 candidates, after which the officers' reports were presented.

Grand Chief Templar Geo. Spence gave a very comprehensive review of the year's work. In a separate report he recommended some action being taken towards unifying the S.O.S., R.T. of T., and I.O.G.T., as the work being carried on in all three was much the same.

The report of the Grand Secretary showed a loss in membership of 560 and 15 lodges. This was attributed partly to the plebiscite contest, which interfered with organization work.

The afternoon session commenced at 2 o'clock, when plans were discussed for the furtherance of more active juvenile work. The Standing Committees were elected as follows:—

Finance—F. S. Spence, F. Medcalt, N. Dunbar, Miss E. Munro, Miss R. M. Storr.

State of the Order—R. J. Birdwhistle, C. E. Matherly, T. Upton, Dr. James Graham, Miss E. Murray.

By-laws—G. W Powell, O. H. Barker, Miss M. E. Sturdey, Sarah Fraser, J. Arbuckle.

Juvenile Work—F. S. Morrison, Mrs. W. L. Scott, and all superintendents of juvenile temples.

Printing—D. Marshall, W. J. Snider, J. Ross, D. B. Macdonald, J. F. Banting.

Mileage—G. W. Powell, W. J. C. McCrea, Thos. Laws.

Prohibition and Legislation—A. Newell, Peter Key, G. A. Hamblin, E. Little, R. C. Hurd.

Special committee on Grand Chief Templars report referring to Worthy Grand Lodges—F. S. Morrison, H. B. Chambers, J. B. Marshall, Miss Kate Butler, R. B. Younghusband.

Property—A. R. Scoble, E. L. Farnham, R. J. Birdwhistle.

District Lodge—J. Impey, W. Mercer, J. McLaughlin, F. W. Bufton, A. Woodman.

These committees immediately met to prepare reports for this morning's session.

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY—Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

At Headlands, Stony Lake.

The Rev. A. W. Mackenzie will hold divine service at Headlands, Stony Lake, on Sunday, July 2nd, commencing at 11 a.m. It is the intention of the trustees of Headlands, as far as possible, to maintain the services there during the summer season. During the latter part of July and the whole of August, Headlands will be occupied by the Rev. Canon Spragge, of Cobourg, and the Rev. Canon Macnab, of Toronto, successively; and on August 7th and 8th the Rural Deanery of Northumberland will meet there. All visitors to Stony lake will be welcomed to the services.

A JURY OF WOMEN

Who have tested the merits of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills return the verdict that for backache and kidney disorders there is no preparation in any way equal to this great discovery of Dr. A. W. Chase, America's greatest physician. This great kidney cure is sold by all dealers at 25 cents a box and has proved most effectual as a remedy for the many ills to which woman is subject.

An Up-to-date Hearse for Peterborough.

The Furniture and Upholstery Journal says:—"Matthew Guy, hearse manufacturer, of Toronto, has on his order list a hearse which will be shown at the exhibition in Toronto. The novelty of the construction of this hearse will be seen in its new rubber tires. Mr. A. Comstock, undertaker, of Peterborough, has placed this order with the Toronto firm, and it is certain that the Peterborough trade will be well satisfied, not only with the superior quality of its manufacture, but with the novelty of its design."

Their Business Booming.

Probably no [illegible] has caused such a general revival of trade at James Lynch's Drug Store as their giving away to their many customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable remedy, from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases are quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size 50c. and $1.00 Every bottle warranted.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Lacrosse

Of the match which Markham played here last Friday the Markam Economist says:—Two hundred and fifty excursionists took in the Lacrosse Club's excursion to Peterborough on Friday last and witnessed their pet lacrosse team win one of the cleanest, fastest games played this season.

The Peterborough grounds are very small and the flags are set on an angle and some ten or fifteen yards closer together than the rules of the game call for. This naturally puts a visiting team at a disadvantage as the men have to play closer together than they are in the habit of. A high board fence which surrounds the field is also a puzzle to the visiting teams, the players not being familiar with the ball re-bounding off the fence back to the grounds again. Peterborough has a rattling good team in addition, who of course are familiar with and take advantage of all the peculiarities of their grounds and hence it takes a superior lot of players to hold their own at Peterborough.

The Markham Seniors after their game with Peterborough on Friday took the C.P.R. train for Perth where they arrived at 4 o'clock in the morning. The boys went to their hotel and slept until 9 o'clock when they got up and after breakfast strolled about the pretty eastern town. After dinner they had a delightful sail on the canal returning just in time to go on the field. They were naturally somewhat stiff after their game with Peterborough, and the Crescents scored three goals before the boys got their joints limbered up. From this out the game was exciting and abounded in clean pretty play on both sides the score standing when time was called 7 to 3 in favor of the Crescents. The Perth enthusiasts pronounced the game to be the cleanest and fastest ever played on their grounds.

The managers of the Perth lacrosse club are arranging for a trip west early in August.

The Young Shamrock Lacrosse Club met Thursday evening and selected the following players to meet the Maple Leafs of Campbellford at the St. Joseph's hospital picnic on the 1st of July: Goal, J. Gilman; inside home, P. Simons; outside home, J. Dolan; point, W. Judge; cover, W. Smith; defence, J. Walsh P. Kelly, H. Gilman; centre, F. McGrath; home, Jas. Mulligan, W. O'Brien, D. White; field captain, M. Galvin.

Game called at 10 a.m. sharp. Mr. R. Crowe, of Campbellford, will act as referee.

The Markham Sun says: "Peterborough people should be ashamed. They have a good team, who play good lacrosse and deserve better support than they are getting."

The juniors will go to Hastings tomorrow by train instead of 'bus, as had been arranged. They leave the G.T.R. station at 8.10.

Baseball.

The following members will represent the Peterborough team against Cobourg to-morrow, morning and afternoon:—Sheridan 3b, Parnell ss, Graham c, McCabe p, Melrose 2b, Thompson lf, Connors 1b, De Russia rf, Grady cf, Donovan spare. In the afternoon Connors will pitch, Thompson plays first bag and Donovan left field. McCabe will be on the bench in case of any emergency. Both games will be good and hot and a large crowd should attend and help the boys along. The team certainly deserves good encouragement, as they have been putting up first class ball.

Cricket.

Dr. Beecham Boucher, who is in Vancouver, B.C., has given creditable evidence of his Peterborough training on the cricket field. He played on a Vancouver eleven against the Nanaimo club and made 56, which was about half the total score—122.

Golf

The Peterborough golfers were beaten yesterday by the Cobourg team at the Auburn links, but they have nothing to be discouraged about, for they met strong players and to be beaten by good players is the best way to learn any game. The Cobourg gentlemen were all thorough sports as well as first class golfers and made fast friends for themselves. The class of golf played was excellent. For the visitors Albertini did some wonderful putting, and Swan made the record for the course. For the home team Mr. J. H. Burnham played a beautiful game. His driving, ironing and approaching were magnificent. His play all through was of the gilt edged variety. Mr. Dennisteun, though defeated, played a first class game also. Miles Hamilton and Fairbanks were the captains of the teams. The score was:

Burnham	1	Fairbanks	D
Hamilton	0	Albertini	15
Dennistoun	0	Swan	3
Napier	0	Sleith	9
Francis	2	Vivian	0
Campbell	1	McNaughton	0
Parker	1	Hayden	0
F. Hall	0	Armstrong	2

AT THE MOONLIGHT.

The City Rests With a Little Mishap at the Locks Bridge.

An excursion was held last evening down the river per steamer City of Peterborough under the auspices of All Saints' church. About one hundred and fifty people were on board. The sail was a delightful one. On the return trip about 10.30 o'clock, while passing through the highway bridge above the locks the prow of the steamer struck the centre pier and while endeavoring to back off the stern worked around and lodged against the other pier. She was lodged there for nearly half an hour before she got clear.

HOW TO GET PLUMP AND ROSY.

Nature meant every woman to be pulmp, rosy and well developed, and if she has become pale, weak and nervous, Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food will restore and revitalize the wasted nerve cells, make the blood rich and pure, and give new vigor and elasticity to the whole body. For ills peculiar to woman there is no remedy so successful as this great food cure of Dr. A. W. Chase. At all dealers.

It Was Supremely Funny.

"Haw, haw, haw," laughed the Englishman. "Funniest joke I ever heard."

"What is it?" asked the American.

"Why, a man got up one morning and couldn't find his alarm clock, so he asked his wife what had become of it, and she said it had disappeared at 6 o'clock."

"I don't see anything so very funny about that."

"Don't you? Why—why—neither do I now. Thought it was awful funny when I heard it too. I—Oh, yes, now I know. She said it went off at 6 o'clock. Haw, haw, haw!"—Chicago Post.

A Wonderful Drummer.

Probably the most remarkable drummer who ever lived was Jean Henri, the famous tambour major of the Emperor Napoleon. One of his feats was to play on 15 different toned drums at the same time in so soft and harmonious a manner that instead of the deafening uproar that might have been expected the effect was that of a novel and complete instrument. In playing he passed from one drum to the other with such wonderful quickness that the eyes of the spectators could hardly follow the movement of his hands and body.

Had That Right.

"I'm going to sing at the mothers' meeting tomorrow."

"I shouldn't think they would allow a little girl only 6 years old to attend a mothers' meeting."

"Well, I guess I have a right to go if I want to. Ma makes me take care of the baby nearly all the time."—Cleveland Leader.

A ROUND ROBIN.

Liberal Members Signing One to Rid the Party of W. T. R. Preston.

Ottawa, July 3.—Mr. W. T. R. Preston, the organizer of the frauds in the West Elgin local election, according to the statement of Mr. McNish, is about to realise that there is nothing, according to Liberal ethics, so disgraceful as to be found out in political trickery, for a round robin is being circulated amongst the Liberal members here calling on the Government to dismiss Mr. Preston from his position as immigration agent in Great Britain, on account of the disclosures of corruption in the West Elgin election.

The debate on the redistribution bill will commence in the Commons to-day, and will, it is said, be continued from day to day until finished.

U. S. TREATY WITH JAMAICA.

Concluded on Saturday at Washington Between the Parties.

Washington July 3.—A reciprocity treaty with Jamaica was concluded at the State Department on Saturday at a conference between Commissioner Kasson in behalf of the United States and Mr. Tower the British Charge d'Affaires. The Jamaican treaty is now to be forwarded to Kingston for the approval of the colonial authorities and when this is given the formal signing of the instrument will take place. The Jamaican tariff commission left in the afternoon going first to Ottawa to confer with the Canadian authorities. All parties concerned in the negotiations here have been placed under the strictest reserve.

WILL THERE BE WAR?

The Government Has Despatched 500 Troops to South Africa and an Ultimatum to Sir Alfred Milner.

London July 3.—Five hundred troops were sent to South Africa yesterday and something like an ultimatum has been dispatched to Sir Alfred Milner by mail. This information from inside circles indicates that the Government has lost faith already in moral suasion and is preparing to coerce the Boers.

Drowned at Bracebridge.

Bracebridge, Ont., July 3.—Yesterday morning about 11.30 Leo Russell, son of Charles A. Russell of Bracebridge, a lad about 16 years of age, was drowned while bathing in the Muskoka River at the foot of Cooper's Rapids, about half a mile above the falls. His body has not yet been recovered.

—About fifty or sixty Peterborough people went down to Port Hope to attend the usual 1st of July celebration.

LEOPOLD WAS READY TO SKIP

Belgian King Had Apartments Ready in Austria.

Should There Be a Revolution His Money is Safe in England—Social Democrats in the Ascendant—The Electoral Bill That is Causing so Much Trouble—How the Popular Vote is Swamped in Belgium.

London, July 3.—Referring to the rioting in Brussels last week, the London corresponden to the The New York Times cabled his paper yesterday: "The extraordinarily savage rioting in Brussels will remind the world of the deplorable state of Belgium. The social Democrats are stronger there than anywhere else in the world. They own factories and bakeries, and many other co-operative industrial institutions, out of whose profits they support members of Parliament and run newspapers. The clericals, however, have secured all the political power in the country. For example the Opposition in Parliament has 38 members from 996,000 voters, whereas the clericals have 114 members with only 946,000 voters. The electoral law, which has provoked the riots, was designed to assure to the clericals this preposterous predominance forever. The paving stones of Brussels, however, have won a victory for the moment, but not before apartments had been prepared in Austria for the King of the Belgians, whose immense fortune, as is well-known, is safe in England.

Burgomasters Are Afraid.

Brussels, July 3.—The burgomasters of Brussels, Ghent, Antwerp and Liege have informed King Leopold that they could no longer be responsible for the maintenance of order if the Ministry did not withdraw the electoral bill. The King replied that his powers of interference were limited by the constitution.

Socialist Demonstration.

Brussels, July 3.—The Socialists' organized demonstrations in this city yesterday, in Leige and in Alost against the electoral reform bill; there were no serious disorders, except at Alost, where the police charged with drawn swords, wounding several. It is reported that a commissioner of police at Liege received several blows from an umbrella.

GONE TO AID PEARY.

Princeton University Professors Start via Sydney, C.B., for the North.

Princeton, July 3.—William A. Libbey, the originator of the Peary relief expedition, and professor of physical geography and director of the E. M. Museum of Geology and Archaeology in Princeton University, accompanied by Charles W. McClure, professor of biology; A. E. Ortman, professor and curator of invertebrate palaeontology, and C. F. Sylvester, left Princeton last night bound for Sydney, Cape Breton, Canada, where they will join the main body of the Peary relief and two United States geological surveys, sent out by the Peary Relief Club of New York, and sail by the boat Diana, equipped for the expedition, in search of Lieut. Peary, who has not been heard from for over a year.

The main object of the expedition is to provision Peary in the far north. The party will return on Oct 1 on account of early winter in the north.

SERIOUS FIRE AT BOTHWELL.

Nearly a Score of Buildings Went up in Smoke on Saturday.

Bothwell, Ont., July 3.—Fire occurred here on Saturday night, 16 or 20 buildings being burned down, which included the following: S. B. Anderson's hardware store, Moore & Thomas' offices, William Laughton's billiard parlors, J. Robinson's furniture store, Dr. Colehurst's office, James Little's shoe shop, D. G. Reid's tailor shop, George Peacock's tailor shop and store building, Chas. Simpkins' drygoods and groceries, David Tait's flour and feed, George John's livery barns and carriage shop, H. Chambers' dwelling, J. A. Clare's dwelling house (occupied by H. Yerks), several stables and outbuildings. T. Gurd's store and Clarke & Son's bank were damaged. Origin of fire unknown. Loss about $30,000.

French Warship at St. John's.

St. John's, Nfld., July 3.—The French flagship Isle Henrique arrived here on Saturday. Commodore Henrique comes to confer with the British commodore, George A. Gifford, and the colonial authorities respecting the recent disputes on the treaty coast. The colonial ministry maintains a determined attitude, and, unless the French are prepared to make generous concessions, no agreement is likely to be reached.

DISORDERS AT BARCELONA.

Four Persons Were Killed and Seventeen Were Wounded.

Barcelona, July 3.—Disorders occurred here on Saturday on the taking over of the Mairie by the new municipality. The public wished to enter, but were prevented by the municipal guards, and a regular battle ensued, in which four persons were killed and 17 wounded. The gendarmes finally restored order.

DREYFUS' RETURN TO FRANCE

Famous Prisoner Now Confined in Prison at Rennes.

The Sfax Injured in the Stormy Transfer At Sea—The Landing so Quiet That Watchers Did Not Know the Exile Had Arrived—Mme. Dreyfus Meets Her Husband—Scene a Most Affecting One—Both Were in Tears.

Rennes, France, July 3.—Captain Dreyfus landed at Quiberon and was conveyed by train to Brus, twelve kilometres from Rennes. There he entered a landau, accompanied by the chief of the detectives, and was driven to Rennes, where 25 gendarmes waited his entrance into the town. Ten of the gendarmes entered a wagon and followed the carriage. The others followed on foot. The party arrived at the prison without incident. A large crowd assembled and witnessed the arrival in silence and without manifestation.

He is in Good Health.

Dreyfus on arrival here appeared to be in good health. He wore a blue suit, a grey overcoat and a soft felt hat. His hair is turning grey and his beard is of a reddish color. He held himself very erect.

The Landing at Quiberon.

The landing of Dreyfus at Quiberon was almost unnoticed. At 9 o'clock on Friday evening the guardship Caudan put to sea to meet the Sfax, which had been sighted. The unusual bustle attracted many people to the harbor, but as they saw nothing the crowd dispersed. The only persons remaining were those who knew where the prisoner was to be landed.

Transferred Under Difficulties.

The weather was stormy, and for a time it was feared it would be impossible to effect a landing. For hours the lights of the Caudan and Sfax were plainly visible, as the vessels pitched and rolled. It seemed impossible for them to approach in the rough sea. The Sfax had several plates and her bulwarks slightly damaged by the heavy bumping of the Caudan against her sides when Captain Dreyfus was transferred, the sea being very rough.

On the landing stage were M. Vigule, the chief of detectives; M. Hennion, a commissary of police, and a force of gendarmes and police inspectors. Finally, at 1 a.m., a cutter, manned by ten men in charge of a naval officer, put off from the Caudan and went alongside the Sfax. Thence the boat rowed to the shore, where Dreyfus was landed at 1.30 a.m. A company of infantry was drawn up at the landing point.

Prisoner Handed Over.

Dreyfus, who had been brought ashore in the boat, was immediately placed under the guard of a captain of engineers and a sergeant and corporal of gendarmes, who formally handed the prisoner over to M. Vigule. The latter then entered a landau with Dreyfus and two detectives and started for the railroad station, which was reached without incident. Dreyfus did not speak a word.

All Done Quietly.

The drive from Rabelais to Rennes was without incident, owing to the precautions taken, the prisoner and his escort passed unnoticed in front of the arsenal. Workmen reading the posters there did not turn their heads, little suspecting who was passing. The clock was striking 6 when the crowd, which had been waiting since midnight around the prison, the people beginning to think themselves the victim of a practical joke, saw a landau surrounded by gendarmes beyond the station. Then they all cried with one voice: "There he is."

The Excitable Troops.

At this cry the police started off to meet the carriage and suddenly troops and mounted gendarmes hurried madly forward, yelling and shouting as if accompanying a fire engine, instead of escorting a prisoner. The carriage was driven so fast that it covered the distance in a few minutes, passing the watchers like a flash. It was a race for the prison gates between the gendarmes with the captive and the spectators. The gates then opened suddenly and about 20 gendarmes rushed out and barred the street, pressing back the crowd with Sunday Games.

Providence 5, Worcester 3.

Syracuse, July 3.—The Syracuse baseball team attempted to play ball with Montreal yesterday afternoon. So soon as the first ball was pitched, ten policemen came on the ground and arrested Pitcher Villeman, Catcher Dixon, Umpire Boyd and Farmer Brown, who had gone to bat for Montreal, in order to save the visitors the inconvenience of getting arrested. The four men were bailed by George N. Kuntzsch, who, when they are arraigned to-day, will ask for a jury trial. Mr. Kuntzsch wants some disposition of the case this week, so that, if favorable to him, he may play next Sunday. The arrests were made by order of Mayor McGuire, who has insisted this year that Sunday ball shall not be played. About 1,000 spectators were at the game, which was of course called off as soon as the arrests had been made.

"Yes," Squire Sprogle assented, "it 'pears like he was. I didn't take no stock in the reports till yistady. Thought Josh was jist a-tootin his own horn. Always did like to talk about hisself a good deal, you know."

"Yes, Josh was never no hand to set around and wait for folks to find out about his good p'ints. But what happened yistady to make you think there was really somethin in the talk about gittin to be a great man? Was his photograph printed in some paper?"

"No, 'twan't that, but a reporter come down here to ast if Josh didn't used to be all fired lasy, or always runnin away from school, or if he wasn't a queer sort of a child that wanted to be away by hisself and not have nothin to do with other children. UNCLE SAM'S BALANCE SHEET.

The Deficit for the Past Fiscal Year is Only $22,675,999.

Washington, July 3.—Contrary to the expectations of the treasury officials, the Government expenditure during the fiscal year closed on Friday exceeded the receipts by only $22,675,999. One month ago the officials predicted that the deficit might not exceed $100,000,000, but at no time up to a few days ago was it expected the amount would be less than $95,000,000. The receipts for the 12 months of the fiscal year were: Customs, $206,507,813; internal revenue, 272,142,490; miscellaneous, $36,566,442. Total, $516,216,474. The disbursements were: Civil and miscellaneous, $119,225,598; war, $229,041,011; navy, $64,734,470; Indians, $12,799,988; pensions, $139,394,745; interest, $39,896,935. Total expenditures, $605,092,734.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

rifle shots. The transformation from tranquility to a wild scene of gesticulation almost defies description. The suddenness of the movement stupified everybody as much as it did the prisoner, whose face showed from the quickly passing carriage. But beyond the exclamations of surprise and curiosity there were no cries of any sort raised.

Enters the Prison.

Preceded by his guards Dreyfus entered the prison, was formally consigned to the care of the governor and was taken to a cell on the second story.

Mme. Dreyfus Meets Her Husband.

The governor of the prison sent Madame Dreyfus the news of the arrival of her husband and she immediately went to the governor and asked permission to see the prisoner, leave being granted. The faithful wife entered the prison almost unobserved and was conducted to cell No. 330, accompanied by Madame Havet.

The meeting between the long-parted husband and wife can better be imagined than described. Naturally it was most touching. Both Dreyfus and his wife were deeply affected. They remained long clasped in each other's arms, tears and smiles intermingling with tender endearments.

Collapse of Mme. Dreyfus.

Madame Dreyfus issued from the prison in a state of collapse. She found her husband much aged, with beard and hair whitened, and body shrunk and stooped. She said Dreyfus knew nothing of the events of the past two years. The weeping wife acknowledged the courtesy with which she had been treated. The gendarme, who was ordered to be present at the interview, carried out instructions and kept at a discreet distance.

Cofiniere Lands.

Commander Cofiniere landed at once on Saturday evening and held a half hour's conference with Admiral Berrara. In the course of a conversation the Admiral said:

"Until this afternoon I had no instructions respecting the Sfax, but now that Commander Cofiniere has landed I am able to give you a few details.

Dreyfus in Good Health.

"First of all, Dreyfus has been in the best of health during the voyage and has an excellent appetite. He was given an officer's cabin, which was especially arranged for his convenience. This cabin has not been changed in any way, and to-morrow newspaper men will be allowed on board to see it. Dreyfus wore during the voyage a white linen suit, the usual attire of French officers in the colonial service.

Orders Were all Mysterious.

"The Sfax received its modified orders in a sealed letter on touching at Cape Vincent. The orders, which were unknown even to myself, were to proceed to Quiberon, where she was instructed to arrive at 9 o'clock on the evening of June 30. The Candan and the guardship L'Orien received orders on Thursday to meet the Sfax, and left port the same evening. The Sfax, not being due until Friday, the Candan awaited her outside the little port, Port Aliquen. A heavy sea was running, and the vessel's position was somewhat dangerous, in view of the fact that she took on board no pilot, and that a thick mist prevailed during the greater part of the time.

"The Sfax arrived on Friday, and Dreyfus, as you know, was landed, though not without some difficulty. The Sfax left again at 8 o'clock in the morning, avoiding the semaphores, as she desired not to be signalled until her arrival at Brest."

No Excitement.

There has been absolutely no sign of excitement anywhere.

"Court" Instead of "Tribunal."

The Hague, July 3.—The drafting committee on the arbitration, adopted on Saturday afternoon the American amendment to the code procedure relative to revision of the sentence of the Arbitration Court in certain cases. The committee dealt, in the second reading, with the motion of Sir Julian Pauncefote, head of the British delegation, to change the word "tribunal" to "court," which was adopted. So the official name is "Permanent" Court of Arbitration. The committee also passed the second reading of the first four articles of Sir Julian Pauncefote's motion.

CUSTOMS REVENUE JUMPED.

An Increase of $3,389,433 for the Year 1898-99.

Ottawa, July 3.—Canada's customs revenue for the fiscal year 1898-9, which closed on Friday, was the largest in the fiscal record of the Dominion, amounting to a total increase of $3,389,433 for the year, as compared with the fiscal year 1897-98. The totals are: For 1897-98, $21,879,875; $25,269,308 for 1898-99. Increase for 1898 99, $3,389,433. There are some amounts not yet to hand and by the time all is in the increase will be about $3,500,000.

MET DEATH BY FIRE.

Mrs. Dodds the Victim of a Lamp Explosion at Port Hope.

Port Hope, July 3.—On Friday night about 10 o'clock, Mrs. Dodds, an old lady who is at present visiting Mrs. Ferguson on Hagerman street, was retiring, and while going upstairs the lamp which she carried exploded. She had Mrs. Ferguson's youngest child in her arms at the time, but managed to save it, and then ran for the street. When found she was lying on the doorstep with every vestige of garment, and also her hair, burnt off. Five doctors were called, but their efforts were of no avail, as she only lived about four hours, expiring about 1 o'clock Saturday morning.

Sadie Holt Was Poisoned.

Wheatley, Ont., July 3.—The following verdict was rendered on Friday night from the evidence taken on June 28, as the cause of the death of Miss Sadie Holt, who was found dead in her room on Friday morning, June 16:

"We, the jury empaneled to inquire into the cause of the death of Miss Sadie Holt, find that she came to her death by poison administered by herself for a purpose other than suicide, and believe that the deceased was aided by some persons unknown to the jury in procuring drugs for said purpose."

Boy Drowned at Picton.

Picton, Ont., July 3.—Thomas Shaw's only son Charlie, aged 9, returned home from school on Friday, and started down to Hepburn's wharf and borrowed a punt, into which he climbed and set out from shore. He was not missed until evening, when his parents became anxious and started a search, which resulted first in finding his cap, and about 2 o'clock Saturday morning his body, a short distance from where he was last seen.

Widow's Son Drowned.

Montreal, July 3.—Dominion Day's pleasure was marred by a sad accident at Cotoau, where the 17-year-old son of the late Raoul De Beanjeu, M.P., was drowned in the rapids. Some ten years ago a brother of the deceased was drowned on Lake Winnipeg, together with Oliver Morphy of Toronto.

Rossland's Output.

Rossland, B.C., July 3.—The shipments from Rossland camp for the first six months of the year total 64,277 tons, as against 38,877 tons for the same period of 1898, an increase of 25,400 tons in the six months.

The Hamburg-American steamer Phoenicia arrived on Sunday afternoon at Halifax from Hmburg and landed 355 immigrants, mostly Galicians. One child died on the passage.

Generous Young Man!

"It is only right that I should tell you," she said, "that father has lost all."

"Not all!" he exclaimed.

"Yes, all," she asserted.

"No," he said, firmly, "not all. You are still left to him. I could not be so cruel as to add to his misfortunes. Tell him, tell him from me, that my generosity impels me to leave him what little lies in my power."—Chicago Post.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

Little Katie McLean Drowned in an Uncovered Fire Tank at Goderich on Saturday.

Goderich, Ont., July 3.—About 7 o'clock on Saturday evening Katie McLean, aged 9, daughter of Mr. John McLean of this town, was missed from her home. Not having been seen for two hours, and, as there was a large water tank nearby that was being filled up, a neighbor looked in and saw the child's hat floating on the water. As there was considerable water in the tank and three loads of dirt had been dumped in after the child was supposed to have fallen in, the steam fire engine was taken to the spot, the water pumped out, and a few minutes afterwards the little one was found a few inches under the dirt. The body was laid on the road and presented a pitiable sight, as it was almost encased in mud. The coroner, Dr. J. W. Holmes, who was present, decided that an inquest was necessary, and the same will be continued on Monday or Tuesday. The tank is an old one that was used for fire purposes before the town had waterworks. It was covered with long logs about a foot in diameter, some of which had been removed to allow the filling up, and it was through the opening thus made that the little one must have fallen. There were a great many people present when the body was found and there was much comment about the opening into the well being left unguarded during the filling-in process.

DEATH OF W. P. KILLACKEY.

Rupture of One of the Blood Vessels of the Brain or Apoplexy.

Windsor, Ont., July 3.—While W. P. Killackey, one of Windsor's best-known citizens, was seated at the supper table on Friday evening he was taken with severe pains in the region of the abdomen, followed by excessive vomiting. Dr. Reaume was summoned, but was unable to save his patient, who died at 10 o'clock. Probably the vomiting caused a rupture of one of the blood vessels of the brain, and apoplexy followed.

Mr. Killackey was 38 years of age and was born in Elgin County, near St. Thomas. For a number of years he was Separate School Inspector for the County of Kent, but in June, 1896, just after the general election for the House of Commons, he was appointed deputy collector of customs for the port of Windsor. He held that position about a year. Since that time Mr. Killackey acted as organizer in Province of Ontario for the Catholic Mutual Benevolent Association.

Mr. Killackey unsuccessfully contested Kent and South Essex in elections for the House of Commons. He was a clever and impressive platform speaker.

DIED IN ELEVEN MINUTES.

A Toronto Junction Woman Saturates Herself With Coal Oil and Set Fire to Herself.

Toronto Junction, July 3.—An awful way of ending life was that adopted by Mrs. Bray, wife of W. H. Bray, a pedlar on Somerset avenue, on Sunday morning. The woman is about 55 years of age and has been demented for some time, frequently giving expression to the thought that she wished she was out of the way. Yesterday morning, unnoticed by any of her relatives, she saturated her clothes with coal oil and then set fire to herself with a match. The flames immediately ran up her dress and she rushed into the street a living bonfire. Mrs. Charlton, who was standing at her gate on the street, was the first to notice her and she at once bethought herself of blankets and cloths. Mrs. Bray, however, evidently repented of her rash deed and rushed across the road to Mr. Phillips' where she knocked at the door. All was over in about eleven minutes, for the flames speedily did their work and she fell on her back from the door burned to death.

"Mrs. Sanders had ten hemorrhages and people here said she would never be well again."

W. A. Sanders, Esq., of Hern, Mason County, W. Va., writes: "My wife had hemorrhage of the lungs. She had ten hemorrhages and people here said she would never be well again. But she began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and she soon began to gain strength and flesh. After taking ten bottles she was entirely well. If you think this will do you any good to publish, just use it, and, if anyone disputes the merits of this almost omnipotent medicine, they may enclose a self-addressed envelope with stamp, and I will answer."

When anything is wrong with the lungs there is no time to lose. The steps are easy and quick from a "slight cold" to bronchitis; from bronchitis to pneumonia; from pneumonia to permanently weakened lungs, and from that to dread consumption itself.

The time to cure consumption is before it gets a start. Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery on the first appearance of cough or cold, and you will never have a hemorrhage or a tubercle. The "Discovery" is the greatest health builder in the world. It first straightens out all digestive disorders, and aids the body in ridding itself of poisonous effete matter. It tones up the stomach, invigorates the liver and in connection with Dr. Pierce's Pellets keeps the bowels open and regular. Don't let an unscrupulous medicine dealer foist some substitute when you want Dr. Pierce's medicines. Assert your rights—get what you ask for, and be well.

DEADMAN'S ISLAND.

A Discussion of Mr. Theo. Ludgate's Celebrated Contest in British Columbia.

Montreal Star.

Mr. Theodros Ludgate to whom the Dominion Government granted a lease of Deadman's Island in Vancouver Harbour for fifty years for the small rental of five hundred dollars annually is very much disgusted with the action of the citizens of Vancouver in resisting the attempt to turn what was intended to be a beautiful city park into a saw-mill property. He found it a very easy thing to get the Dominion Government to grant him a long lease of this most valuable property at a nominal rental, but when he tried to take possession the trouble began. The Vancouver Council resisted him in the first place on the grounds that the Dominion Government had already leased the island to Vancouver as a portion of the city park and afterwards on the grounds that it did not belong to the Dominion Government at all, but to either the Provincial Government or the Imperial Government. Mr. Ludgate is now looking for a site for a saw-mill at some other point on the coast according to the Liberal "Daily Province," of Vancouver, which has supported the Dominion Government in the matter, while the other two daily newspapers have opposed it, although one of them generally supports the Liberal party. In an interview with "The Province" before leaving the city Mr. Ludgate offered to bet $10,000 that the court would ultimately decide that the island belonged to the Dominion Government. He is reported to have concluded with the following threat:

I will hold the lease to the island and when the dispute is over I may reward the citizens of Vancouver by erecting a large offensive slaughter house there, just to give their aesthetic tastes a genuine shock.

Such a threat should make the people of Vancouver more than ever determined to prevent Mr. Ludgate getting possession of the island, although it is hardly conceivable that he would carry it out if he had the power. If the Dominion Government has so worded the lease so as to give Mr. Ludgate such power whether he would exercise it or not it is an alarming example of business incapacity. We hope that in other agreements made by the Government with capitalists the contracts have not been so loosely worded.

Vancouver is the Pacific gateway of the Dominion. It is the jumping-off place for travellers between Asia and America. It is to the interest of all Canada that strangers passing through should have a good impression of it. Canadians in general will hope that the citizens of Vancouver may succeed in thwarting Mr. Ludgate and preserve the island as a park.

The Electric Light

Is a matter of small importance compared with other applications of electricity. By this agency Polson's Nerviline is made to penetrate to the most remote nerve—every bone, muscle and ligament is made to feel its beneficent power. Nerviline, pleasant to take, even by the youngest child, yet so powerfully far reaching in its work that the most agonizing internal pain yields as if by magic. Nerviline relieves neuralgia instantly and for the speedy cure of nerve pains of every description it has no equal. Sold everywhere.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hemnick & Co., of Shelby, N.C. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

—Millbrook is to have a celebration on July 12th.

The Late Gordon White.

The funeral of the late Gordon White took place on Friday afternoon from the family residence, Charlotte-st., and was attended by a large gathering of the friends of the deceased young man and the family. Services at the house and the grave were conducted by Rev. J. C. Davidson, rector of Peterborough, and Rev. W. L. Armitage, of All Saints. The pall bearers were Lionel King, M. Comstock, R. Watt, W. Crossley, H. Stenson and H. Conway. At St. John's church yesterday Rev. J. C. Davidson referred to the loss sustained in the parish by the death of Mr. Gordon White, who was a young man of thoughtful and religious instincts who had grown up in the Sunday school and the church and had always done his duty. The united sympathy of the congregation went out to his family so sorrowfully bereaved.

THERE'S NO RISK

In buying where the "Money Back" plan is lived up to, nothing could be simpler; nothing could be easier. Pick the goods as carefully as you can. Get every possible help from the salesperson. YOU KNOW that no one has an atom of interest in selling you a single thing that is not

1—WORTH EVERY CENT YOU PAY FOR IT.
2.—LIKELY TO SATISFY YOU COMPLETELY.

Every interest of the store is against selling you goods that will not please you. It would simply mean cost to the store to sell you such things; it might mean loss of your custon. And so the only thought is to give you good money's worth and goods that you will welcome in the "home-quiet," or with friends at your elbow.

It would be folly to charge you too much.
It would be folly to sell you too much.
It would be folly to deceive you in anyway, either as to styles, or fitness, or value.

The "Money-Back" policy knocks every selfish reason for sharp dealing out of storekeeping. A child can buy in such a store as safely as the sharpest shopper of them all.

Our "Cash Only" method insures the littlest of little prices to us in the markets, and to you at the counters.

SOLDIERLY WORDS TO SOLDIERS.

THE ANNUAL MILITARY PARADE TO ST. JOHN'S.

Chaplain Davidson on a Soldier's Duty—Discipline and Obedience Necessary—A Regiment not a Military Club.

The annual church parade of the 57th battalion, Peterborough Rangers, was held yesterday, July 2nd, to St. John's church, where a short but inspiring discourse was delivered by the chaplain, Rev. J. C. Davidson. The battalion was accompanied by C Squadron of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. The men assembled at the drill shed shortly before 4 o'clock and marched to the church. First came the pioneer corps of the 57th, then the 57th battalion band, the bugle and drum corps, the Dragoons, under Capt. Johnston and Lieuts. Bradburn and Hall, and the Rangers brought up the rear. Col. Bell was at the head of the battalion and the other staff officers were Majors Edwards and Miller, Major Denniston, paymaster; Adjt. Morrow, and Chaplain, J. C. Davidson. Lt.-Col. H. C. Rogers headed the Dragoons and his staff officers were Major Greenwood, Surgeon Major Young, Capt. Garvin, quartermaster, and Adjt. Cockburn. Lieuts. Hall and Hayward of B squadron of the Dragoons were present. The 57th was about one hundred strong. Both cavalry and infantry made a fine appearance in their march down the street. Many spectators watched the parade with interest. The service at St. John's was brief, bright and hearty, the men taking part better than on any previous occasion. A large choir, reinforced for the occasion, led the singing in good style. The splendid band of the 57th also rendered a sacred selection during the service.

The special lesson was read by Lt.-Col. Bell from Judges VII., giving the interesting description of Gideon's victory over the Midianites.

The address by Chaplain Davidson was brief, pointed and timely. On behalf of the commanding officer of the 57th he extended a warm and sincere welcome to the officers and men of the Dragoons present. The text was taken from Judges VII., 21, "They stood every man in his place."

The speaker pointed out that the way to make life a satisfaction to oneself, one's country and to God is to do what you bught t odo and be what and where you bught to be. The victory described in the lesson of the day was won by implicit obedience and absolute discipline. A small and select body of men under daring officers went forward against a great army—won the victory under God's direction.

Rev. Mr. Davidson believed that too much attention is given to numbers, to having the multitude for backing.

DOMINION DAY CELEBRATION

How the Citizens of Peterborough and there Visirors spent the National Holiday---A Big Crowd in Town---The Attractions of the Day All Well Patronised.

Dominion Day was loyally celebrated in Peterborough, all our citizens showing themselves good Canadians by joining in some form of festivity to mark the anniversary. Beautiful weather prevailed and as a result almost all the attractions of the day were well patronized and were consequently successful. The business houses were closed and the town presented a gala appearance. There was an unusually large number of strangers in the city for the holiday, the two large excursions from Toronto bringing in a couple of thousand pleasure seekers, while there were no very large excursions out of town. The people amused themselves in various ways, but to whichever special place of pleasure they repaired all seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves.

THE HOSPITAL PICNIC.

The Annual Event in Aid of St. Joseph's Hospital a Big Success.

The main attraction in town was the picnic in aid of St. Joseph's hospital, an annual event under the auspices of the congregation of St. Peter's cathedral and held on the grounds of the hospital, Ashburnham. The committee had made special efforts to have the picnic of 1899 a success that would take precedence of all past ones, and the end was accomplished. In the exceedingly large attendance and in the number and variety of attractions furnished for the public the picnic broke all records. People began to arrive on the grounds quite early in the morning and when the 57th Battalion band marched over about 10.30 the number was largely augmented. Many came about noon, the ladies of the congregation having established a high reputation for excellent meals. During the afternoon there was a stream of pleasure seekers to the grounds and late in the afternoon they were filled with a bright and happy crowd and presented a charming appearance. Many came in the cool of the evening, and when the display of fireworks was in progress the mass of people that assembled on the hill below the hospital was an immense one.

The pleasures of the day were many. In the morning a lacrosse match was played on the grounds between the Shamrocks, of Peterborough, and the Maple Leafs, of Campbellford. It was an interesting game and resulted in a tie, each side scoring two goals. Simons and Dolan scored for the Shamrocks and L McCoy scored both for the Maple Leafs. A. McPherson refereed. The teams were:—

Maple Leafs—W Whitty, M McCann, B Maynard, N Beatty, C Brady, L McCoy, F Casey, F McCoy, J Kerr, E Dunn, L McGrath, A Casey, and E Crowe, field captain.

Shamrocks—J Gilman, P Simons, J Dolan, W Judge, W Smith, J Walsh, P Kelly, H Gilman, F McGrath; J Mulligan, W O'Brien, D White. M Galvin, field captain.

The 57th Battalion band was present all day and evening and discoursed from their repertoire a programme that was much appreciated. The dancing pavilion was well patronized in the evening, though not as much enjoyment was taken out of it during the daytime as is usual. The orchestra was composed of Miss McCabe and Messrs Butcher and Miller. Mr Archie Moore acted as master of ceremonies. A splendid programme of athletic events was run off during the afternoon, Mr George Giroux having this department in charge. A couple of quoit matches were also played. A merry-go-round provided lots of amusement for the children. At four or five booths ladies dispensed ice cream and such refreshments in charming style. Besides all these there were a number of standard picnic attractions.

The display of fireworks in the evening was a splendid one. The exhibition was given in the open field below the hospital, the spectators congregating on the slope and terrace above, from which an excellent view could be obtained. The works were well managed and the exhibition was given without a hitch of any kind.

The dinner and tea tables were well managed. The supply of edibles was large and embraced all manner of good things, both substantial and dainty. The tables were spread in appetizing style. The ladies in charge of the different tables are to be congratulated upon their excellent work, an unselfish labor in which they did not spare themselves. Those in charge were as follows:—

No. 1 Ward—Mesdames Riley, Leplante, Thos Leplante, Morrow, Kelly, Barrett, Forcier, Dunn, Doris, Zeraw, O'Malley, Gatchure, Rouey, Cahill, Mahoney, and Crowley and Misses McCabe, Moher and Karch. Mrs Crowley and the Misses Crowley had charge of the refreshment booth. Messrs R J Winch and John Leplante were carvers for the table and Mr Picard was superintendent general.

No. 2 Ward—Mesdames LeBrun, (Dr) Moher, McGrath, Heffernan, Pope, Sullivan, Sharpe and Misses McCarthy and McLaughlin. Booth, Mesdames Donoghue and Jones and Misses McGrath and Lynch.

Wards 3 and 4—Mesdames McFadden, M O'Brien, O'Sullivan, Dwyer, Dineen, Doris, Simons, Kane, Cronin, Callaghan, Archambault, and Misses Burke, O'Keefe, McFadden,

Miss Mary Mitchell Expires Without a Moment's Illness.

Miss Mary Margaret Mitchell, eldest daughter of Mr. George Mitchell, died in a remarkably sudden manner on Saturday morning. She had prepared to go to a picnic with friends and had left the house and when a few yards away she remembered having left something behind and went back for it. Inside the house she said "It's so warm." A friend noticed something peculiar in her voice and asked her to sit down. Just at that instant Miss Mitchell dropped to the floor dead. Heart failure is supposed to have been the cause. The funeral of the young woman took place this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery from the residence of her uncle, Mr. Robt. LONDON'S NEW BISHOP.

Short Sketch of Rev. Mgr. McEvay, who is Bishop of London.

The Catholic Register in publishing the appointment of Rev. Mgr. McEvay as Bishop of London, says:—

"Right Rev. Fergus P. McEvay was born in Lindsay, Ont., on the 8th of December, 1852. He received his education at Lindsay Separate school, St. Michael's College, Toronto, St. Francis' Seminary, Milwaukee, and the Grand Seminary, Montreal. He took the Dowling medal for literature at St. Michael's in the class of 1877, and stood high in all his classes, and captured several prizes. He was ordained priest on the 9th of July, 1882, and was then appointed parish priest for Fenelon Falls, where he remained five years. While in this parish he had charge of several churches, scattered over a wide area, and did much travelling on horseback, administering the comforts of religion to the people and accomplishing a heroic work. After this he was appointed rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough, and chancellor of the diocese. On May 1st, 1889, on the occasion of the translation of Bishop Dowling to Hamilton, it was arranged between the Bishop of Peterborough and the Bishop of Hamilton that he should be transferred to the diocese of the latter, which arrangement was subsequently ratified at Rome, and he obtained a new titulus for the Diocese of Hamilton.

"Soon after this he was appointed rector of St. Mary's Cathedral, which position he has held with great acceptability. Bishop McEvay has been very successful, not only in the spiritual work of the church, but also in church building and repairing. While in Peterborough he ably carried out the bishop's idea in erecting St. Joseph's Hospital and several other important improvements in connection with the church there. Since he arrived at Hamilton, he has been in labors abundant, supervising the erection of the magnificent new presbytery, St. Lawrence church, and a beautiful mortuary chapel and vault at Rock Bay cemetery, as well as extensive repairs to the cathedral. His busy life contains the fullest evidence of his untiring efforts to promote the interests of the church."

A Couple of Accidents.

On Friday last a man named Walker had his his right index finger crushed severely in some machinery at the canal near Rice Lake. On Friday also Fred Sanderson, an employee of the Auburn Woollen Mills, had his right hand caught in some machinery which he was cleaning and it was so lacerated that the first three fingers had to be amputated while the fourth finger also is badly injured. Dr Brown attended to the injuries of both men.

He Got the Window.

Old "Saw Log" Sam Stevenson is said to be the richest man in Michigan. He was in congress several years, but was defeated for re-election in 1894. He lives in the upper peninsula, and is a lumber king. He was probably the most ignorant man who ever sat in congress. He knew the value of a dollar, however, and could tell the color of one as far as the next man. He could be generous on occasion, and, on occasion, he could be lavish.

When forest fires swept over Wisconsin some years ago and wrought such destruction and occasioned such destitution, "Saw Log" Sam wired Pillsbury, at Minneapolis, to send to the sufferers 1,000 barrels of flour and forward the bill to him.

When McKinley was inaugurated, one of the Vanderbilts was a guest of the Arlington hotel. He sent his secretary out to secure a window on the avenue from which to view the parade. The man asked $400 for it, and the secretary told him to hold it until he could consult Mr. Vanderbilt. Nearly all the windows had been taken. Along came "Saw Log" Sam window hunting, and approached the window seller Vanderbilt's man had been negotiating with. After some haggling "Saw Log" bought the window for $1,000 cash in hand and he and his party at once took possession.

A Little Punctuation.

People who fail to punctuate their communications are invited to study the following line, which is a correct sentence:

"It was and I said not or."

We got that line one day this week by wire, where punctuations are always omitted. We nearly wrecked our mentality trying to clear up the mystery of the single line, when all of a sudden it occurred to us to look up a copy of our letter to the party, when we discovered that our friend wanted to inform us he did not use the word "or," but did use "and." To be plain, the sentence is correct and should have read, "It was 'and' I said—not 'or.'"

Another party who has been studying Pope wrote us as follows: "My Dear Mr. George—I have been thinking over the statement you made last week, and I too believe that that is is that that is not is not, and I take pleasure in believing so."

A good way to untangle the above is to write it as follows: "That that is, is. That that is not, is not." In other words, it is a play on Pope's "whatever is, is right." People who eschew punctuation should not feel hurt if their meaning is not always readily grasped.—George's Denver Weekly.

She Was Over Twenty-one.

In Australia there are so few natives left that anything but a white man's marriage is a comparative rarity. The curious difference, however, between weddings there and in the mother country is that here we license the place for the solemnization of the ceremony and at the antipodes they license the man who performs the rites. Marriage can be performed at the registrar's office for a guinea, but if a minister knowingly marries a minor without her people's consent he is liable to imprisonment and a fine of $1,500. If, however, the contracting parties have taken the oath that they are of full age, he is safe, though it has happened more than once that young lovers have gone to the registry office and obviously perjured themselves on the age question.

A smart but very good looking girl in Australia who was once asked, "Have you the written consent of your parents?" responded, "No, but I'm over 21."

"Are you sure?" doubtfully. "As sure as I stand here," was the answer, and indeed what she said was accurate enough, for she had written the number 21 on the sole of each of her shoes.—Cassell's Magazine.

A Query For Him.

He had discoursed learnedly, if somewhat wearyingly, to his friend on the influence of food upon character.

"Tell me," said he in summing up, "tell me what a man eats and I will tell you what he is."

His friend, though fatigued, was evidently interested.

"There is only one question I wish to ask you," he said.

"Ask it," replied the discourser magnanimously, with an air that said very clearly, "Give me a hard one while you are at it and I'll show you how smart I am."

"It is this," replied the fatigued friend. "How much sage tea would you have to drink to make a wise man of yourself?"

No answer being promptly forthcoming, the conference broke up.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

CHAPTER XI Continued.

"I understand—perhaps you can. I like you, sir, while his ways make me mad. He thinks we Maltese dogs. I say no more—only look out for him. It easy to sink when plank in boat loosened."

Without another word the fellow glides down the rope to his boat, and pushes off with his soaked companion.

When John turns and heads for his state-room, he has something to think about, and the consciousness that there has been some foul play about this accident makes him decidedly uneasy.

Now they are off, the passengers who in the morning started on a pilgrimage to Civita Vecchia having returned in good time.

When Doctor Chicago once more comes on deck, clad in warm, dry clothes, the lights of Valetta are astern, and the steamer is putting miles between them.

He paces up and down, reflecting upon the startling event of the evening.

What can the significant words of the boatman mean, if not what he suspects.

John would not wrong any one, and he believes it policy to keep this to himself. At the same time he realizes that the game is taking on a desperate phase, when a gentleman of Sir Lionel's calibre descends to such treachery, in order to make himself a favorite with the fair English maid.

Of course, it was his intention to save Lady Ruth, and appear the hero. He trusted in his own well-known ability as an expert swimmer to accomplish this, and never once thought fate would step in and deal him such a blow.

As near as can be learned from what the wet boatman said when picked up just when the craft was sinking Sir Lionel must have stumbled and fallen, striking his head upon the gunwale, which rendered him unconscious.

John walks up and down, smoking and pondering, and, when his thoughts go toward Lady Ruth, he smiles as if they are pleasant.

Twice he goes to seek the stewardess to make inquiries concerning the young woman, and is gratified to hear that the ship's Scotch surgeon has given her a glass of warm toddy to keep her from taking cold as a result of her exposure, and that having retired she is now in a perfectly natural sleep.

Pleased with this, he lights another cigar and resumes his walk, to meet Sir Lionel, who has quite recovered from his ducking, and is disposed to treat the whole matter something like a joke.

John engages him in conversation for a purpose, and learns what he can about the peculiar affair; but the soldier professes to know nothing beyond the fact that the boatman suddenly cried that the craft was sinking, whereupon he called out for assistance from the other boat, and then, as the emergency seemed very close, he sprang up to save Lady Ruth, when his foot caught in the thwart and he pitched heavily forward.

He was not wholly unconscious, and with some one's help, he knew not whom at the time, he managed to crook his arm through the rope belonging to the tiller. After which he knew no more until he came to on board the steamer and found the surgeon pouring whiskey down his throat.

"Perhaps your boatman was crazy. I'm sure our fellow must have been out of his mind, judging from his actions when leaving the steamer. Why he even warned me to keep an eye on you, sir."

At this the Englishman removes his cigar from between his teeth, looks hard at the doctor, says "by Jove!" several times, and then laughs heartily.

"That is very funny. Indeed, I can't remember anything that strikes me as more peculiar. Any one can watch me—my actions are, I hope, above-board. It is true I am disappointed in not having been able to have saved Lady Ruth, but so long as some one took her from the water, what does it matter? The boatmen are mad because they lost a craft. Jove! I'd like to teach them a lesson for taking out passengers in a cranky, rotten boat. Do you know, I believe my foot went clean through the bottom when I jumped up."

This, spoken in a frank, ingenuous way, quite disarms John.

He does not like to think evil of his fellow human beings, at any rate.

The wind is increasing meanwhile, and clouds hide the young moon.

"I believe we will have a storm," is the last remark Sir Lionel makes, as he staggers across the rising deck and makes a plunge down into the cabin, for although a duck in the water, the Briton is no yachtsman, and possibly already feels the grip of the coming mal de mer.

His words are soon verified, however, for the waves and wind continue to rise until the steamer is mightily buffeted. Still John remains on deck. There is a fascination for him in the scene that words cannot express. When he has had enough, he will find his state-room and sleep, for surely he needs it after being awake a good deal of the preceding night at Valetta.

Darker grow the heavens. Thunder rolls, and the electric current cuts the air, illuminating the wild scene with a picturesque touch that is almost ghastly in its yellow white.

The steamer is well built and in good condition to withstand the tempest, roar as it may. John tires of the weird spectacle at last, and he, too, makes a plunge for the cabin, reaching it just in time to escape a monster wave that makes the vessel stagger, and sweeps along the deck from stem to stern.

Below he finds considerable confusion, such as is always seen on board a steamer during a storm, timid men looking as white as ghosts, frightened women wringing their hands and screaming with each plunge of the ship, as if they expect it to be their last.

A few foreign passengers are aboard, and they do not seem free from the contagion, though inclined to be more stoical than the Europeans.

As the steamer plunges, some of the passengers are huddled in a corner. Loud praying can be heard, and those who are least accustomed to such things on ordinary occasions are most vehement now.

A Mohammedan is kneeling on his rug, with his face turned in the direction of Mecca, as near as he can judge, and going through the strange rigmarole of bows and muttered phrases that constitute his religion.

This scene is not a very pleasant one, but there are features about it which are worth being noticed, and John stands to gaze before seeking his room.

He has heard from the captain that the boat is perfectly safe, unless the storm should grow much heavier, and with this assurance intends to seek his berth and sleep if such a thing be possible.

He moves toward his state-room. Just then a billow strikes the steamer amidships, and she rolls. This, not being expected, causes John to slide across the cabin floor to the accompaniment of a chorus of cries from the frightened people, who are huddled in a corner by this new move on the part of the vessel.

He brings up alongside a state-room door, which is in the act of being opened, even as he hangs up against it.

Consequently, John has the greatest difficulty in maintaining his balance, and, in order to keep from sliding through the door, grasps the sides.

Some one has opened it. A face is exposed close to his own, a face that, although not terror-stricken, bears the evidence of sudden alarm, as though the new pitch of the vessel and renewed shrieks from within have aroused fear—a face that John Craig recognizes without amazement.

"Tell me, are we sinking?" she exclaims.

Then she looks again.

"Ah! Doctor Chicago!"

"You here, Pauline Potter?"

The presence of the actress on board the steamer gives him a sudden thrill.

It is no mere accident that brings her, but a part of a deep-laid plan, which perhaps not only concerns him, but one in whom he has taken the deepest interest—Lady Ruth.

That is why he cries out, and his words have more than an ordinary amount of astonishment in them.

"Yes, I am leaving Malta. I have no reason to remain there longer. But tell me the worst, John Craig; are we doomed to go down?"

The vessel does not toss so wildly now, and the wails of the alarmed passengers grow less in volume.

"I hope not. The captain assured me there was no danger whatever, and told me to get some sleep, if I could. I am on my way to my berth now. Be of good cheer, the morning will see us safe enough, I believe."

Then he leaves her, and the state-room door closes.

This encounter makes John think of the other ladies. Are Aunt Gwen and Lady Ruth amongst those whose clamor arises from the cabin with each lurch of the ship?

As the thought flashes upon his mind, some one clutches his arm, and, turning, he beholds the little professor. There is a wild look in Philander's eyes, and his teeth rattle like castanets. Really the situation is terrible enough to appall any one.

"When do we go down, John?" he asks.

"Good Heaven! I trust not at all," and he cheers the other with what the captain has told him.

"I wish you could tell the ladies that."

"Where are they?" asks John.

"Come with me."

In a few seconds the doctor sees the ladies who have a state-room together. They are fully dressed, and look woebegone. At each lunge of the vessel they gasp, and, when a particularly big one occurs, fall into each other's arms.

(To be continued).

Children Cry for

CASTORIA.

He Was Kind, but She Was Clever.

She is a clever woman, a past master in the art of strategy. So agree all who rode down town on the street car the other morning.

She got on a south bound Clark street limits train at Belden avenue. Every seat was taken, and almost every strap had a man or woman suspended from it. She looked about hesitatingly for an instant, but every man was wonderfully interested in his paper. Then she took hold of a strap almost in front of a young man, a very young man, who was blushing guiltily as he pretended to read.

While the young man blushed and the woman thus hung her handkerchief fluttered, accidentally by all appearances, to the floor. The young man looked up just then and saw the white bit of cambric. The feeling of chivalry which he evidently was trying to stifle would not be stifled longer.

He arose and stooped for the handkerchief. This was the woman's opportunity. While his back was turned she gently slipped into his seat. When he turned about and saw what had occurred, he almost collapsed. But the woman did not. She took her handkerchief out of his hand, smiling innocently.

"Thank you," she said sweetly. "You are very kind."—Chicago Journal.

Might Destroy All Life.

In a signed article in The Electrical Review Nicola Tesla describes some of his experiments in the line of electrical currents of high voltage and gives details of the coil which he used. "The discharges of such a coil," he adds, "when of an electromotive force of a few millions of volts, excite powerful affinities in the atmospheric nitrogen, causing it to combine readily with the oxygen and other elements, particularly in the presence of aqueous vapor.

"So energetic are these actions and so strangely do such powerful discharges behave that I have often experienced a fear that the atmosphere might be ignited, a terrible possibility, which Sir William Crookes, with his piercing intellect, has already considered. Who knows but such a calamity is possible? And who can tell with certitude that periodical cessations of organic life on the globe might not be caused by ignition of the air and destruction of its life sustaining qualities, accidentally or as a consequence of some accumulative change? A lump of coal will lie for centuries unaffected in contact with oxygen, but, the combustion once started, the process continues as long as there are elements to combine."

The Queen Kept the Letter.

The late Mrs. Keeley used to tell the following story about the visit she paid to the queen at Buckingham palace on the occasion of the jubilee in 1887. Being incredulous of the genuineness of the invitation, she was disposed to treat the royal command as a joke and wrote a rather sarcastic letter to the official, a personal friend, who had addressed it to her. This he gave to the queen, and the veteran actress was a little disconcerted when her majesty told her she had read the letter. Mrs. Keeley begged that it should be restored to her. "No, no, Mrs. Keeley," answered the queen, "it is safely pasted in my autograph book. You'll never get it again."

THE MARKETS.

Wheat Showed a Surprising Degree of Strength in Chicago on Saturday—East Buffalo Cattle Markets—Quotations.

Chicago, July 3.—In view of the fact that no session of the Board of Trade will be held until Wednesday, wheat on Saturday showed a surprising degree of strength, and closed at an advance of 1¾c for September. Strong cables, poor threshing returns and improved outside demand were factors in creating a strong and active market.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

East Buffalo, N.Y., July 3.—Cattle—The receipts of sale cattle on Saturday were 11 loads, of which 10 were Canadian, part of which were sold at private terms. There were only a few head of calves on sale, with a slight demand for small lots. Choice to extra, $6 to $6.25; good to choice, $5.50 to $6.

Sheep and Lambs—Seven loads on sale. The demand was light, and there was hardly enough to the market to make a quotable change. Spring lambs, choice to extra, $6.50 to $6.75; good to choice, $6 to $6.50; sheep, choice to extra, $5 to $5.25; good to choice, $4.50 to $5; common to fair $3 to $4.50.

Hogs—The market was fairly active on the basis of $4.15, and 12 loads were on sale. Heavy, $4.10; mixed, $4.10 to $4.15; Yorkers, $4.15; pigs, $4.15; roughs, $3.55 to $3.65; stags, $3 to $3.25. The close was steady.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

Liverpool, July 3.—The prices closed at these figures on Saturday: Wheat, spot No. 2 western winter, firm, 5s 11d; No. 1 red, Northern, Duluth, firm, 6s, 1d; No. 1 Cal., 6s 2½d to 6s 3d. Watertown, N.Y., July 3.—Sales of cheese on the Board of Trade on Saturday 6,500 boxes at 8⅛c to 8⅝c; bulk at 8⅛c, for Montreal and direct export.

Nerves...

Wasted and Shattered by Worry or Overwork are Revitalized by

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food

"Nerves"—what a world of meaning this word has to scores of thousands of women who, through the strains of social life and the worry of home cares, are fast approaching the grave.

Nervous headaches, dyspepsia, irritability by day, restlessness and sleeplessness by night. Pains and aches in the body, derangements of the organs peculiarly feminine, loss of energy and ambition, despondency and despair.

These are some of the symptoms known to the woman of exhausted nerves. These are symptoms which entirely disappear when Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food is used.

Children should always increase in weight. Not to grow, not to increase in flesh, belongs to old age.

Present and future health demands that this increase in weight should be steady and never failing.

To delicate children, Scott's Emulsion brings richer blood and firmer flesh. Better color comes to the cheeks and stronger muscles to the limbs. The gain in weight is substantial; it comes to stay.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.
Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 28th, 1898

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

Numbers are not everything. But if every man is in a regiment with all heart and soul it will be all right. The present position of the 57th is, however, a problem to be faced. It is at present under strength. He would offer two suggestions from the text. It is an imperative essential of military organization that orders must come from the Officer Commanding, and were is not to be discussed, criticized or voted on by the generality of officers or men. Moreover men should not think of military service as something in which they were to seek their own pleasure. Could anyone imagine a soldier in either Gideon's band or a British regiment of the time offering his services on condition of being pleased? How utterly unmilitary it would be! Someone naturally wanted his own way, but there was something, said the chaplain, they wanted more than this. They wanted their regiments to be regiments, not social clubs with a club's elective organization and changing policy. They wanted them animated by the spirit running through regiments.

"Their's not to reason why,
"Their's but to do and die."

Rev Mr Davidson had found out by talking with officers at the Niagara camp that a comparatively small numerical strength was characteristic of many of the regiments of Ontario to-day. But quality is better than quantity. In the 57th Battalion to-day there is a class of young men, moral, worthy and honest, and well fitted to uphold the honor of the battalion. The speaker believed that in this way the battalion was above the standard, and he believed that in it a new stock was growing up and would continue to grow. They must all resolve to "stand every man in his place," doing his duty to his regiment and also to God in the church to which they belonged. Mr Davidson here spoke on behalf of the different clergy of the town to the men, asking them the questions, Do you attend church? Do you say your prayers? Do you live a pure, honorable, Christian life?

He closed by describing a drill of the "Queen's Own" which he had lately witnessed, instancing the drummers who "stood every man in his place" but sometimes gave never a tap to the drum but were ready when wanted.

Let the officers and men of Peterborough's battalion be loyal and true to their several obligations, doing their duty "every man in his place."

The service was concluded with "God Save the Queen" and the men of both regiments were drawn up on the beautiful church grounds where the red uniforms shone out in a green setting with the old ivy covered church and its flag-topped tower in the background. The brigade was then marched to the drill shed and dismissed for the season after a few remarks by Col. Bell.

Battalion drill will be resumed next September.

THE BASEBALL GAMES.

Peterborough Takes the First and Loses the Second to Cobourg.

Two games of baseball were played at the P A A A. grounds on Dominion Day between the Peterborough and Cobourg teams. The first was won by the home team by 20 runs to 14 and in the afternoon Cobourg won by 12 runs to 9. Both games were interesting, the afternoon game being the best.

The morning game started at 10 o'clock. There were about 150 spectators present. Peterborough went to bat and located the Cobourg pitcher without trouble. They batted well all through the game and showed great improvement in this respect since their last match. They told off 5 runs in the first innings and Cobourg went to bat. Harrington struck out and Comrie batted the sphere over left field fence for a home run. This was their only run that innings however. Peterborough had the lead and kept it safely. They batted the Cobourg twirler for 23 hits and the visitors only got 15 off McCabe though they are a strong batting team. Peterborough's battery and infield was the better of the two but Cobourg excelled in outfield work. McCabe, Graham, Parnell and Connors, at the first bag, all played fine ball. Thompson made a good catch in the seventh. In the 4th McCabe batted the ball over the fence but was put out at home base, the ball having been brought back very quickly and there being no coacher to stop the runner at third.

The score was as follows;

SECOND GAME.

There was a larger crowd present for the afternoon game and considerable interest was manifested. Connors pitched the first three innings as a trial and while he did fair work the heavy Cobourg batters were not fooled by his speed and their side got a good lead. Then McCabe went in the box and the way in which he held the visitors down was the feature of the day. Through his fine work the score was almost evened. Both teams put up good ball. Casserly pitched for Cobourg and was not so easy for the locals as the pitcher in the morning game. Thompson, of the Peterboroughs, had his nose badly injured by being struck by a thrown ball and had to retire.

Mr. Andy Scott, an old Peterborough player, umpired.

The score was:

AT JUBILEE.

Three Hundred Excursionists on the Park-st. Baptist Picnic.

The annual picnic of the Sunday school of Park-st. Baptist church was held at Jubilee Point on Saturday. The weather was ideal picnic weather, and when the steamer City of Peterborough left the wharf over three hundred were on board. The sail down the river was delightful, Jubilee Point being reached about eleven o'clock. After dinner a list of games were disposed of, the winners receiving useful presents that will serve as reminders of one of the most pleasant outings in the history of the school. The following is a list of the games and the winners:—

Boys' race, under 5—1 Howard Parrington, 2 Walter Crowe.

Boys' race, 5 to 8—1 Martin Libby, 2 Chas Pogue.

Boys' race, 8 to 11—1 Bruce Mowry, 2 Walter Libby.

After partaking of tea, the return trip was begun about five o'clock and the wharf reached about nine.

THE LACROSSE

Peterboroughs Badly Defeated at Brampton and the Juniors at Hastings.

The general expectation was that the Peterboroughs would be defeated in their senior lacrosse match at Brampton but it was hardly thought that it would come in such a large dose as 9 goals to 1. Sad to relate, such was the fact. The blow almost and so on.

The explanation is that the men were away off color and even with a weaker team against them could not have won. They played no combination at all. They could neither pass nor throw. Their long trip up in the morning, probably had a great deal to do with it. They left about 8 o'clock, accompanied by half a dozen supporters, and did not reach Brampton till after 2. They had no time to eat or exercise or prepare themselves in any way. So they went on the field and made a complete collapse. The Brampton team scored 6 goals before the Peterborough boys had got their bearings. Then Jack McCabe scored for Peterborough and Brampton took 3 more. Game was called 20 minutes before time.

The exhibition is said to have been a poor one. Peterborough has no excuse for their defeat for the Brampton team put up only a second class game. They are not at all in the championship class.

Peterborough's team appears to have been in very bad shape. A number of the men were playing out of their positions. The teams were:

Brampton—Goal, Whitehead; point, Jennings; cover point, Brown; defence, McClure, H. Peaker, Kirkwood; centre, Neely; home, Clarridge, Lowes, Henry, outside home, Hollins; inside, Robson; field captain, Wm. Shaw.

Peterborough—Goal, Dobbin; point, Main; cover point, Brown; defence, Hollingshead, Glover, McDonough; centre, Bogert; home, King, J. McCabe, Lewis; outside home, Jack McCabe; inside home, McWilliams; field captain, J. Begley.

Brampton plays the return match here on July 12th.

AT HASTINGS.

The juniors played a return game in Hastings. They were defeated by 6 goals to 1. There was a dispute and the teams left the field half an hour before time.

THE CIVIC EMPLOYEES

A Big Crowd at a Picnic at East Nichol's Park

The annual excursion and picnic of the Toronto Civic Employees Union was held to Peterborough on Dominion Day. It was a very successful outing. The civic employees visited Peterborough two years ago and seem much pleased wit hthe town.

Their special of nine coaches arrived at the C.P.R. station before 11 o'clock, having left Toronto at 9. So great was the number desiring to come that the special was not able to accommodate all and a large number waited over for the regular train, which reached town at 11.27. Altogether the excursion brought about 1,200 visitors to town, women and children being present in large numbers.

The picnic was held at Nicholls park. The visitors were much impressed with the beauty of the spot and with its advantages for such a day but there were many complaints about the lack of transportation, only a few busses running up to the grounds, and 25 cents being charged for the trip. Many brought baskets and spread their lunch under the trees at the park while others dined down town at the various hotels. In the afternoon a big list of sports and games were run off. There were fifteen events for members of the union only and fifteen open events. They were all eagerly contested.

The committee in charge of the excursion was composed of S. Deans, chairman, T. Hilton, secretary, J. Jordan, treasurer, C. Ruff, E. J. Hopkins, J. Tipping, E. Williams, and J. Preston.

The excursionists were accompanied by Ald. Woods, chairman of the Board of Control, Ald. Frame, Ald. Stewart, Commissioner Jones and Inspector Johnston.

The committee were assisted by Ex-Coun. John M. White who had gotten up a splendid list of prizes from the generous Peterborough merchants and who assisted in various other ways.

The visitors viewed the principal sights of the town and their special left shortly after 8 o'clock.

They are Perfectly Satisfactory.

Dr. J. Tate, Tate Optical Co.,

Dear Sir,—I feel very grateful to you for the great care you took in the examination of my own and my wife's eyes. The glasses you have fitted for our eyes are perfectly satisfactory, and my wife says she has not had a headache since beginning to wear the glasses you so carefully fitted. Hoping that others may get the same satisfaction. I remain, respectfully yours, Mr Alex Scott.

Ladies, Joyful News!

It is not very often that the ladies of Peterborough have an opportunity of having among them Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, the world-known hair goods artist, whose skill in the manufacture of both ladies' and gent's wigs, toupees, wavey bang fronts, switches, etc., is second to none. He will be at the Snowden house, Peterborough, on Saturday, July 8th, with a full sample line of hair goods styles.

A SONG THAT IS SUNG.

Only a bird! Not soaring to the sky
In woodlands free and meads aglow with spring.
No room was there for songster blithe to fly
Where prison bars made mock of idle wing.
Only a bird! The prison bars were rent
By melody so clear and full and strong
The jealous, free bird chirped in discontent
And fled to hide the forest shades among.

Only a bird! Death came among our group,
And ere we spake the "earth to earth" again
We tried to sing a hymn to give us hope
And comfort in the dreary hour of pain.
'Twas but a bird that put us all to shame.
That sang of peace and hope. When tears made dim
The printed words, a flood of music came
From feathered throat, and God's voice spake through him.

Only a bird! Yet childish eyes are wet
Now that the song is sung, the singer dead,
And elder folk shall mourn the feathered pet
That, timorous, from their careless hands has fled.
Only a bird! My lips the prayer repeat,
"When death tears down my prison bars for me,
The song I've sung may echo just as sweet
And find like favor in the sight of thee!"
—Joseph Dunscombe in Boston Transcript.

CATCHING A COBRA.

A Delicate and Dangerous Operation Interestingly Described.

The cobra is passionately fond of music and is no mean critic thereof. As a rule, it only hears the bagpipe, but if there be any instrument which it loves more than another it is the violin. It is this amiable weakness that sometimes renders it a positive danger to the musical householder in India. By a reciprocity of causation this love of music in the cobra works for its own destruction. For if a cobra takes up its abode in the neighborhood of a dwelling house it is customary to send for a couple of professional snake charmers. One of them strikes up a tune near the place where the cobra is supposed to be.

No matter what the creature may be doing at the time, even if it be out visiting, so to speak, at some neighboring house, it is soon attracted by the music. It emerges slowly from its hiding place and strikes up an attitude in front of the player. There it is kept engaged with the music till the other man gradually creeps behind with a handful of fine dust. At a convenient moment, when the cobra is standing motionless, this man suddenly throws the dust over the head and eyes of the snake.

Immediately the cobra falls its full length upon the ground—for one brief second, but that second is enough. Like a lightning flash—nay, with one and the same motion with which he cast the dust—he seizes the prostrate cobra by the neck just below the head. In fierce anger the snake winds and winds its body round the arm of its captor, but to no purpose. It cannot turn its head to bite. If it be desirable to extract the fangs at once, the captor presses his thumb on the throat of the cobra and thus compels it to open its mouth; then the fangs are drawn with a pair of pinchers. If, however, the operator desires to keep the snake intact for the present, the late musician offers his aid and, forcibly unwinding the coils, places the body of the cobra in a basket, all but the head (which is still held by the other man), and presses down the lid to prevent the cobra from wriggling out. Then suddenly the captor thrusts the head in and bangs down the lid.

In the above description two men are needed to capture the snake, but a very expert charmer may do the feat single handed, though it is highly dangerous. This is the method employed: While playing with one hand he throws the dust sideways with the other and captures the snake with that hand. Of course the whole action is like a lightning flash, and half a second's delay or the merest bungling either in throwing the dust or in catching the snake at the proper place may prove fatal to the operator.—World Wide Magazine.

Some Queer Insurance Cases.

A good story is told of a betting man who was in the habit of regularly purchasing a railway insurance ticket whenever he went on his travels. Once he failed so to do, and his train was in imminent danger. His disgust knew no bounds. "Here have I been betting on this coming off all my life," he said, "and now that it has I've not got a bet on!"

There is one sadly dramatic history associated with an insurance ticket. A gentleman purchased one prior to starting on a journey, and, as is frequently done, posted it home to his wife from the departure station. The ticket was delivered simultaneously with an intimation from the railway company announcing that he had lost his life in a railway accident.

In the case of the Tay bridge disaster an insurance ticket was discovered upon the body of one of the victims. The ticket had been reduced to absolute pulp by the action of the sea water, but under a microscope the printing could still be traced. The company thereupon admitted the claim and duly paid over the amount of the insurance money.—Railway Magazine.

Intercolonial Constable Skeffington Identifies the Campbellton, N.B., Suspects.

Ottawa, July 4.—Commissioner Sherwood yesterday morning received a telegraph from Constable George Skeffington of the Intercolonial Railway, stating that Pare and Holden had been arrested at Campbellton, N.B. He had seen the men and identified them.

Constable Skeffington was formerly a detective on the Toronto police force.

After Pare and Holden.

The British Mail Contract.

Montreal, July 4.—The contract between the Government and the Allan and Dominion Steamship Lines for carrying the mails will expire next week, and no arrangements have been made for its renewal. The firm of H. & A. Allan stated yesterday morning that they knew nothing of what the Government intended to do with regard to carrying the mails after the expiration of the contract. The firm had correspondence with the Government on the subject and had submitted several propositions, but satisfactory replies had not been received.

A representative of the Dominion Line was also interviewed and denied the rumor that after the termination of the contract the two steamship companies would be paid "by the piece" for the carrying of Canada's mails.

Hamilton Moulders Strike.

Hamilton, July 4.—About 40 moulders in Copp's foundry quit work yesterday morning because they were not supplied with a shop book, as arranged when the big strike was settled a few weeks ago.

The strike among the brickmakers has been settled.

The Blow Killed Him.

Ayr, Ont., July 4.—The jury at the coroner's inquest, held in McGeorge's Hall yesterday, in regard to the death of Henry Reeves, brought in the following verdict: "That Henry Reeves came to his death by a blow from William Gemmel, without malice aforethought, expressed or implied."

Goderich Boy Drowned.

Seaforth, July 4.—Clarence Robertson, aged 10 years, who came from Goderich on Saturday to spend his holidays at his uncle's, was yesterday drowned in the Egmondville dam. The lad was in company with some other boys playing when he accidentally fell in.

VALUE OF CANADA'S CANALS

Engineer Cooley Speaks of Our Soulanges Canal.

Advisory Engineer of Governor Black's Commission Thinks Our Deep Waterways System Will Reduce the Rates From One to Two Cents a Bushel—Will Enlarge the Area Contributory to Chicago and Diminish Traffic South.

Chicago, July 4.—Chicago officials of the International Deep Waterways Association are planning a trip to Canada in August to see the opening of the Soulanges Canal. Lyman E. Cooley, American vice-president of the association, said yesterday that a party would probably be organized, including as invited guests a dozen or more representative citizens interested in the deep waterways movement. Four of the officers of the Deep Waterways Association are Chicago men, Capt. J. S. Dunham being treasurer, O. A. Thorpe State president, and George O. Stone a member of the executive committee. The president of the association is O. A. Howland of Toronto, Canada.

Last Link in the Chain.

The new canal is the last link in the chain of improvements that the Canadian Government has been making along the St. Lawrence River for a number of years. As soon as it is opened boats drawing 14 feet of water or less can pass freely from the ocean to the Great Lakes, and vice versa. This change, according to Mr. Cooley, who has studied the transportation problems of the country for many years, will have a far-reaching effect on commerce. He said yesterday:

"I am confident that the new canal will reduce the rate to the seaboard from one to two cents a bushel on grain. This will enlarge the area of territory commercially tributary to Chicago, and diminish the amount of grain now going south to Galveston, New Orleans and other gulf cities. Likewise it will have a tendency to bring to Chicago the grain that is now going by the all-rail routes to New York. On the export business of the country the effect will be a marked one.

Rival New York in Commerce.

"If this lessening of rates is permanent—and I see no reason why it should not be permanent—the building of elevators and other terminal facilities at Montreal will be checked, since there will be less need of transferring grain. Steamers can run from Liverpool to Montreal much more profitably than to New York because the distance is much less, and the last coaling station is nearly 1,000 miles nearer Liverpool. Cargoes can thus be increased and the coal supply diminished. A trans-Atlantic line of steamers with cargoes from Montreal outward would have the effect of inducing them to bring back freight at rates as low as or lower than the New York rate, and this might in time cause Montreal to gain something of New York's import trade. It seems to me that New York can only hope to retain its present commerce by securing the construction of the proposed deep waterway across the State to the Hudson. This waterway would make New York City the cheapest port of export for more than half the grain exported, and would assure to the city supremacy in the matter of imports, for where ships can regularly get full cargoes they will return as soon as possible and bring back whatever they can get at low rates."

"Down With the Jesuits."

Barcelona, July 4.—Quiet was not restored here until midnight. The mob paraded the streets and made demonstrations before the Episcopal Palace and residence, about the electric cars and in the cafes, shouting "Down with the Jesuits!" Two monks were insulted and an attempt to protect them led to a serious encounter.

Conference on Pacific Cable.

London, July 4.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, had a conference yesterday with the Canadian and Colonial Agencies regarding the Pacific cable project.

Trade Booms in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, July 4.—The amount of duty collected at the port of Winnipeg for June, 1899, was $109,781.06. In June, 1898, it was $79,684.96. The amount of duty collected at the port of Winnipeg for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899, was $1,140,005.96. For the previous year it was $907,005.94, being an increase for the past year of $233,001.72. This is the first time Winnipeg has gone above the million mark for customs, and shows how steadily and rapidly the country is progressing.

Five Men Killed by Lightning.

Ulysses, Neb., July 4.—During an electric storm last night Victor and Ira Dobson, John Amos, jr., and two unknown men, were struck by lightning and killed. The team they were driving was also killed.

A Forest Reserve.

Toronto, July 4.—The result of the visit of Hon. J. M. Gibson is the establishment of a national forest reserve in the Lake Temagami district. Hunting and fishing will be permitted within its area.

Seventy-Eight Beauties Laid on Sir Charles Tupper's Desk.

Political Fights Were Forgotten in the Congratulations That Were Tipped Across the Floor of the House—Questions Asked and Answered — Bills Advanced—The Issue of Halfbreed Scrip—The Expert of Deer.

Ottawa, July 4.—A pleasing little incident occurred on the opening of the House yesterday afternoon. When Sir Charles Tupper took his seat after prayers were said, he was received with great applause from the Opposition benches, which was joined in from the Ministerial side. One of the pages advanced and laid on his desk a magnificent bunch of 78 blush and crimson roses presented to him by Conservative friends. This caused more applause, which was renewed again and again, when, on the orders of the day being called, the Premier took occasion to compliment the leader of the Opposition on his birthday, which was Sunday and a little bit of good-natured chaffing was indulged in, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed the hope that Sir Charles would be long spared "to occupy the position he so ably filled." This "one touch of nature" put the House in an excellent humor.

Ottawa's Special Privilege.

In reply to a question asked for Mr. Bergeron, whether it is the intention of the Government to indemnify every city or town in Canada where there are Dominion public buildings as they intend to do for the city of Ottawa, as per resolution before Parliament, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: My hon. friend is over inquisitive and over zealous. I am happy to inform him that no town or city has claimed the same privileges as have been claimed by the city of Ottawa.

Penitentiary Superannuations.

In reply to a question put for Mr. Clarke with regard to superannuations at Kingston penitentiary, Sir Wilfrid Laurier gave a list of the employes who had been superannuated since Jan. 1, 1899, with age and length of service, and said that the superannuations were made on the recommendation of the surgeon of the penitentiary, acting under instructions from the inspector. All the recommendations would be adopted and carried into operation at once. The persons recommended for superannuation were medically examined by the penitentiary surgeon.

No Job for Maxwell.

Col. Prior, on the orders of the day being called, drew attention to a paragraph in The Victoria Colonist of June 22, in which it was stated that The Vancouver World had announced that Mr. Maxwell, M.P. for Burrard, would be appointed postmaster of Vancouver before the close of the session, and asked if there was any truth in the statement.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that there had been no suggestion of any such appointment, and he hoped that Mr. Maxwell would long remain in the House.

Congratulated Sir Charles.

Continuing, he said that while he was on his feet he would, with the permission of the House, congratulate the leader of the Opposition on the 80th anniversary of his birthday.

Sir Charles Tupper—Not quite as much as that.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier corrected himself and said his "78th birthday." He hoped that the hon. gentleman would enjoy many more birthdays, and live long to occupy the position which he so very ably filled. (Laughter and applause.)

Sir Charles Tupper said he hoped the House would pardon him for occupying a moment in thanking his hon. friend for his very kind wishes, and also for correcting him with regard to his age. This was his seventy-eighth birthday and not his eightieth, and at his time of life he could not afford to make even so small an addition to his age. (Laughter and applause.)

In Concurrence.

The House then went into concurrence on the supplementary estimates for 1898-99, which were run through in about an hour.

The House then went into committee on the Government Insurance Act.

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, JULY 4, 1899.

THAT "machine" that Preston asked McNish to "hug" for him was an infernal machine in earnest.

MR. McNISH seems to be an ungrateful kind of mortal. Preston, the organizer, told him "to hug the machine," and Mr McNish turns around and disowns it, says he never knew it and did not dream of its effective, but disgraceful, work in his behalf. "Before" and "after taking" are the labels for the West Elgin job.

THE Toronto World has given the West Elgin case some energetic attention. It has unearthed and published a telegram said to have been sent by Mr Preston, the Grit organizer, to Mr McNish on the night of the election. This telegram read, "Hug the machine for me." Mr Preston evidently thought Mr McNish knew what "the machine" was, and that it was to this organization that he owed his election.

THE Globe's attempt to offset the West Elgin exposure by reciting past election practices will not be acceptable to the honest portion of the public of this province, who are disgusted with the disgraceful frauds that have been admitted by Mr McNish. The Globe's course if it desires to be sincere in its preaching is to demand the punishment of the guilty ones. They are known and they can be found.

THE report that a "round robbin" is being circulated at Ottawa among Liberal members to have Mr Preston recalled from his $5,000 berth in Europe on account of the disgraceful exposure of "the machine's" work in West Elgin may be true, but it sounds peculiar. Notwithstanding the West Elgin disgrace, we feel more inclined to believe that if Preston is recalled it will be when another general election is near at hand and his services are required.

THE Globe announced in glaring head-lines that "the case is dismissed," referring to the case made out by Sir Hibbert Tupper against the Government's Yukon administration. The "dismissing" of the case consisted in Mr Sifton's denial of the charges. But does this ever "dismiss" a case? Did the Globe ever know of a denial resulting in the dismissal of the case against any man charged with an offence? Mr Sifton, if he desires to "smash the case," to demolish the specific charges made by Sir Hibbert Tupper must allow a full and impartial investigation. Nothing else will remove the suspicion. Sir Hibbert Tupper offers to retire from Parliament if he does not prove his charges, and it will require more than Mr Sifton's denial to cause the people to belive that Sir Hibbert did not know whereof he spoke and did not fully realize the responsibility of his action in taking the fearless course he has.

A PRICELESS GEM.

"Consistency is a Jewel," saith the Great Poet.

There is no Contradiction in This Instance—Agreement in Every Respect—The One Subject Upon Which Everyone Agrees.

Toronto, July 3.—Back in April of last year there was published in this paper the story of William Keane, contractor, 86 Lippincott St., Toronto, and his experience with Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Keane has been a great sufferer with pains in the regions of his kidneys. The pain became so severe that he was obliged to stop work. He used a number of alleged remedies for backache but did not strike upon the real medicine for some time. Finally a friend advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Before he had finished the box Mr. Keane was able to resume his work. He used seven boxes in all and was completely cured.

The report of his case was included in the Dodd's Kidney Pills novel scrap book, which is now famous throughout the country. The Toronto gentleman who compiled it wrote to Mr. Keane, among a great many others, and from among the vast number of replies received proving the lasting quality of cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills, Mr. Keane's letter is taken.

Toronto, June 5th, 1899.

Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills. While suffering great pain from my kidneys I was induced to try them, and in all fairness must say they gave me prompt and permanent relief. This happened last year. I am glad if my humble testimony will be the means of helping someone else.

Yours truly,

W. J. KEANE, Builder,

86 Lippincott St.

The Danger Season.

An Appeal to the Suffering and Diseased.

Paine's Celery Compound

The Great Deliverer and Rescuer Cures Even at the Eleventh Hour.

At this time we desire earnestly to appeal to men and women who are ailing and in a low condition of health.

There are thousands of sick people—disappointed and now almost helpless—who have ceased to think of their danger, imagining they are incurable because their doctors have failed and the vast varieties of medicines they have used have produced no good results.

Courage, once more, suffering brothers and sisters!

Rekindle the almost dead embers of hope, you sadly deceived and disappointed ones!

Freedom from disease and suffering, and a new and happy life will be your portion if you have faith enough to make trial of that life giver and disease banisher, Paine's Celery Compound, that has in the past rescued so many from the grave.

If Providence and our advice should inspire you that there is life in Paine's Celery Compound; your efforts must be prompt and honest. During the present heated term of summer, it is perilous to neglect your aches, pains and sufferings. Inaction and wilful neglect for one day may result in death.

If you suffer from nervous prostration, liver disease, kidney complaint, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuralgia, headache, impure blood and digestive troubles, you should derive instant inspiration from the army of men and women of the best families of Canada who have given their written testimony in favor of Paine's Celery Compound, and be further encouraged by the recommendations of the most eminent medical men who prescribe Paine's Celery Compound regularly.

With such testimony and the indorsation of medical men, is it wise or prudent to neglect the use of earth's best medicine? He or she who refuses life and health is surely worse than a skeptic. Bear in mind that Paine's Celery Compound cures even at the eleventh hour.

Remarks on Railway Stocks.

Mr. Foster doubted the advisability of insurance companies being allowed to invest in railway stocks, which were by no means "gilt edged," and, the Minister of Finance agreeing with him, the committee rose and reported progress, it being understood that Mr. Foster will draft an amendment to the investment clause to be submitted when the House again goes into committee on the bill.

Redistribution Bill.

At the suggestion of Sir Charles Tupper, the Premier fixed the continuation of the discussion on the redistribution bill for to-day, and the Speaker left the chair at 6 o'clock.

Bills Advanced.

After recess the following bills passed through committee and stand for third reading:

To further amend the act respecting the Department of the Interior—Mr. Sifton.

To further amend the Dominion Land Titles Act—Mr. Sifton.

To amend the Unorganized Territories' Game Preservation Act—Mr. Sifton.

In committee on the act to further amend the Dominion Lands Act—Mr. Sifton—a long discussion took place on the issue of scrip to halfbreeds in extinguishment of the aboriginal title to the land. The custom has been to issue scrip for 240 acres of land, the scrip being taken by the Government in payment for land at the rate of $1 per acre. The Indians never settled on the land, but sold the scrip to brokers for what they could get, and the brokers sold it to settlers, who used it in payment for land.

Mr. Sifton explained that under the amendment he proposed that the sale of scrip to brokers would be made as difficult as possible. Instead of the scrip being payable to bearer, it would be only transferrable by the Indian to whom it was issued, who would have to execute a legal document to be furnished by the department. It was easy to get an Indian to sell his scrip for a few dollars, but very difficult to get him to sign anything. There were about 8,000 Indians entitled to receive scrip.

The bill finally passed through committee and was reported.

Customs Act Amendment.

In committee on the bill amending the Customs Act—Mr. Paterson—there was a long discussion on the proposition to repeal the present clause prohibiting the export of deer. It was pointed out that the provinces issued licenses permitting the killing of deer, but the Dominion prohibited the exportation of game. Some of the provinces, notably Quebec, made it an offence to leave the carcase on the ground, so that all the sportsmen from the United States could do was to eat the game where it was killed. The discussion was continued until 12.15, when the bill was passed through committee and the House adjourned.

ANYTHING TO WIN NOW.

Liberals at the Old Game in Winnipeg—Queer Work in Connection With the Revision of the Voters' Lists.

Winnipeg, July 4.—At the Court of Revision for South Winnipeg, where Hugh John Macdonald will run, yesterday afternoon J. Stewart Tupper, representing the Conservatives, asked Judge Prendergast who was acting registration clerk. He was answered, Gordon Rolfe, who had been appointed that afternoon. Mr. Tupper asked if Betourney hadn't been appointed, but the judge said he had only appointed Betourney to receive applications for himself in the absence of the registration clerk, R. C. McDonald.

Mr. Tupper denied the right of the judge to receive applications, or of Betourney, on his behalf, to turn them over to Rolfe. He asked permission to examine Betourney, Rolfe, Hugh John Macdonald and others, to find out where they stood. It looked as if Conservative applications were waste paper.

The judge said he would admit them.

Later, Mr. Tupper examined Rolfe under oath, who claimed that he was verbally appointed by R. C. Macdonald, but could not fix the dates of the closing of the list or the closing of applications. The applications were kept in a desk unlocked, and other people had keys to the office.

Mr. Tupper asked for five days' adjournment, so that the Conservatives could examine applications which Rolfe had refused.

The judge said he would give his decision to-day.

TERMS OF NIGER BARGAIN.

The Issue of £865,000 From the Consolidated Fund Authorized.

London, July 4.—In the House of Commons yesterday, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, submitted the proposed terms on which the Government takes over the Niger Company's territories. The scheme includes the revocation of the charter; the payment of £865,000 and half the proceeds from royalties on minerals exported through British territories for 99 years. When the Niger territories are taken over the whole of the British West African territory will be redivided into three divisions. They will all be administered from the Colonial Office, all inland customs will be abolished, and perfect freedom of trade will be permitted, except in the case of spirits.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer then moved a resolution authorizing the issue of £865,000 from the consolidated fund. It was adopted by a vote of 223 to 101.

DIRECT LINE TO JAMAICA.

British Government Grants £10,000 a Year to a Steamship Company.

London, July 4.—The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, has sent a letter to the West India Committee, saying a contract has just been signed by which the Government subsidizes the Jamaica Fruit and Produce Association with £10,000 annually for five years, the association undertaking to establish a direct fortnightly fruit and passenger line of steamers, to make 15 knots, between Jamaica and the United Kingdom, commencing May, 1900. The association also contracts to improve the wharfage at Kingston and elsewhere, to build hotels and to push the fruit industry. The Imperial Government pays half of the subsidy. It is hoped the contract will be improved, and that a subsidized service between Canada and the West Indies will shortly be arranged for.

JAPAN EXPECTS PARTITION.

Will Take Steps to See That She Gets Her Share of China.

Tacoma, Wash., July 4.—The recent Japanese papers say that Marquis Ito, former Premier of Japan, in a recent address, declared his firm belief that the partition of China among the powers of Europe is only a question of time. He added that Japan must take steps for her own protection, making every effort to maintain a rate of progress equal to that of the countries by which she will be confronted.

Loss, Thirty Lives, $5,000,000.

Austin, Tex., July 4.—Calvert is still isolated by the flood, except by long distance telephone. Estimates of the number of lives lost place it at 30. An estimate of property loss places the total at less than $5,000,000.

Mrs. Alfred Clarke, of Hitewan, Manor Co., Iowa, has been the mother of four children. Now she says:

"I am about to become a mother again, and I have been troubled with morning sickness and vomiting. I could not eat any breakfast; but two days ago I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription' twice a day, a teaspoonful at a time, and I am pleased to say that I have not had a vomiting spell for two mornings."

The "Favorite Prescription" relieves morning sickness and the other discomforts of the period preceding motherhood by purifying the whole system and by strengthening and invigorating the special organs involved. Morning sickness is due to the efforts of nature to remove from the body every bit of impurity which might offset the health of the little one to come. The direct cause of the nausea is an irritation of the nerves of the feminine organism, which have a sympathetic connection with the nerves of the stomach.

The "Favorite Prescription" goes directly to the seat of the trouble, soothes the ruffled nerves and brings comfort at once. It is a safe medicine to take. It contains no alcohol, opium or other dangerous drug. It contains no sugar or syrup. It aids the digestion and is a general-system tonic, while it acts directly and strongly on the one special set of organs.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

He Returned the Compliment.

A young man and a young woman are leaning over the front gate. They are lovers. It is moonlight. He is loath to leave, as the parting is the last. He is about to go away. She is reluctant to see him depart. They swing on the gate.

"I'll never forget you," he says, "and if death should claim me, my last thought will be of you."

"I'll be true to you," she sobs. "I'll never see anybody else or love them as long as I live."

They parted. Six years later he returns. His sweetheart of former years has married. They meet at a party. She has changed greatly. Between the dances the recognition takes place.

"Let me see," she muses, with her fan beating a tattoo on her pretty hand, "was it you or your brother who was my old sweetheart?"

"Really I don't know," he says. "Probably my father."—Exchange.

"Knotty" History.

Tying knots in a handkerchief to jog one's memory had its origin in China thousands of years ago. Before writing was invented in that country, which did not happen until 3000 B. C., memorable and important events were recorded by long knotted cords. The most ancient history of China is still preserved as told by these knots.

When Emperor Techang Ki invented writing, the entire system of "knotting" was abandoned. And today the memory knots made by us in handkerchiefs are the only surviving descendants of that ancient custom.

Prerogation This Month.

Montreal, July 3.—Mr. Rodolphe Lemieux, M.P. for Gaspe, who is on very intimate terms with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, says that prorogation will be reached between July 25 and 30, and he does not expect a general election this year.

The Electric Light

Is a matter of small importance compared with other applications of electricity. By this agency Polson's Nerviline is made to penetrate to the most remote nerve—every bone, muscle and ligament is made to feel its beneficient power. Nerviline, pleasant to take, even by the youngest child, yet so powerfully far reaching in its work that the most agonizing internal pain yields as if by magic. Nerviline relieves neuralgia instantly and for the speedy cure of nerve pains of every description it has no equal. Sold everywhere.

FASHION NOTES.

Many Flowers Bloom Upon Summer Headgear.

Red gowns are more and more in vogue, and there are also charming little scarlet jackets for seaside and mountain wear, made perfectly plain, but very trim and up to date looking. Over a white, navy blue or black gown they are exceedingly effective.

An immense quantity of flowers is worn in hats, although hats are not so universally covered with them as was the case last year. Occasionally the headgear is one mass of flowers, however, one example being a round hat of medium size made of rose colored gauze and completely covered with pink and red roses, so the hat itself couldnot be seen except at the edge of the brim, and even then its color confused it with the flowers. Blues are used in the same way, also lilies of the valley and forgetmenots, but the last named flowers are not seen in great numbers this season. Little toques and capotes entirely of flowers are more attractive than the laden hats. For the toques hyacinths, roses, violets and sometimes pansies are employed; also large separate petals of poppies. It is predicted that flowers will again be seen on parasols.

The gown illustrated is of beige cloth, the skirt opening at the left side over a panel of nile green silk with horizontal corded tucks. The left side of the tablier is embroidered with white applications. The bodice, also embroidered and opening at the left side, has a sort of yoke and plastron of tucked silk like the panel and fastens with cords and gold buttons. The cravat is a jabot of white lace, and the sleeves are plain. The hat of beige straw is trimmed with nile green plumes and ribbon, with a show of pink silk under the brim.

THIN GOWNS.

Light and Attractive Materials For Summer Costumes.

Among the lightweight silk goods for summer wear are mousseline satins with delicate printed designs resembling painted decorations, various taffetas, some with brocbe effects, others covered with open embroidery, still others with a broken surface of checks, stripes or similar ornamentations, and foulard, which has been actively revived and appears plain and with attractive stamped patterns. Silk batiste is also seen and is very cool and attractive.

There are transparent woolen goods likewise in all colors and black. Chief in importance among them are thin canvases and wool grenadines, which are serviceable for the seaside, where cottons, linens and silks are apt to become stringy in the moist air. The wash fabrics are charmingly dainty, however, and will be extensively worn during the approaching hot weather. Swiss muslin, white and colored; batiste, pique and percale, are chiefly seen. All kinds of designs appear, but stripes predominate—wide, narrow, regular and irregular. Checks, plaids and dots are also favorites, floral patterns being less frequent, although there are many charming flower designs to be obtained. Solid colors are largely used, since lace and embroidery are so lavishly employed as trimming.

WEDDING GOWN.

The wedding gown depicted is of white satin, the skirt being plain except for a ruche of mousseline de soie around the edge. The back is in the princess style, but the front forms a draped bodice, with coquilles of old point mingled with orange blossoms. The round yoke and the sleeves are of mousseline de soie shirred with little beadings, the yoke being framed in a garland of orange blossoms.

SAFEGUARDING THE BIG BANKS.

One Precaution Taken to Make Sure Watchmen Are Vigilant.

Some people think that time locks, burglar alarms and steel barred windows, with a watchman awake or asleep inside and the police outside, might afford protection in plenty for a bank. A visitor in a large detective and patrol agency the other day found that bank authorities do not hold to this opinion.

The visitor noticed when he entered the office that the manager seemed to be watching the clock with great solicitude. Without any warning the young man jumped up from his desk, grabbed his hat and dashed out. The stranger's curiosity was aroused, and he waited until the manager came back.

"What was the matter?" he asked.

"The bank watchman was testing me," he said, and then went on to explain the system. At every hour and half hour the watchman inside the bank pushed a button that rang a bell in the agency. This button was at the rear of the bank. At a quarter before and a quarter after every hour he touched a button in the front of the bank that rang a bell in an entirely different office. The manager of the office took down the time to the minute when the bell rang. If the bell at the back of the bank failed to ring within five minutes of the hour or half hour, it was the duty of the manager to make all speed to the bank. When he got there, he must actually see the watchman and speak to him. If within five minutes after reaching the bank he did not see the watchman, he was to call the police. If the manager failed to go to the bank promptly when it was his duty to do so, the watchman must report him, receiving a reward therefor. The object of having the bank connected with two offices was to lessen the possibility of collusion between the watchman and the managers.

But this was not all. An outside watchman was also employed. He was the regular special watchman who was employed by the property owners of the neighborhood. It was his duty to meet the inside watchman at the front door every hour and then to go to the back door and meet the inside man. Then there were burglar alarms on every window, door and vault door.

The stranger went to a bank officer and asked him whether all these precautions were necessary for the detection of robbery.

"Not for detection," he said, "but for prevention. The burglar who tries to break into this bank at night is insane. He has not the slightest chance in the world, and he knows it. Then, too, we are sure no fire can gain any headway in the building while the watchmen are kept so thoroughly awake. Of course we are fireproof theoretically, but we do not even trust that."

TROIKA DRIVING IN RUSSIA.

There Is Nothing Like It, Unless It Be a Ride on a Fire Engine.

We were promised our first Russian experience in the shape of a troika ride. A troika is a superb affair. It makes the tiny sledges which take the place of cabs and are used for all ordinary purposes look even more like toys than usual, but the sledges are great fun and so cheap that it is an extravagance to walk. A course costs only 20 kopecks—10 cents. The sledges are set so low that you can reach out and touch the snow with your hand, and they are so small that the horse is in your lap and the coachman in your pocket. He simply turns in his seat to hook the fur robe to the back of your seat—only it has no back. If you fall, you fall clear to the ground.

The horse is far, far above you in your humble position, and there is so little room that two people can with difficulty stow themselves in the narrow seat. If a brother and sister or a husband and wife drive together, the man, in sheer self defense, is obliged to put his arm around the woman no matter how distasteful it may be. Not that she would ever be conscious of whether he did it or not, for the amount of clothes one is obliged to wear in Russia destroys any sense of touch.

The horses are sharp shod, but in a way quite different from ours. The spikes on their shoes are an inch long and dig into the ice with perfect security, but it makes the horses look as if they wore French heels. Even over ice like sheer glass they go at a gallop and never slip. It is wonderful, and the exhilaration of it is like driving through an air charged with champagne, like the wine caves of Rinte. Driving in the country we could not tell how fast we were going, but in town, whizzing past other carriages, hearing the shouts of the idvoshik, "Troika," and seeing the people scatter and the sledges turn out (for a troika has the right of way), we realized at what a pace we were going. Before we reached home we saw a Russian fire engine. We passed it in a run. The engine was on one sledge, and following it were five other sledges carrying hogsheads of water.

After that drive I thought I knew just how it felt to ride on a fire engine.—Lilian Bell in Woman's Home Companion.

Already our rural exchanges are talking about blackberries, and it is freely predicted that the watermelon crop will be the biggest the railroads have made in years.

STATE LINES.

Ohio is again ciphering over the date when she became a state. But it is beyond dispute that it was in time to put nearly all the citizens into the class which calls for at least "something equally as good."—Pittsburg Times.

Arkansas proposes to build a new state capitol on the site of the present penitentiary. If Arkansas has a legislature equal to those of some of her sister states, it might be best to let the penitentiary stand and just move the legislators in.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Kentucky is becoming quite modern. A jury of that state has given a man $5,000 damages against a gentleman who shot him. If this sort of thing goes on, Kentucky marksmen will have to waste their time on sparrows and blue rocks.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

The legislature is asked to rescind the sentence of banishment passed upon Roger Williams in 1635. That is all very well, but who can guarantee that even then he would come back? If he refused, it would be a snub to Massachusetts, and if he returned it would be creepy.—Boston Journal.

How Emery Is Quarried.

Emery comes from the island of Naxos, in the eastern Mediterranean, whence it has been exported for the last two centuries or more. The beds are in the northeast of the island. There are about 300 men engaged in the trade, all of whom have to be married before they are admitted to the fraternity. The material is much too hard to be dug out or even blasted. Great fires are lighted around the blocks till the natural cracks expand with the heat, and levers are then inserted to pry them apart. This system is continued until the blocks are reduced in size to masses of a cubic foot or less, and they are then shipped as if they were coal. There are said to be 90,000,000 tons yet available at Naxos, and the last reported year's export was 9,950 tons. It is one of the hardest substances known.—Ironmongery.

Death of Madore Guerin.

Madore Guerin passed beyond the great divide a few days ago after a lingering illness at St. Joseph's hospital, due to a complication of troubles. "Madore," as he was everywhere known, was a local character that was well known in the business part of the town. For many years he carried his bootblack's kit around the streets, and wherever the crowd was there was Madore also. He was a real sport and acted as mascot for the lacrosse and baseball teams in many a good trip and not a few bad ones, always serving, however, with distinction.

A PRETTY WEDDING.

A Nuptial Event at Berlin of Interest in This Vicinity.

Berlin News-Record, June 21st:—Berlin lost one of its fairest daughters this afternoon. Mr G H Needler, a lecturer on the Toronto University staff, has wooed and won Miss Mary Winnifred, daughter of His Honor Judge and Mrs D Chisholm. The happy young couple were united in wedlock at two o'clock at the family residence, Queen-st., south, by the Ven. Archdeacon Allen, of Millbrook, in the presence of the relatives of the contracting parties and many guests. The interior of the residence was beautifully decorated with palms, garden roses and marguerites.

The beautiful bride wore a handsome gown of brocaded mousselin de soi, with veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Her bridesmaids were Miss Etta Needler, sister of the groom, and her sister, Miss Alice Chisholm. Both were attired in simple but effective dresses of white dotted Swiss, and each carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr A T DeLury, of Toronto, acted as groomsman. A little nephew and niece of the bride acted as page and maid of honor respectively. Each carried a basket of roses.

The popularity of the bride and the high esteem in which she is held by her friends was attested by the number and value of the wedding gifts showered upon her and the good wishes accompanying them.

Among the guests invited to the ceremony were Mr and Mrs Geo Hilliard, Mr and Mrs T Stewart, Mrs Wm Stewart, Peterborough; Mr and Mrs Geo Needler, the Misses Needler, Mr A Needler, Mr and Mrs C Needler, Ven Archdeacon and Mrs Allen, Rev W C and Mrs Allen, Millbrook.

Lacrosse

The C. W. A. provincial meet at Guelph was fairly successful. On July 1st, the second day, there was an attendance of about 3,500 people at the grounds. McLeod won the professional and Sherritt the amateur championship of Ontario. The number of first class riders, starting in the events was small.

The Lindsay lacrosse club desire the Peterborough juniors to play in that town some evening this week.

The Galt lacrosse club intend taking a trip east and may visit Peterborough, Hastings and other towns in the eastern district later in the month.

The Peterboroughs are confident that in the match here on July 12th they can defeat the Bramptons despite the summary way in which that team turned them down on Saturday. One explanation of the defeat is that the field captain had no lacrosse shoes with him and could not play properly in his cowhides.

The Toronto Telegram says that Orangeville has a faster and better combination than either Orillia or St. Catharines. What is the matter with Peterborough's?

Orillia plays at Orangeville on July 12th. The home team is expected to win but it will be a great battle.

The Dufferins of Orangeville have a new goal tender by the name of Hamilton. He was discovered at Mount Forest.

Of the match between the Nationals of Ottawa and the Capitals in Ottawa Saturday the Ottawa Free Press says: "The Nationals have a superb defence that need not take a back seat to any in the country. The men know each other's play thoroughly, and the Capital home on Saturday was as pie to them. Kavanagh, of course, was a shining light, his long reach and giant stature giving an advantage that permitted him to draw down the passing of the Caps. J. Valois and Foley are a team of goal tenders, and it is hard to push a ball past them. Their field is fast, but their home is not as effective as it might be. However, the team as a whole was superior to that of the Capitals, and the Nationals have themselves to blame to-day for not having a victory instead of a defeat to their credit. Back and forward was the ball thrown between the National men; up and down ran the players with the rubber in their possession, but scarcely ever was an attempt made to score. Once in a while the Caps obtained possession and made bold dashes for the National flags. In vain did most of the Capital defence men go down field and play home. The big National defence seemed impregnable and blocked many a well conceived effort to score. In the meantime fifteen hundred spectators waited and watched in an effort to discover what it all meant, and what the result would be. The Nationals were again hooted and jeered and told to play lacrosse, but they did not seem to mind it a bit. They made the Capitals look like selling platers, but they overstepped their limits and were sold themselves. As regards playing strength the Nationals were clearly the superiors of the locals, and had they confined their attention to scoring instead of to show-

VILLAGE COUNCIL.

Routine Business Transacted—Cyclists Must Keep off the Sidewalk.

Ashburnham Council met in regular session last night. There were present Reeve Adams, and Councillors Craig, Rutherford, Sheridan and Pollock.

The minutes of the preceding meetings were read and confirmed.

A large number of villagers petitioned the Council to have the water main extended from its present terminus on Stewart street to the intersection of Stewart and Dufferin streets, with a hydrant at that point.—Received.

Treasurer Peck presented his statement of receipts from 7th June to 3rd July, inclusive, as follows:—

Total payments	$ 755 74
Total receipts	666 02
Balance due bank	1,016 64

The following accounts were presented and payment thereof authorized:—

T. B. Manlece	5 00

Pay Sheet No. 9	80 25
Jas. McWilliams	10 00
Jas. Fowler	12 75

	$496 54

Councillor Rutherford moved, seconded by Councillor Sheridan, that water main be extended on Robinson-st. from Lake to Mark-st., and on Brown-st. from Elizabeth to Douro-st.—four inch main on Robinson-st. and six inch main on Brown-st.—Carried.

Councillors Craig and Pollock strongly opposed the above extension on the ground that the revenue available from private services would not cover the interest on expenditure for such construction.

Councillor Craig brought up the question of wheelmen riding on the sidewalks to the danger of pedestrians, and asked that action be taken in the matter. He explained that last week a wheelman knocked down a child and then slapped the little one for being in his way. After fully discussing the matter, Council decided to issue notices warning bicyclists that hereafter the by-law prohibiting such offence will be fully enforced.

The Council then adjourned.

GEORGE STEVENS, Junk Dealer, Ashburnham.

The Answer Was Easy.

When King Oscar was at Paris some years ago, he was about seeing the sights incognito. Among other places he dropped in at the official exposition of Sevres porcelain. Here the product of every year was arranged chronologically and with great care. Of some kinds there were full sets, but of blue celeste there were but three pieces, and the custodian informed the king that it was impossible to obtain more and that they were of immense value.

"What!" said the king. "Have you only these three plates of blue celeste?"

"That is all."

"Well, then," said his majesty, "I have many more than you."

"You!" said the custodian in amazement. "Who are you?"

"The king of Sweden!"

"May I inquire, your majesty, how many pieces of this exquisite porcelain you have?"

"Hear thou, Nils," said the king, turning to his first marshal, Count Rosen, who accompanied him. "How many have we?"

"Two hundred and fourteen pieces, your majesty."

"Heavens!" cried the astonished custodian. "How can it be possible that you have preserved them all this time?"

"Oh, that's very easily accounted for!" said the king. "You see, in Sweden we don't have any revolutions!"—Philadelphia Post.

She Washed Her Hair.

If you observed closely a certain pretty bridesmaid at a certain wedding on a certain day last week, you may have noticed that her hair under the fetching hat had a strange look, an oddly dishevelled appearance, but I don't believe you ever guessed how narrowly that bridal procession missed being one maid short. The young woman we are speaking of has uncommonly pretty hair, and in order that it might be fluffy and silky and soft for the wedding she washed it the day before. It is her custom to drop a handful of borax into the water with which she shampoos her tresses, and on this occasion she dropped in a handful of soft, white powder that proved to be not borax, but, horrible dictu—powdered alum.

If you've seen the crystal baskets your mother used to make by immersing strings in alum water, you may have some idea of how the hair looked. It was like a mass of spun glass threads, and it broke off if you looked at it. A hairdresser was sent for and vaseline and sweet oil, and goodness only knows what else were called into use. The bridesmaid's hair was finally rescued after a fashion, but it wasn't a thing of beauty at the wedding, and it will be weeks before it is what it was before the accident.

Deceitful, but Brave.

He had been out late. When he reached his residence, the clock was chiming 5. Heavy, weary, disgusted, he opened the front door with some difficulty and softly toiled up the stairs, entering the bedchamber with elaborate caution.

Thank goodness, she was asleep!

He dropped into a chair, and, without taking off his coat or hat, began to remove his shoes. One he placed with great care upon the floor, but, alas, as he took off the other it slipped out of his hand and fell with a loud noise.

"Wifey" awoke on the instant.

She looked at him and then at the sunlight that streamed through the blinds.

"Why, George, what are you getting up so early for?"

Talk about reprieves!

"Why, my dear," replied George, with the clearest enunciation of which he was capable, "I found I couldn't sleep, so I thought I'd get up and go out and take a walk."

And out the poor wretch went, dragging himself round wearily for an hour upon the verge of tears and torpor.

Pretoria, July 4.—The Volksraad, by 14 to 13 votes, has decided to give an additional member from Pretoria and each district having only one member now. Herr Fisher, the envoy of the Orange Free State, had a long interview with President Kruger on the question of the franchises yesterday. It is expected that Herr Hoffmeyer, the Afrikander leader, will join in the conference to-day.

At the opening of the Raad President Kruger, while urging the members to stand firm on the question of the independence of the South African Republic, submitted his scheme of additional representation for the gold fields. He suggested the appointment of a commission by the Raad to confer with the executive on the questions of redistribution, but said it was useless to think about a general scheme, because the people were opposed to it.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

Both are brave enough, and yet the situation is such that a strange feeling creeps over the stoutest heart.

When John appears and tells them what the captain has said, it reassures them considerably, and they feel better.

Presently he leaves them, and seeks his berth, where he actually goes to sleep. Tired nature will assert her power, even under the most discouraging conditions.

During the night the storm abates.

John Craig is awake early, and can tell that all is well from the easy motion of the steamer, for her plunges are few and of small moment. A silence broods over the scene; the tired passengers have gone to sleep; all John can hear as he lies there is the dull throb of the engines and the swish of the water against the side of the vessel.

CHAPTER XII.

Algiers!

The sunset gun is just booming over the African hills as the steamer drops anchor off the wonderful city where the French have gained a foothold and seem determined to stay.

John Craig is in a fever to go ashore. He has had news that from Malta his mother went to Algiers on a mission, and his one object in life is to follow her until the time comes when he can see face to face the woman to whom he owes his being, toward whom his heart goes out, and whom he believes to have been dreadfully wronged.

Most of the passengers are going farther, but as the steamer will remain in the harbor until morning, there is no need of any going ashore.

John, however, cannot wait.

He engages a boatman—there are many who at once come out to the steamer for various purposes—tells his friends where they may find him, and with his luggage is away, just before the darkness sets in, for it comes very soon after sunset in this country.

Upon landing, John secures a guide, and makes for the central square, known as the Place du Gouvernement, where he knows of a good hotel, recommended by the captain.

The air is fragrant with the odor of flowers.

In his walk he meets strange people, Arabs, Moors, Kabyles from the desert, long-bearded Jews, Greeks, negroes, Italians, and, of course, French soldiers.

At Jezira, as the natives call their capital, is undoubtedly the most interesting city for a traveller's eyes, exceeding even Constantinople and Cairo.

Part of the city is modern, the rest just as it might have been a century ago, when the Algerian pirates made a reign of terror sweep over the Mediterranean.

Omnibuses are seen, and even street cars run to Birkadeen, a suburb. The houses on the terraces of Mustapha Superieur are peopled with the nicest of French and English families, who spend the winter in this charming place.

Still, if one enters the native quarter, ascending the narrow streets where no vehicle can ever come, where the tall, white houses, with their slits for windows, almost meet above, shutting out the cheery sunlight, where one meets the Moor, the Arab, the gypsy, the negro porter, the native woman with her face concealed almost wholly from view, it would be easy to believe the city to be entirely foreign and shut off from European intercourse.

Within a stone's throw how different the scene—the wide streets, the fine houses, the people of Paris and London mixing with the picturesque costumes of the natives, the bazaars, music in the air coming from the Kasbah, once the stronghold of the merciless Janizaries, now the barracks for French zouaves, the bric-a-brac merchant with his extraordinary wares spread out, while he calmly smokes a cigarette and plays the mandolin.

No wonder the pilgrim in Algiers is charmed, and lingers long beyond his time.

John has glimpses of these things on his way to the hotel, and although his mind is hardly in a condition to take much notice of such matters, they nevertheless impress him to a certain degree.

Dull, indeed, must be the man who cannot grasp the wonderful beauty of such a scene. At another time John would have been charmed.

He reaches the hotel and at once engages a room. Supper is ready, and he sits down to a meal one can hardly procure outside of Paris itself, and served in French style.

If any one were watching John, his nervousness would be perceptible.

From the table he seeks the office of the hotel.

"What can I do for monsieur?" asks the polite attendant, seeing him standing there expectantly.

"I desire to procure a guide."

"To-morrow?"

"Now—at once."

The clerk looks at him curiously. He cannot understand what such impetuosity means.

He realises that he is dealing with one who is different from the usual run of travellers.

"Monsieur does not, perhaps, know the danger involved in the night; foreigners do not often invade the old town after dark."

"Pardon me, my business is very important. Can you procure me a reliable guide, one who speaks English?"

"It can be done. First, I would recommend that you seal up your watch and valuables in this envelope."

"A good idea. You will keep them in your safe," suiting the action to the word.

"Now, monsieur will write his name."

"Done."

"Also the address."

"Eh? I don't quite understand."

"To which he would have them sent."

"Sent?"

"In case we see monsieur no more."

"Ah! Now I catch on," with a smile, as he adds the words: "Chicago, Ill., U.S.A."

"Chicago. I have heard of it; quite a place," remarks the clerk.

"Rather," dryly. "The cicerone, please."

Then the clerk beckons to a man who has been lounging not far away.

John sweeps his eyes over him.

He sees an Arab gypsy, a swarthy fellow of stalwart build, dressed in the attractive costume of his race. John reads human nature fairly well, and he believes he sees a man who can be depended on.

"This, Monsieur is Mustapha Cadi. You can depend upon him always," and the clerk goes to his regular work.

The Arab makes the ordinary salutation, crossing his hands over his breast, and bowing.

These people are very ceremonious, never entering a room or being seated before a guest.

"You speak English?" asks John.

"Oh, yes!" smiling.

"I want to engage you in my service for some days, Mustapha Cadi."

"I have just come with a party from the wine caves of Chateau Hydra and the cemetery on Roumreah. I am now free, and in monsieur's service."

"Good! Your terms?"

"Two duros a day."

"I will make it four."

"Great is Allah, and Mohammed is his prophet. I shall not complain."

"There is one condition."

"Name it."

"I am very anxious to see some one whom I have reason to believe is in this city."

"Of course."

"You must take me to him to-night."

Mustapha Cadi looks a little anxious.

"Does this illustrious person live in new or old Al Jezira?"

"I cannot say, it is for you to tell."

"His name?"

"Ben Taleb."

The Arab shrugs his shoulders, a French trick that follows their conquests, and so is very suggestive.

"The Moorish doctor; he lives in the heart of the old town."

"But many Europeans visit him, he has a reputation abroad."

"They never dare go at night."

"I am willing to take the risk."

Mustapha Cadi looks at the young man admiringly—curiously, for he cannot imagine what would cause such haste. He sees a specimen of healthy manhood, so that it can hardly be for medical advice he takes such chances to see the old Moor.

"Monsieur, I consent."

"It is well."

"I, too, have conditions."

"Ah! that may alter the case," suspiciously.

"My reputation is dear to me."

"Naturally."

"It is my means of earning much money. Listen to me. I have taken Franks everywhere through this country, to Oran and even the far-away lead mines of Jebel Wanashrees; yes, once even to the city of Fez, in Morocco; yet never has anything serious happened to those in my charge. We have been attacked by robbers in the desert, but we dispersed them with gun and yataghan. Here in Al Jezira, many times, beggars for backsheesh have become impudent, and tried to enforce their demands, but I have taken them before the cadi, and had them punished with the bastinado. Ah! they know Mustapha Cadi, the guide, and give him a wide berth by daylight. But monsieur, what might happen in the streets of the old town should a Frank go there at night, I am afraid to say."

"Still, you promised."

"Ay, and will keep my word, if the monsieur agrees to the condition."

"Let me hear it!"

"I will procure a burnoose, you shall put the robe on, and be an Arab for to-night."

John draws a breath of relief, he smiles.

"Willingly, Mustapha. Let us lose no time, I beg of you!"

"Then, monsieur, come."

Children Cry for CASTORIA.

They Were Not Relatives.

The author of "Twenty-five Years in British Guiana" says that he was once camping out with companions there, and that some of them had not his acquaintance with the woods:

At last we turned into our hammocks, and I was dropping off to sleep, when I was roused by the most infernal barking and roaring. Attracted by our fire and singing, a troop of howling baboons had come over the trees and were making night hideous by their yells. Shields, who was not acquainted with the brutes, shook my hammock violently and whispered:

"What on earth is that?"

Not very well knowing what I was saying, I replied, "Tigers."

"Are they very near?"

"Very," said I, and, taking advantage of a lull in the chorus, I dropped asleep.

Poor Shields lay awake half the night, expecting to be devoured by wild beasts. He was sleepy and cross in the morning, and Bridges asked him if he had heard the baboons.

"Oh, those were baboons, were they? What an awful noise they make! But what were they saying?"

"I don't know," said Bridges unsympathetically. "I don't belong to the same species."

When Love Was Bunkered.

"Ah," she said, stroking his soft curls and looking regretfully into his upturned face—he was kneeling beside her—"you will not think me cruel, will you? You will be brave and try to forget me, won't you? You do not know how sorry I am to be compelled to say 'no' to you. Under other circumstances we might have been happy together, but as it is I must be frank with you. There is no hope."

His whole frame was shaken by a great sob.

Then he looked appealingly into her fawnlike eyes and asked:

"Why is it, Virginia, that you are so sure we cannot be happy together? Why may I not hope?"

"There is an impassable barrier between us," she replied. "You are the champion golf player of this state, and my mother is president of the Society For the Suppression of Dialect; so there you are."

Realising that his dream of bliss was at an end, he went away, humming softly:

Alas, that love should foozle thus,
She put it pat to me,
And we may never, never suit
Each other to a tee!

GUARDED LIKE A WILD BEAST

Dreyfus Has Not Yet Recovered Full Faculty of Speech.

Marvellous Composure of the Famous Prisoner—He Hopes His Case May End Anti-Jewish Feeling in the Land He Loves so Well—Interview With His Former Counsel and With M. Labori, Who Will Defend Him.

Paris, July 4.—As the outcome of the Government's prudence all France remains tranquil. M. Mathieu Dreyfus and his wife have arrived at Rennes. The town is quite tranquil.

Madame Dreyfus has only obtained permission to visit her husband thrice weekly for an hour. His composure is the theme of all tongues. It seems that in the train one of the officers began to read a newspaper; but, although Dreyfus had not seen a newspaper since he left France, he did not display the slightest interest.

Partial Paralysis of Speech.

He speaks very little, and seems to suffer a partial paralysis of speech, owing to his long silence. Even on board the Sfax he had to communicate with the officers by writing. He is credited, on good authority, with the following utterance: "My condemnation and sentence were the symbol of anti-Jewish odium. My judges were involuntarily deceived. May my undeserved expiation put an end to all racial or religious feuds in the army, and in that France which I have passionately loved and served."

The Prince of Monaco has written Madame Dreyfus a sympathetic letter, inviting her husband to sojourn at his chateau after the acquittal, which, in the judgment of the Prince, is certain to be pronounced.

Watched Like a Wild Beast.

London, July 4.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Brest says: "Dreyfus was guarded on board the Sfax like a wild beast. He was isolated like a cholera-stricken patient. If the cruiser had foundered he would have gone to his grave believing that General de Boisdeffre was his courageous friend and champion, and altogether ignorant that such a man as Colonel Picquart exists."

SCENE WAS TOUCHING.

Dreyfus' Former Counsel Meets His Client Again.

Rennes, France, July 4.—Maitres Labori and Demange, counsel for Dreyfus, who had a long confetence with Madame Dreyfus on Sunday, visited Dreyfus in the military prison at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The permit for the lawyer to enter the prison bore the inscription: "Tenth Army Corps, Tribunal of the Court-Martial.

"Permit to communicate, available until the day judgment is delivered. Monsieur ——, counsel of the Court of Appeal, is authorized to communicate with Captain Dreyfus, whom he is charged to defend.

"(Signed) Major Carriere."

A Happy Meeting.

This is the first time M. Demange, the defender of Dreyfus at the court-martial of 1894, and Dreyfus had seen each other since the sentence.

On entering the room, M. Demange and Dreyfus threw themselves into each other's arms. The scene was most touching. Neither was able to utter a word, but warmly embraced.

Dreyfus, when able to speak, thanked M. Demange for his devoted services.

M. Demange then presented M. Labori, who had been a silent spectator in the background of the foregoing scene. Dreyfus clasped M. Labori's hand and in a voice choked by emotion expressed the deepest gratitude for the splendid manner in which M. Labori had championed his cause.

Reviewed the Past.

Demange and Labori then gave the prisoner a general review of all which has happened since Dreyfus was sent to Devil's Island. Dreyfus explained that he knew nothing but what was contained in the volume which M. Labori had sent him, giving an account of the proceedings of the Court of Cassation in 1898.

Wife May Call Every Day.

Rennes, July 4.—Madame Dreyfus visited her husband yesterday afternoon. She has received permission to call upon him each day.

Last evening Maitres Demange and Labori had another conference with the prisoner. M. Labori said after it was over that the time had been devoted to continuing the review of events since 1898. His counsel were surprised at Capt. Dreyfus' strength of memory, even in trifling matters, and at the lucidity of mind he displayed. Late last evening it was ascertained that, unless the authorities should direct a preliminary enquiry or the examination of Capt. Dreyfus, Major Carriere, the Government commissioner charged with the preparation of the case against the prisoner, will merely draw up a report, which will be presented to the court-martial.

HIS WIFE WILL COOK FOR HIM.

Dreyfus Will Have Food That He Can Eat Without Fear of Poison.

Paris, July 4.—Madame Dreyfus, it is asserted here, is not only permitted to see her husband daily, but is allowed to attend personally to the preparations of his meals. His memoirs, which he wrote on Devil's Island, were left there, but they will be forwarded to the Government with his other effects.

The Logical Deroulede.

There is a good deal of comment upon a speech made yesterday by M. Paul Deroulede, founder of the League of Patriots, and long known as one of the most violent opponents of revision. Deroulede said, in substance, that if Dreyfus should be found innocent by the court-martial, "no punishment would be sufficiently heavy, no pillory sufficiently infamous, for all the Ministers, civil or military, who were responsible for his conviction, and no honors high enough for the martyr and victim."

Duke of Albany Installed.

Cobourg, July 4.—The Diet yesterday adopted a bill whereby the Duke of Albany becomes heir to the Duchy of Saxe-Cobourg and Gotha. In the event of the extinction of the Albany lineage, Prince Arthur of Connaught succeeds, or, on Prince Arthur of Connaught's extinction, the heir of the Prince of Wales succeeds. Prince Hohenlohe-Langenburg is made the Duke of Albany's regent.

Fred Wilson Killed at Cobourg.

Toronto, July 4.—Frederick Wilson, son of Mr. Jacob Wilson, 67 Henry street, this city, was killed yesterday morning at Cobourg, while attempting to board a moving freight train. He had been visiting friends at Cobourg for the past few days and would have returned to his home in Toronto this week. It is thought that, on seeing the approaching train, he decided to take a ride. When trying to board a car, he either missed the step or struck the crane of the water tank and fell to the ground. When found he was in a dying condition, and, despite medical aid, passed away inside of an hour. Deceased was 21 years of age and well known in Toronto. The body will be brought home for burial to-day.

Children should always increase in weight. Not to grow, not to increase in flesh, belongs to old age.

Present and future health demands that this increase in weight should be steady and never failing.

To delicate children, Scott's Emulsion brings richer blood and firmer flesh. Better color comes to the cheeks and stronger muscles to the limbs. The gain in weight is substantial; it comes to stay.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Items of Interest Gathered From the Different Congregations

ST. JOHN'S.

Rev. Mr. Davidson at St. John's on Sunday gave notice of the annual Sunday school excursion, next Friday and urged members of the congregation to support it. The officers of the school would take no responsibility for the scholars, as they expected their parents or guardians to accompany them.

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Davidson gave a continuation of his address to the militia in the afternoon, making several applications to the congregation of the text, "They stood every man in his place." Like others St. John's congregation had to face the regrettable fact that every man was not in his place. Some seem to think that all they had to do was to send their wives or sisters to church, but the preacher quoted Bible words, "No man may deliver his brother, and no woman may deliver her husband or make agreement unto God for him." Every man had a religious responsibility which he could not shoulder off on anybody else. Rev. Mr. Davidson went on to apply the text to the holiday season. Would those who were doing their duty now be able to continue to do their duty, "Every man and woman in their place," when they find themselves under different conditions in the holiday resort. That was the very opportunity for them to realize their continued allegiance to the God who looked down upon one place as well as another. The speaker urged all members of the congregation to take their Bibles and Prayer Books with them wherever they went, and to hallow the Lord's day by saying their service, either privately or, better still, in company of others gathered together for that purpose. If they were able to do this, instead of returning home in a condition of spiritual dryness and hardness they would come back spiritually strengthened and refreshed.

ST. LUKE'S.

The Missionary Chapter of St. Luke's Guild will meet at Mrs. Peck's house next Friday evening at 7.30.

Rev. H. Symonds conducted the service at St. Mark's, Otonabee, on Sunday evening. Rev. J. Bushell commenced his work at Norwood on Sunday.

During the summer months two courses of short sermons will be given in St. Luke's. In the morning the subjects will be "The Parables of the Kingdom of Heaven," found in St. Matthew, chap. xiii., and in the evening on "Prophets and Prophecy."

Rev. E. V. Stevenson will preach in St. Luke's next Sunday evening, Mr. Stevenson is engaged during the following six weeks at Christ Church Cathedral, Hamilton.

MARK-ST.

The pastor, Rev. J. E. Moore, Ph.B., officiated at both services on Sunday, and gave two very helpful sermons. He left yesterday for Detroit to attend the International C.E. convention, and will be absent two Sundays. During his absence the pulpit will be occupied by Evangelist Foster on July 9, and by Revs. Kilgour and Bennett on July 16.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. will be held in the basement on Wednesday, July 5, at 3 o'clock.

CHARLOTTE-ST.

Mr. George Schneider officiated at the organ at Charlotte-st. church Sunday. The services were interesting. Rev. Mr Crossley preached at both services. The Rines brothers assisted with the music both morning and evening. In the evening the regular monthly song sermon was preached to a large congregration.

ALL SAINTS'.

At All Saints' church on Sunday evening the anthem, "In my Father's House are many Mansions," was sung by the choir, the soprano solo being rendered in pleasing manner by Miss Katie Green.

BOARD OF WORKS.

Alderman Langford, acting chairman, read the following report of the Board of Works:—

Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your committee recommend that the Harrisburg Foundry and Machine Works be paid $2,800, the contract price of the steam road roller.

2. Your Committee also recommend that the Town Engineer be instructed to have a stand pipe placed in the Southern District where it will be of the most service, in the place of the one that was at the corner of George and Wolfe streets.

3. Your Committee advertised for tenders for the first section of granolithic sidewalks, made up as follows:—Water-st. from Simcoe to Dublin-st., both sides; Simcoe-st. from Water to George-sts., both sides, except where the granolithic sidewalk now is; Brock st. from Water to George-sts., on the north side; and on Murray-st., from Water to George-sts. Two tenders were received as follows:— R. Sheehy, 15 7-8c. per foot; and John E. Hayes, 16 1-4c. per foot. Your Committee recommend that the contract be given to Mr. Sheehy provided he furnishes satisfactory security.

4. Your Committee instructed the Engineer to loan the horse road roller to North Monaghan township at a rental of $2 per day.

5. Your Committee made a final settlement with Messrs. Kennedy & Wade for their sewer contract by allowing them $80 for extra work not included in the certificate given by the Engineer.

6. Your Committee recommend that Wm. Breckenridge be paid $20 for watering the streets.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. LANGFORD,
Acting Chairman.

The report was adopted on motion of Ald. Langford and Hall.

BY-LAWS.

Ald. Langford moved the first reading of a by-law to authorize the execution of the contract with Mr. Sheehy for the construction of the granolithic sidewalks mentioned above. The by-law was passed.

A TANGLED ACCOUNT.

It was moved by Ald. Best, seconded by Ald. Denne, that an account of Mr. Jas. Bogue for construction of a short sewer on Downie-st. be paid.

Ald. Neill stated that when the petition for that sewer was signed it was understood that it was to be at the rate of 79 1-2 cents a foot. The price charged by Mr. Bogue is $1 a foot. The property owners are willing to pay at the rate of 79 1-2 cents but are not willing to pay any more. He wanted to know at which rate the town intended to charge the property owners.

Ald. Denne stated that he believed the account of Mr. Bogue at $1 a foot had been certified as correct by the Town Engineer. This made it binding on the town to pay it.

Mr. Bogue stated that he had been paid at the rate of $1 a foot, extras added, on the Gilmour-st. sewer and the contract in dispute had been taken at the same rate.

The matter was referred to the whole Council in Committee.

Ald. Hall did not like to see the town's new and expensive road roller lying idle. It had been decided that a number of streets were to be rolled, without stone being laid on and he thought this work could be proceeded with. Alderman Langford stated that preparations had been made to have the machine at work this week.

The Council then adjourned till Wednesday evening.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N.C. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

The Eagle and the Cocked Hat.

Lady Ripon told me that immediately before the Boulogne attempt Louis Napoleon was occupying her father-in-law's house in Carlton Gardens. A housemaid who had been left by the family kept writing to them that these foreigners were clearly up to some mischief. Large quantities of arms were, she said, being brought into the house, and they had also got a tame eagle, who was taught to perch upon a cocked hat by having a piece of meat placed upon it. This creature was usually kept below, but was sometimes, which the housemaid considered highly inappropriate, brought up stairs. Her letters were treated as of no consequence, but turned out prophetic.—Sir Grant Duff's "Notes From a Diary."

A Mean Suggestion.

The woman did not believe in the occult. "Now, I propose to test this clairvoyant," she was saying. "I shall send her a lock of my hair, as she directs, with some question which nobody but myself can possibly answer. Let me see, what can I ask her?'

The man laughed hoarsely. "Ask her what is the real color of the hair," he urged.

Sticks to Facts.

"No, sir," said the old author, "I always stick to facts—except when I'm writing history."

"You're right," said the old colonel, "and I never told a lie in my life—except in business."

FOR THE COLORED PEOPLE.

Mr. A. B. Walker Soliciting Aid for Work in the British West Indies.

Mr A B Walker, the negro orator and barrister-at-law, of St. John, N B, is in Peterborough to-day and will remain some days in pursuit of the mission to which he has been assigned, viz., the securing of help towards the establishment of training schools for the negro race in the British West Indies. Mr Walker himself is of pure Abyssinian lineage. He is a talented and forcible speaker, a pleasant conversationalist, a man of evident culture and refinement, and comes strongly endorsed by leading men of his native province, New Brunswick. Mr Walker is the first negro admitted to the Canadian bar. He is certainly a most creditable representative of the race, and ought to secure a fair and appreciative reception wherever he goes. up their oppontents, the result would have been entirely different.

The Ring.

The results of the Erne-Lavinge fight for the lightweight championship at Buffalo last night were heard with interest by large crowds at the Oriental and National hotels last night, though the contest did not arouse nearly as much enthusiasm as the heavyweight fights always call forth. Lavinge seemed to be the favorite in town, though both men had warm supporters. The betting was not heavy.

NEW LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION.

Frank Erne Outpointed Kid Lavigne in 20 Rounds at Buffalo.

Buffalo, N.Y., July 4.—Another pugilistic champion has gone under, and again a younger man supplants an older one. Frank Erne of this city met George Lavigne of Saginaw, Mich., in the open arena of the Hawthorne Athletic Club at Cheektowaga, a suburb of this city, last night, and after fighting 20 fiery and clever rounds, wrested the lightweight championship of the world from the western man. Over 7,000 persons watched the contest, which was brimful of exciting episodes and chuck full of hard and scientific hitting. Lavigne went down to defeat and surrended the coveted title in a most creditable manner. He was plucky and game to the core, and for the first half dozen rounds more than held his own against his adiversary. In the seventh round Lavigne received a terrible drubbing, and was only saved from a knockout by the timely interference of the gong. The Buffalonian simply batted the title out of his opponent, and while not escaping a good deal of punishment he administered a terrible drubbing to Lavigne. The Kid was game to the end, however, although his guard was useless.

Both Sides Were Good.

Not all the old masters monopolise the romance of pictures, and occasionally there percolates in a vague way the story of some modern man and his pictures, which is interesting reading. A distinguished American collector bought some years ago, so the tale runs, a work of art from a man famed for his realisation of lovely and subtle color. It was a thick panel, small, but beautiful in the tonal scheme. One day, taking the picture out of the frame, it was discovered that there was another picture on the back of the wood, a neglected work that the painter had evidently thought little about. But the artist is sometimes the poorest judge of his own efforts, so the thoughtful collector had the panel carefully sawed in half, and at the solicitation of an admirer sold the second composition. This is now among the treasures of another American collector.

NEARLY EATEN ALIVE

A MAN'S FEARFUL BATTLE WITH AN ARMY OF ANTS.

It Looked For a Time as Though His Doom Was Sealed, When a Happy Inspiration Delivered Him From the Horrible Fate That Threatened.

Walter Whitestone, the explorer, narrowly escaped a horrible fate, that of being devoured alive by an army of ants in South America. He said:

"I had heard much of the ant army from the natives, and I always received their statements cum grano salis. It sounded so very remarkable that ants, in however large numbers, could attack and devour gorged snakes of large size and overpower forest creatures possessing the strength of hundreds of ants. But I found all this to be true, as also the statement that ants parade through the forest in regular military formation.

"I had been exploring a forest in South America and had established my headquarters in the center of an open glade about 50 feet wide when I became aware of the approach of a moving mass of insects whose nature I could not at first determine, but which spread from side to side of the open space in which I stood and whose flanks were lost in the bush. At first I watched the oncoming army with lazy indifference. Only when the insects were close to me did the stories of the natives regarding the terrible power of the ant army flash into my recollection. Then I jumped up in a hurry, gathered together my traveling equipments and prepared to decamp. At the same instant I became aware, from sharp nipping pains in the lower extremities, that the vanguard of the army had reached my outstretched limbs and begun the attack. I glanced hastily around me and, horror of horrors, found that the devilish insects had me in a circle, cutting off all chance of escape except through their ranks. With the skill of expert tacticians they had delayed attack from the front until the wings had had time to march ahead and meet in the rear. The cleverness of the little fiends struck me even in that dreadful moment when the danger of my position became every moment more apparent and the creeping regiments were mounting up my limbs, sinking numberless hungry beaks into my skin and biting like a myriad of tiny demons.

"I danced madly with the pain, crushing hundreds of the ants at every step, but there were a thousand to take the place of every hundred killed. I rolled up my trousers and tried to get at the ants. I brushed them off in clusters, but while I swept them from one side they climbed up the other, biting furiously, until the blood ran down my limbs, providing a feast of which the terrible insects greedily availed themselves. Desperate and half crazed by the pain and my own helplessness, I tried to rid myself of the insects by scooping them off with both hands. It was the worst move I could have made, for the ants settled on my hands in hundreds, and I found that my condition was worse than ever.

"Have you ever heard of the Hindoo manner of capturing tigers by strewing around his lair leaves saturated with a sticky mixture? The tigar gets the sticky leaves on his paws, tries to wipe them off by rubbing his paws across his face, gets the sticky leaves in his eyes and mouth and rolls over to rid his eyes of the leaves, gets covered with them from nose to tail and finally, blinded and exhausted by his struggles, falls an easy victim to the natives. It began to look as though death was coming to me in an equally dramatic manner. My efforts to rid myself of the army of creeping things only resulted in making matters worse for me. They began to mount up my arms, and it seemed only a question of time when the attacking forces would reach my body, form a junction and continue their terrible onslaught until I sank exhausted, to be at the mercy of the entire army then waiting for the advance guard to pull me down. What a fate! To be devoured alive in the heart of a tropical forest by a horde of insects which I could crush by hundreds; to have my skeleton found years later with only my pack to disclose my identity. Was there no help?

"Inspiration comes quickly to the man who is being devoured alive by ants. I had in my camp outfit a bottle of kerosene that I carried always for a small lamp that I used at night. Kerosene I knew to be death to insects. With hurried hand I tore open the fastening of my knapsack and took out the oil bottle, the demon army all the while marching relentlessly up the red track they had made on my limbs. A dash of the kerosene on my tingling arms and my enemies dropped in writhing masses, ceased struggling and lay still as they struck the ground. That bottle of common kerosene oil was to save my life. I poured some in the hollow of my hand and rubbed it on my tortured limbs. Wherever the kerosene touched it left dead ants. What mattered it that numberless punctures smarted as though ten thousand redhot needles were piercing my skin? I was routing the enemy.

"My efforts redoubled. I poured the oil down my ankles and joyously watched the head of the columns that were mounting my shoes turn tail and scuttle off, leaving thousands of dead ants in their trail. The insects left on my body were quickly disposed of, but while I was concentrating my attention on those the army had been pushing on to renew the attack. Evidently they had been only driven back, not routed, and those afar off were not aware of the formidable nature of the defense. Half the contents of my bottle of oil had been used. It was necessary to settle the ants with what remained.

"Quickly I spread my rubber blanket on the ground at my feet and, standing in the center, emptied the contents of the bottle around my shoes. In this charmed circle I was absolutely safe. The ant army charged again and again, only to fall back baffled and terrified from the fatal oil in which I stood. The terrible insects fell squirming and dying at my feet by squads and regiments, but pass the kerosene barrier they could not, and at last the mass moved off, beaten. I was saved. But that encounter with the ant army in the South American forest will always count as the most thrilling and dreadful of a not unadventurous life."

He Was Posted.

"You ought to be more careful, Willie," said the teacher in admonition. "Don't you know what will happen to you if you keep on telling stories?"

"Yes, mum," answered the young American. "When I grow up, I'll be invited to all the big dinners and made a United States senator from New York."—Kansas City Star.

How Old She Looks

Poor clothes cannot make you look old. Even pale cheeks won't do it.

Your household cares may be heavy and disappointments may be deep, but they cannot make you look old.

HOLDING FRIARS.

The Filipinos Will Release Their Other Spanish Prisoners, However.

Manila, July 5.—The negotiations between the Spanish officers and Aguinaldo at Tarlac, concerning the Spanish prisoners in the hands of the Filipinos, have resulted in a partial agreement. According to unofficial reports, the insurgents have promised to release the sick soldiers, who number several hundred, and the civil officials; but they intend to keep the friars, expecting that the church will finally pay a heavy ransom.

It is reported that the civilian prisoners are being concentrated at Tarlac and Aparie, as well as some of their party recently opened, from which they could be shipped to Manila. The Spaniards assert that the Filipinos are impressing all the military prisoners into engineering, hospital and clerical work.

To-day the Bennington will take Prof. Schurman, president of the United States advisory commission for the Philippines, to Hongkong, from which point he will sail for Japan, to pay a short visit there before leaving for the United States.

THE 4TH IN LONDON.

The American Ambassador and Mrs. Choate Hold Receptions.

London, July 5.—Mr. Joseph Choate, the American ambassador, and Mrs. Choate celebrated the fourth with receptions, both at the United States Embassy and at their residence. Each of the buildings was tastefully decorated with flags and flowers, representing the national colors. The guests included Sir William Collins, the Queen's master of ceremonies. The reception at the Choate residence was attended by 1,500 persons, including many English people and a number of leaders of the International Council of Women. Among the guests were the Duchess of Marlborough, Lady William Beresford, Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian High Commissioner, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Crane, Mr. and Mrs. John Drew, Mesdames Ronalds, Mackay, Rider Haggard and Frank Leslie, General Wheaton and Mrs. Wheaton, Mr. G. F. Choate, Admiral Kimahan and Mrs. Kimahan.

Jollying Uncle Sam.

Plymouth, Eng., July 5.—The presence here yesterday of the U. S. training ship Monongahela was the occasion for an interesting ceremony in the harbor at noon. All the British warships were decorated with flags, and the American ensign was run up to the mastheads and saluted with 21 guns, to which the Monongahela responded.

DETECTIVES FILL RENNES.

Residence of Mme. Dreyfus Guarded--Strangers Watched.

Capt. Dreyfus Astounded at the Mass of Documents Presented Showing the Machinations of His Enemies—His Existence on Devil's Island Remains in His Memory as a Horrible Nightmare, Yet He Is in Good Heart.

Rennes, France, July 5.—It is impossible to imagine a town calmer than Rennes. The inhabitants continue absolutely indifferent to the presence of Dreyfus. Barely half a dozen persons witnessed the visits of counsel and Madame Dreyfus to the prison yesterday. The town, however, is full of detectives, who scrutinize all strangers, and a few gendarmes are patrolling before the residence of Mme. Dreyfus.

Mathieu Visited His Brother.

Mathieu Dreyfus paid his first visit to his brother at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the interview lasting half an hour. Mathieu said he found his brother aged and broken in health, but not the physical wreck he feared. In spite of his sufferings, Dreyfus' eyes are as bright and his mind as clear and his intelligence as keen as when he was occupied with his duties on the general staff. He was troubled with insomnia during the voyage, but has now recovered and last night he had a refreshing sleep. The prisoner is still suffering from dysentery, but it is now slight, and there is every reason to believe he will rapidly recuperate. He is under medical treatment.

The Captain in Good Spirits.

Mathieu found his brother in good spirits, and buoyed up by the necessity of mustering all his strength for the coming ordeal, and by the hope that at last he will have justice done him. He is extremely reserved as to his life on Devil's Island, which has left an indelible impression and remains in his memory as a horrible nightmare. Dreyfus looks back to his existence of the past four years with relief, tinged with a feeling of the horror of a sane man who has escaped from a mad house. He declares his brain is almost reeling in the face of the mass of documents and explanations MM. Demange and Labori are bringing out regarding the extraordinary machinations of his enemies and the persevering devotion of his friends. Dreyfus is astounded and full of heartfelt gratitude at their self-sacrifice. This feeling is particularly strong as regards Col. Picquart, whom he hardly remembers, and the story of whose persecution has profoundly moved him.

Every Word Heard Officially.

Capt. Dreyfus was unable to talk freely with his brother, owing to the presence of the officer, who is under instructions to be present at all interviews between the prisoner and members of his family. This arrangement has been a terrible trial for Madame Dreyfus and the rest. Only Maitres Demange and Labori are allowed to see Capt. Dreyfus privately. His counsel will return to see him together the beginning of next week, thus giving him ample time in the meanwhile to acquaint himself thoroughly with the contents of the various dossiers.

UPROAR AT ANTWERP.

"Down With the Government!" "Down With the Thieves!" "Down With the Priests!"

Antwerp, July 5.—At a meeting of the Provincial Council yesterday a councillor belonging to the Left proposed a resolution in favor of the rejection of the electoral bill. A Rightist councillor objected that the resolution was a censure of the Government. The remark was the signal for an uproarious outburst in the public galleries, where there were shouts of "Down with the Government," "Down with the thieves," "Down with the priests," and "The Marseillaise" was also sung.

Rights of the Finns.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—While refusing to receive the Finnish deputation, the Czar has issued a rescript declaring that when he ascended the throne he took up the sacred duty of watching over the welfare of all the people under the Russian sceptre, and deemed it well to "preserve to Finland the special fabric of internal legislation conferred on it by my mighty forefathers." His Majesty then expressed the hope that the loyal devotion of the Finns "would be proved to the satisfaction of the Governor-General."

British Consul at Samoa.

London, July 5.—In the House of Commons yesterday the Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office, Right Hon. William St. John Broderick, replying to a question, announced that Mr. Hunter, the chief police magistrate of the Fiji Islands, had been appointed British consul at Apia, Samoa, during the absence of Mr. E. B. S. Maxse, adding that he would exercise the same functions as Mr. Maxse, whom he temporarily replaces but does not supercede.

MULOCK'S VINDICTIVE BILL.

The Liberal Gerrymander to Retain Power in Canada.

Hon. N. Clarke Wallace Compares It With the Equitable Measure of Redistribution, on the Basis of Representation by Population, in 1882—The "Heelers" Who Fixed It Up—Infamous Legislation, Unfair to Toronto.

Ottawa, July 5.—On the opening of the House yesterday the Government bills which were passed through committee and reported the night before were read a third time and passed.

Quick Work With Cash.

Hon. Mr. Fielding made a statement with regard to the estimates, the effect of which was that he had consulted with the ex-Minister of Finance, Mr. Foster, and had decided to adopt the precedent set in 1891 of asking for a vote of one-tenth of the whole of the estimates which had not yet been passed, so that the operations of the Government may not be embarrassed.

Mr. Foster said that in giving a frank and prompt assent to the motion, which would facilitate business, he could not resist the temptation of contrasting the action of the present Opposition with that of the Liberal Opposition in 1896, when the cry was "Not one cent shall be voted," and not one cent was voted.

A resolution was then introduced by the Minister of Finance, granting one-tenth of the estimates, amounting to about $3,000,000. The resolution was "railroaded" through, concurred in, and the supply bill read a first and second times, standing for third reading at the next sitting of the House.

The Redistribution Debate.

Hon. Clarke Wallace, in resuming the adjourned debate on the redistribution bill, said he proposed to compare the act of 1882 with that of 1892, and thought he would be able to show that the former was by far the more equitable measure of the two. After paying his respects to the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson), who scarcely ever alluded to the bill in his long speech, but had confined himself to a criticism of the redistribution bill of 1882, which he had grossly misrepresented, he passed on to the manner of the redistribution bill of 1892. It had been supervised by Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Hon. J. C. Aikins, and had been fairly worked out on the basis of representation by the population. Compare it with the manner in which the present redistribution bill had been prepared. In this case, he said, those two notorious "heelers" of the Liberal party, Captain Sullivan and Mr. Simeon Hewitt of Brantford, who are now outlawed in Ontario, had been called in by the Minister of Customs, and had been sitting "cheek by jowl" with that gentleman while they fixed up the bill to suit themselves.

Paterson Denies It.

Hon. Mr. Paterson said that he did not know Sullivan, and that he did not know whether Hewitt had been in Ottawa lately or not.

Sameness Is Remarkable.

Mr. Wallace said it was somewhat remarkable that the Minister of Customs should make the same statement which had been made by Hon. John Dryden in South Ontario, and Mr. Macnish in West Elgin. These gentlemen did not know anything about the men who had been working with them during the corrupt bye-elections in West Elgin and South Ontario. (Opposition applause.) The Ministers in the Ontario Cabinet and the Federal Ministers were all of the same breed; they used their heelers and understrappers when they were needed to do dirty work, then repudiated them when they were found out. (Great Opposition cheering.) Hewitt had been born and brought up in Brantford with the Minister of Customs, who now did not know him. (Laughter.) The denial of the Minister of Customs reminded him of Preston's telegram to Macnish: "Hug the machine for me." (Roars of laughter.)

County Boundaries.

With reference to county boundaries he said the true principle was a strict adherence to county boundaries so far as

LET THE CASE IN HAND BE DEALT WITH

The Globe has another lengthy and sweetly worded editorial on bribery and corruption, but it still fails to deal with any show of consistency and sincerity with the revelations and exposures made in the West Elgin case. It, of course, discourses learnedly on the offences of "the other party," and concludes with a mild interrogation as to why the ninety-nine honest and pure electors should allow themselves to be dominated by the one—the corrupter. This is all very good, and one could agree with much the Globe says if he did not know and recognize the arrant hypocrisy that underlies the whole farce. The charges that the Grit "machine" was corrupt and was working its corruption are not new. They have been made and the truth has been known to thousands, the Globe included. But that organ never raised a voice. Preston was likened as the party organizer and the machine's work in the bye-elections was chronicled as "Liberal victories," as "Evidence of the confidence of the people in the Hardy Administration." The Conservatives, fighting at great odds, were not successful in exposing the "machine" and its vile workings until the South Ontario bye-election came, and then the climax was reached when the West Elgin exposure was made. Up to this time "the machine" was never denounced. Mr Preston's telegram to Mr McNish "to hang the machine" for him showed how the head organizer of the Hardy combination recognized its work in an election fight and was ready to pay his respects to the part it had played in expressing "the confidence of the people in the Hardy Administration." For years the Ontario Government and its supporters have "hugged" their machine. Preston was never needed in West Peterborough, for the provincial machine here knew its work to well and was too well officered to require the chief organizer's presence. But provincial elections, especially bye-elections, have been generalled by the same gang, and their methods were known, but evidence to expose them could not be obtained. Their offence at present in the eyes of many of there leading Liberals is not the corruption they practiced, but the practicing of that corruption in such a way as to be found out and result in such a complete exposure as that in West Elgin. The Globe may discuss corruption and talk about action going to be taken in South Ontario, but it must show earnestness in demanding the punishment of the guilty ones in this latest and greatest scandal. Action, it is said, is to be taken against those reported in the South Ontario election trials. But this was not at the Government's instigation, for the people who desire to see corruption stamped out have to thank the judges who urged the County Crown Attorney in South Ontario to do his duty. We are pleased that these guilty ones are to be punished, but the others should be gathered in and made suffer as well. In West Elgin the men who were guilty of impersonating, of stuffing the ballot boxes, of perjury, etc., should not escape. The man who took a two or five dollar bill for his vote should be punished and with them should stand and fall the men who engaged them, who hired and organized them for the work. Let the Globe and the Government take action to make an example of these men in this case, the most glaring and disgraceful on record, and then people may begin to have some confidence in them. In the meantime with one record of the bye-elections before them the people will look upon the Hardy Government as a discredited combination.

The Examiner not long ago took exception to the Review referring to the Hardy Government as a discredited combination, and pointed to the result of the bye-elections as evidence of the confidence imposed in it by the people. In the light of the recent exposures our contemporary has had nothing to say about these "Liberal victories," but has maintained a discreet silence. But it will hardly be so sure that the Government is not a discredited combination now.

"What is required is a determination to be governed by discussion and not by machinery." This sensible conclusion is one reached by the Toronto Globe after a lengthy and hypocritical discussion of corruption in elections. The Globe is right, and though "the machine" has succeeded in manipulating the vote for the Ontario Government that day is past. The exposure of the "machine's" methods has roused the people and they will be ruled by machinery no longer. The Liberal Government in Ontario is doomed. It is discredited. It has grown rotten and corrupt with long lease of power and it will have to go. The "machine" saved it at the last general elections and bye-elections, but that day is passed and the end is in sight.

I, GEO. W. HILL, of the city of Windsor in the County of Essex do solemnly declare that I have been troubled with Rheumatism for years and treated by four of the leading Doctors of this City, but received no relief. I was recommended by a friend to try Dr. Marchaux's No. 44, and after six weeks treatment I am able to be out again and follow my occupation as contractor and carpenter. Previous to taking your medicine I was totally disabled. I have lived here for 19 years and my friends are surprised to see me out again. Wishing you success,

Vancouver's Trade Booming.

Vancouver, July 4.—That Vancouver's trade is growing by rapid strides is apparent from customs and other returns for the fiscal year which ended June 30. The total duties for the year were $690,754.74, with other revenue of $73,387.63, showing an increase of duties at this port of over $400,000 above those of the last fiscal year. The inland revenue returns are also much larger than during 1898.

Salmon fishing began last night. The fish are running well for so early in the season and canners report the outlook good.

compatible with representation by population, which was really the keynote of confederation. The Postmaster-General had called the Redistribution Act of 1882 "an iniquitous act," but Mr. Wallace contended that was a fair and equitable redistribution of the population of the province of Ontario, so as to make provision for the six additional members to which, by the census of 1881, the province of Ontario was entitled. He then took up the present bill and analyzed it at considerable length, claiming that it neither adhered to county boundaries nor did it give a fair representation by population. He stigmatized it as a caricature on legislation and a disgrace to any deliberative assembly, and said that even if the Government bulldozed it through the House and got it assented to by the Senate, it would at the very earliest opportunity receive the most severe condemnation at the hands of the electorate of Ontario. (Tremendous applause from the Conservative benches.)

Mr. McMullen followed in support of the bill and in condemnation of the act of 1882.

A Straight Challenge.

Mr. Clancy challenged the Government to name a single Liberal who had been driven out of his seat by the redistribution bill of 1882, and submitted a number of calculations to show the absurdity of the claim, that a large number of Liberals had been gerrymandered out of their seats. He next took up the course of the Liberal opposition on the Redistribution Act of 1882, pointing out that of the twenty-two amendments proposed by the Liberal opposition the majority were trivial.

Mr. Bell (P.E.I.), reviewed the bill from a constitutional standpoint and held that it was all right.

Toronto Not Getting Fair Play.

Mr. John Ross Robertson spoke at very considerable length from a Toronto standpoint, arguing that the city was not getting fair play. He thought the redistribution bill of 1882 a bad bill, but this one was very much worse. He charged the Government with trying to gerrymander Hon. Clarke Wallace out of his seat, and said it would take something stronger than the present Government or the present bill to gerrymander Clarke Wallace out of the hearts of the people of West York. In conclusion he warned the Government that the electorate could not be coerced and the voice of the people would be heard no matter how the Government tried to stifle it, and he believed that when the voice of the people was heard it would be against a Government which introduced such infamous legislation as the gerrymander bill.

Mr. Heyd defended the bill and spoke until 12.40, when Mr. McNeill moved the adjournmen of the debate, and the House adjourned.

JOE MARTIN ASKED TO GO.

Premier Semlin Gave Three Reasons Why He Should Resign.

Fighting Joe Denies the Correctness of Any of Them, Including the Charge of Conduct Unbecoming a Cabinet Minister at the Rossland Banquet—He Refuses to Resign, Will Batter Government to Pieces and Unle Himself.

Vancouver, B.C., July 5.—The British Columbia Government is said to be tottering to its fall, owing to the blundering of "Fighting Joe" Martin. Yesterday Premier Semlin asked the Attorney-General to resign, for three reasons, namely:

Bringing the Government into dispute by conducting himself at a Rossland banquet in a manner unbecoming a Cabinet Minister, where he bombastically stated that he (Martin) wouldn't give Rossland a court house, and by shouting and saying, "You white-shirted hoboes can all go to hell."

Secondly, Because he had persisted in giving Cabinet secrets away to outsiders.

Thirdly, Because he had neglected his duty as Attorney-General.

He Denies All Charges.

Mr. Martin has denied all charges, and refused to resign, but proposes to batter the Government to pieces and in the appeal to the people try for the Premiership. As he has the organized Socialists and all laboring classes with him, the chances are good.

Lieut.-Governor at Atlin.

The Lieut.-Governor is at Atlin and can take no action just now.

Carter Cotton is urging that Harry Helmcken, Opposition member for Victoria, be taken into the Cabinet instead of Mr. Martin in the hope that a peace may be patched up with the Opposition, as, if the Government goes to the country, Cotton is out of it, owing to his defying the labor element by refusing the urgent demands of Vancouver and sticking out alone in denying the right of Yankee capitalists to build their big sawmill on Dead Man's Island, the Government reserve, and by actively sharing in the acts of the Government in their eight-hour law, their Alien Act and their anti-Japanese legislation, all antagonistic to capital.

The political possibilities of British Columbia are well hidden just now.

IDENTIFIED.

Pare and Holden Recognized as the Men by Detective Greer.

Campbellton, N.B., July 5.—On his arrival here yesterday morning Detective Greer, of the Ontario Detective Department, was at once taken to the jail and confronted with the prisoners, whom he at once identified as Pare and Holden. The two men accepted the situation philosophically. They said little. In fact, during the whole of their incarceration they have maintained a discreet silence.

Guarded by Armed Men.

The men will be taken to Toronto by the 2.40 express this morning. In the meanwhile the authorities are fearful that they will repeat their former jail-breaking exploits, and a guard of half a dozen well-armed men is being constantly kept in watch over them.

BODY FOUND IN THE NIAGARA.

Card in a Pocket Bore the Name "Isaac Warner, Swansea, Ont."

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 5.—The body of a well-dressed man, apparently about 35 years old, was found in the river above the Falls yesterday afternoon. In one of his pockets was found a card bearing the name "Isaac Warner, Swansea, Ont." The coroner is investigating.

Toronto, July 5.—The name Isaiah Warner appears in the directory as belonging to Swansea. His occupation is given as manager of the "Swansea swinery."

Nelson Shaver Drowned Himself.

Thorold, Ont., July 5.—The body of Nelson Shaver, well-known throughout this district, was taken out of the new canal, between lock 24 and the Niagara Central Railway swing bridge here, Monday night, with every evidence of suicide. The deceased had evidently left the house and gone to the barn, where he secured a dog chain and a weight of 10 or 12 pounds, such as is used to tie horses. He had attached these to his neck and jumped into the canal. He had only one arm. An inquest was held here yesterday afternoon by Coroner Dr. Lemon, and the jury brought in a verdict of temporary insanity and suicide.

A Crazy Man With a Gun.

Windsor, Ont., July 5.—Malcolm McAlpine walked into the hotel of his cousin, Peter McAlpine, at Glencoe, armed with a rifle, and coolly informed the proprietor that he intended boring a hole in him. The hotel man escaped to his room upstairs and all night McAlpine waited near the door for his appearance, with the rifle still in readiness. He threatened to shoot anyone attempting to arrest him. The local officers wouldn't tackle the job, but a detective came from London and locked him up. He is insane.

Sneath Is Very Weak.

London, Ont., July 5.—John Sneath, the ex-G.T.R. baggageman, who recently attempted to cut his throat, now lies in a very low condition at the county jail. Since his arrest Sneath has refused to eat, causing him to become so weak that he is unable to walk. He is never left by himself, for fear that he will again attempt his life. If Sneath recovers he will be transferred to the asylum.

Kingston Postoffice Enquiry.

Kingston, Ont., July 5.—The postoffice enquiry, under Judge Morgan, was postponed, for general convenience, until Thursday. E. F. B. Johnston, Q.C., Toronto, and Macdonald & Farrell have been engaged by Deputy Postmaster Renton and Clerk Cochrane, and A. B. Cunningham will represent Allen Chamberlain.

Hanged Himself With Twine.

Listowel, Ont., July 5.—Nelson Dixon, sixty years of age, committed suicide by hanging himself with binder twine to a beam in the barn back of the house last night. Mr. Dixon had been a resident of Listowel for twenty years. A wife and large family are left. Despondency is supposed to have been the cause of the act.

THE HENLEY REGATTA.

Fifty-Three Entries Is the Total Number as Against 54 in 1898.

Henley, July 5.—The River Thames presented an animated scene yesterday afternoon at the opening of the Henley races. There are 53 entries, as against 54 in 1898, of whom three crossed the seas, without mentioning Gaudin, who, though rowing under the Thames colors, is ambitious to carry off the Diamond Sculls for France.

The oarsmen of the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto, Canada, now here, have already made many friends, and will make a bold bid for both the Grand Challenge Cup and the Stewards' Challenge Cup, though the absence of a body swing in the boat makes the English critics shake their heads. Close observers point out the important fact that their long slide makes their stroke look much shorter than it is.

The Dutch crew, from Delft, arrived yesterday and will meet the Canadians in the first heat for the Grand. The Hamburgers also continue to attract much attention.

Wednesday was the day originally fixed for the opening of the regatta, but the date was changed to Tuesday.

In the first heat for the Diamond Sculls, singles, Hemmerde rowed over the course, Gaudin was absent. Hemmerde was the entry of University College, Oxford.

TO SAIL FOR THE CANADA CUP.

The Genesee of Rochester Ran Away From the Others.

Chicago, July 5.—The Genesee of Rochester, N.Y., was an easy winner of the first trial race held under the auspices of the Chicago Yacht Club yesterday to select a boat to send to Toronto to compete for the Canada Cup in August. The Genesee covered the distance in 4.17.37, running away from the Prairie and Josephine, the other two competitors. The Prairie came in on her beam end second, and the Josephine last. The Bald Eagle, fresh from the stocks of Racine, in manoeuvering for position at the start, was dismasted.

ANOTHER FLOOD DISASTER.

Three Hundred or More People Waterbound in Texas.

Dallas, Texas, July 5.—Another flood disaster which appears to be worse than that of last week occurred yesterday in the Brazos Valley, about 100 miles down the river from Calvert. Alarming reports come of loss of life in the vicinity of Brookshire. One report says that yesterday afternoon there were from 300 to 400 people on a small island near Brookshire, and the water was rising rapidly. There was no means of escape and fears are expressed that they have been drowned.

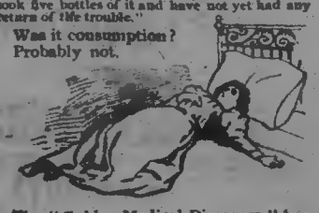
Was It Consumption?

Doctors are often wrong.

The local doctor is an overworked individual. He hurries from a case of scarletina to a case of diabetes and from that to the amputation of a leg. He must act quickly—sometimes hurriedly. It is not strange that he makes an occasional mistake. But mistakes are dangerous and should be avoided.

Mrs. G. E. Kerr, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, recently had some experience. She says:

"Last spring I was taken with severe pains in my chest, and was so weak I could hardly walk about the house. I tried several physicians and they told me I had consumption. Before I had taken the first bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I was very much better. I took five bottles of it and have not yet had any return of the trouble."



The "Golden Medical Discovery" has been said to cure consumption. It surely and infallibly cures all bronchial and throat troubles. It strengthens weak lungs and cures lingering coughs. It is a healer and builder of tissue. It cleanses and enriches the blood—regulates the heart action—puts the whole body in tune with nature.

Mrs. Kerr's trouble was probably bronchial. It was painful—dangerous if let run—dangerous in the hands of an incompetent doctor. Don't take a local doctor's word for everything. Write to Dr. Pierce. Tell him your symptoms. For over thirty years he has been chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Consultation with him will cost you nothing.

ELEGANT GOWNS.

Elaborate Costumes For Fashionable Occasions.

Except where tailor made costumes are concerned there is no such thing as simplicity. Ruffles, tucks, plaitings, cording, folds, lace, embroidery, passementerie, applications, buttons, buckles and clasps are all utilized as trimming, with drapery, rosettes, bows and bands of ribbons and velvet. Then there are spangled tulles and gauzes and fringe, both silk and beaded.

SATIN TOILET.

Exquisite evening gowns are made of lace and guipure shaped to the figure without a seam and flaring out at the foot of the skirt with the circular flounce effect. These are worn over satin, usually white, cream or ecru, and are very rich.

Ball gowns are divided into two classes—those for the dancers and those for the guests who do not dance. The former are of the most vaporous materials—spangled and embroidered tulle and gauze, brocbe mousselines de soie, light piece lace and the whole range of crepes de chine and thin liberty silks. The second division of costumes is richer and heavier in material and trimming, with longer trains and less diaphanous decorations.

The gown illustrated is of black satin, the princess redingote opening over a skirt of orange silk with black lace embroidered with jet. The redingote is also heavily embroidered with jet, as are the large revers of orange silk, which join at the back to form a deep point. A ruffle of black mousseline de soie forms epaulets and outlines this point, diminishing to nothing at the waist. The collar is of orange silk, the capote also, the trimming of the capote consisting of black plumes and a paste buckle. The cravat is of white lace, forming a jabot. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION HINTS.

Tailor Made Gowns and Other Costumes of the Day.

The present tailor made costume is practically an adaptation of the riding habit. The skirt has no plaits whatever at the back and but a single seam and fastens at the front or side, or if it has two slight plaits behind there is no placket hole there. Only a graceful figure, neither very thin nor decidedly stout, can carry such a skirt to advantage, for all defects as well as all beauties are brought into prominence by it.

SILK CAPE.

The new materials are of soft and brilliant coloring, light and of medium depth of tone as a rule. A number of blues are seen, blue being an extremely fashionable color this season. There are several blues blues, French blue, pastel blue and turquoise, although the last named enjoys less favor than the stronger, franker shades. Tobacco and wallflower browns, with suede, are well worn, while mastic, ecru, the palest possible gray and other undefined tints just off white are of extreme elegance, comprising many exquisite toilets and also attractive separate silk and satin waists. Cyclamen, light violet and pinkish mauve are delicate and lovely colors, and pale yellow and green are also seen, especially in lawns, crapes and for millinery purposes.

Fine checks and dots are used for walking gowns, while plaids appear for trimmings and for the linings of capes and wraps.

The cape shown is of the 1840 style, in mauve grosgrain, having three circular flounces of black chantilly over white satin. The top flounce is beaded by a triple ruche of mauve silk. The flaring collar is lined with a large ruche of white satin bordered with mauve, and there is a cravat of white mousseline de soie trimmed with lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE JEWEL CASKET.

The ruby is a very fashionable stone at present.

Large, tinted pearls are much in evidence in rings, pins and brooches.

The hatpin craze continues. These pins must needs be larger and more gorgeous than ever to harmonize with the brilliant spring hats.

The long chain is still prominent in the jewelers' cases. It adapts itself to so many purposes and can be made the excuse for displaying such a variety of pretty articles that it blossoms out with renewed beauty as winter wraps are laid aside.

Earrings are much worn, and the fashion undoubtedly grows apace. In addition to solitaire diamonds and pear shaped pearls, the cluster of a single ruby, pearl or sapphire surrounded with brilliants represents the standard style. All rings fit close to the ear.—Jewelers' Circular.

THE ACTORS WENT TO CHURCH.

An Unexpected Role by the Quartet and the Result.

"Concerning the power of music," remarked the retired barnstormer who had several home stretch pedestrian records with various comic opera companies, "I remember on one occasion to have seen it peculiarly verified. We had some first class talent in the company I was with at the time—we had only been out a month, and the endowment fund wasn't exhausted yet—and among them was a quartet of male and female voices that couldn't be beat anywhere. We were billed to appear one Monday night in a town of 7,000 people in Ohio which had a reputation of being the frostiest place on the road, and the manager put us in there only because there wasn't any other place to go without costing as much in railroad fares as we could lose at a performance.

"We got to the town Sunday morning, and it was a long and tiresome day, and we were so bored when night came that we made up a party to go to church, just to change our luck. I don't know what kind of a church it was, except that it was a big one and there was some kind of a meeting on that filled it. We had come early, and we had seats about the middle of the orchestra chairs. As it happened, our quartet sat together, and they got hymnbooks all right.

"When the first service of song was offered, our combination was a bit shaky with stage fright, for they hadn't been to church since they had sung in their home church choirs long ago, but on the second round they were all right, all right, and the hymn was one they were familiar with. Well, they went at it as they ought to, and when the first verse was finished I could see there was some sensation among the people nearest to us and lots of eyes and ears were turned out way. Our quartet was interested by now in their singing, though, and we didn't think about anything else but the word to go on with the second verse, and when they got it they went at it with all their skill and sweetness. By the time the second verse was finished there were not a dozen voices to be heard besides their own, and the sensation had spread all over the house.

"On the third verse our quartet went in alone, and I don't think I ever heard such singing as they put up. It was one of those good, old fashioned hymns that have the spirit of truth and glory in them, and the music matched the words in a way to carry anybody off his feet, and it did it for that audience or congregation, or whatever you call it, for when the last note died away the cold chills ran down my back and up my neck, and if some old brother in the amen corner had not shouted glory and a dozen more in other parts of the house followed suit I believe I would have shouted myself.

"However that might have been, when everybody had sat down the gentleman in the pulpit stepped forward and thanked our people for their singing, and said if they would sing a few more selections the congregation would be greatly pleased. Of course our quartet was pleased, too, and they not only sang a few more selections, but they received the personal thanks of everybody after the service was over, and the next night we had an audience that filled the theater. Now, that's what I call real power."—Washington Star.

CHOOSING A SITE.

Making Preparations for a Big Acquatic Meeting in 1900.

Vice-Commodore Howell and Messrs H R Tilley, C H Wilson, of the Toronto Canoe Club, and Mr W J English, of Peterborough, returned yesterday from Muskoka, where they had been since Friday engaged in selecting the camp site for the meet of the American Canoe Association for 1900. Through the kindness of the Grand Trunk and the Mukoka Navigation Co. every facility was afforded the prospectors, and three very desirable locations were decided on, and of these three it is probable that the island of Grandview, about a mile from Beaumaris, will be the choice. The committee will go up again in the course of a week or so to make the decision.

SAD DROWNING AT STONY LAKE

A YOUNG WOMAN RUSHES INTO THE WATER AND COMMITS SUICIDE.

Louisa Underwood, of Clarke Township. Suffering From Melancholia, Takes Her Life in a Moment of Despondency.

A sad case of suicide by drowning occurred at Stony lake last night. The victim was Miss Louisa Underwood, a young woman of Kendall, Clarke township. She had been suffering from melancholia and in a moment of despondency took her own life.

The family went up to the lake last Monday morning and took a cottage on Black Rock island, Gilchrist's bay, near Boschink. The cottage belongs to Mr. Reynolds, of Bethany. The reason for coming to the lake was the hope that the outing would be of benefit to Miss Underwood, who had been in ill health and was suffering from melancholia. About eight o'clock last evening the young woman was alone for a time and rushed down to the shore and out into the water beyond her depth, drowning very quickly. The act was committed in the sight of her brother and a companion, who were in a boat out in the lake about four hundred yards off, but before they could reach her she was beyond all assistance. The body was recovered shortly afterwards.

The affair was reported to Dr. Alex. Bell, coroner at Lakefield, and he decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The remains were brought on to town by the Lakefield train this morning and were forwarded by the noon train to the home of her friends for interment. Her brother accompanied them. The sad event was a great shock.

BURNED TO DEATH

A Shocking Fatal Accident at Madoc on Saturday.

A horrible affair is reported from Madoc. James Pringle, of that village, owned a lime kiln, and on Saturday morning he started to take out a kiln which had just burnt. It appears that some stones on the top gave way, and the unfortunate man fell into the partly emptied kiln. He was not missed till late in the day, and when search was made for him he was fuond with his clothing burnt off, and when he was taken out the flesh peeled off his bones. The unfortunate man was only three months married, and was a prominent Orangeman and Freemason.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, chairman, presented the following report of the Property Committee:—

1. Your Property Committee after inspecting the Central school beg leave to report that they found it in need of a thorough cleaning and repairing generally and recommend that the walls and ceilings be all cleaned and the woodwork painted; also part of the walls painted in all the halls and hallways between the woodwork and 10 inches above the woodwork instead of kalsomining. In fitting up a room in this George-st. school there should be 40 new single desks, junior size, put in, as the old ones are not fit for use and can be disposed of. The repairs in other schools are not very serious but all want attention.

2. As per your instructions we advertised for tenders for the work to be done in connection with the closets and sewer to be put in the Central school as per plans and specifications prepared by Mr. Wm. Blackwell. Mr. Adam Hall's tender at $725, being the lowest, we recommend that the contract be awarded to him.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. G. FERGUSON, Chairman.

The report was adopted.

Brevities.

—There was no skating at the rink to-day.

—Mr. Jack Irwin caught a find 12-lb. lunge off cemetery point in the Little lake yesterday.

—The names of Roy Wilson and Mossie Loomis were by mistake omitted from the list of those who passed from Jun. Pt. II. to Sen. Pt. II. in the Park-st. school.

—The 57th Battalion band had a specially long practice last evening. Mr. Gliddon has a number of new pieces under preparation, which will be heard at the park concert on Friday evening.

When Mr. Laurence Hutton wrote his book "A Boy I Knew and Four Dogs," he did not by any means exhaust his list of canine friends. He has had many others, of which he did not tell in the book but about which he has written in an article entitled "Some More Dogs," to appear in the August number of Harper's Round Table. These dog stories are all true in every particular, and in order that there may be no doubt of some of the marvellous tales, the photographs of the dogs themselves will be used to illustrate the article.

WHAT IS GOOD.

"What is the real good?"
I asked in musing mood.
"Order," said the law court;
"Knowledge," said the school;
"Truth," said the wise man;
"Pleasure," said the fool;
"Love," said the maiden;
"Beauty," said the page;
"Freedom," said the dreamer;
"Home," said the sage;
"Fame," said the soldier;
"Equity," said the czar.
Spake my heart full sadly,
"The answer is not here."
Then within my bosom
Softly this I heard:
"Each heart holds the secret—Kindness is the word."
—John Boyle O'Reilly.

THE SECRET SIGN.

How the Woman Discovered It When the Lodge Publicly Installed.

Occasionally the lodges give ladies' nights and publicly install their officers. These are the occasions when the goat, relegated to a closet with a combination lock, sits on his haunches, munched a sandwich which he has surreptitiously pinched before the arrival of the guests and snickers at the dear, delightful ladies, who think they are penetrating the veil of secrecy in which their lords and masters revel.

No woman ever goes to a public installation without expecting to catch a glimpse of some half hidden object which wasn't intended for her eye. No woman ever comes away without feeling that she has accomplished her purpose.

Did you ever note the alert ear with which she follows the installing officer? Not a word of all his long exordium escapes her. She pretends to be frightfully bored, but all the time she's listening for some double meaning, some proof that under the plausible words of the speaker lurk hidden phrases, deep dyed in secrecy. Every intonation that he gives the highly flowered language of the public installation ceremony is to her pregnant with all that is mysterious.

Her eye runs around the paneling of the room, searching for some button which needs but to be pressed to release the goat or the camel.

That spot where the secretary spilled the bottle of red ink on the drill canvas has a sinister look, and she wonders if it was Henry's lifeblood that helped give the cloth its sanguine stain.

In the carpet in front of her there is a burned district several inches wide, charred even into the wood. That must have been where the branding iron got away from them, she says to herself, and when she sees her husband looking in her direction her eyes answer him with an oh-yes-I've-seen-it-you-didn't-expect-I-would-did-you flash that makes him chuckle. She doesn't know that it was big John Carterston's cigar, dropped when the lodge opened and forgotten in the heat of the work, that made the hole in the carpet.

The installing officer notices as he arises to speak a bit of lint on the bosom of his coat, and he picks it off and twitches it away with a nervous movement. Then he smiles, and the brethren who have noticed the lint smile also.

After they get home the ladies turn on their husbands and ask them if it wasn't funny.

"What?" ask the mystified men.

"Why, the way the installing officer forgot himself and made that secret sign.

Oh, I saw it. You didn't think I did, but I did. I saw you smile back at him as much as to say, 'Never mind, no one saw you.' Don't try to deny it. I saw how he did it. Just this way."

Here she repeats the performance of picking off the bit of lint, and her better half, if he's as mean as most of them, will beseech her by all that is good and holy not to tell any one, or he will be ejected from the lodge for giving away the secrets.

O woman, woman! How the glamour of the lodgeroom awakens your detective ability.

Taking the Cowboy's Picture.

"Now," said the border photographer, pulling his gun and leveling it across the camera at the man in the chair, "will you have the kindness to look pleasant?"

Much amused by the cheek and the cool nerve of the request thus conveyed, the bold cowboy smiled broadly, and at that instant the border photographer pressed the button.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The "Little Cuss."

The good nature with which Professor Marsh always took the flings of men who made them simply through ignorance or stupidity was proverbial. He once met P. T. Barnum, the showman, in a railroad car. He knew Barnum from his portraits, but Barnum did not know him.

They entered into conversation, and Barnum told him of a number of curios which had been picked up in Mexico for his museum, but which his agents in New York, not realizing their value, offered for sale before they could be put on exhibition.

"And they were sold!" asked Professor Marsh.

"Yes, some little cuss up in New Haven bought them," answered Barnum.

"I thought so," said the scientist, smiling and handing out his card. "I was the little cuss."

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

As he passes the clerk that worthy bends forward to say:

"Does monsieur know these people who have come from the steamer?"

John sees a list of names under his own.

"Professor Sharpe and wife.

"Lady Ruth Stanhope.

"Colonel Lionel Blunt.

"Miss Pauline Potter."

There they are, all present, and he hears the voice of Aunt Gwen in the dining-room, even at the moment of his reading her name, gently chiding a waiter for not serving the professor more promptly, always in a hurry, but generally good-natured withal.

"They are friends of mine," he says, and then follows his Arab guide.

Once on the street John observes what is passing around him, and the scene on the grand square is certainly lively enough, with the garrison band discoursing sweet music, the numerous lights from cafe and magasins de nouveautes, and crowds moving about.

Presently they come to a bazaar, where every article known to Oriental ingenuity, from Zanzibar carpets, embroideries of Tunis, Damascus cutlery and odd jewellery to modern novelties can be found.

Here they enter.

The guide selects what he needs, and John pays for it, wondering what sort of clumsiness he will display in the wearing of an Arab costume.

Until they reach the border of the old town upon the hill-side, there is little need of his donning the ridiculous affair.

He casts many inquisitive glances upon his guide and other Arabs whom they meet to see how they wear the burnoose.

"I reckon John Craig won't disgrace Chicago, if he isn't to the manner born," he concludes.

"Now, monsieur will allow me," says the tall guide, leading him into a dark corner.

There is some little difficulty experienced, but in the end John turns Arab.

"Say not a word—if saluted, I will reply," is the last caution he receives.

Then they move on.

Now their road ascends.

They are in Al Jezira, the old Arab town.

The passage is so narrow that at times John could easily touch the walls of the spectral houses on either side by extending his arms.

Every little while there is a short step. Now and then an arch from which hangs a queer lantern burning dimly. Over a door, here and there, a light marks the residence of some Moor or Arab of note. But for these the passage-way would be totally dark, even on the brightest moonlight night.

They meet bearded and turbaned Arabs, who stalk majestically along, proud as Lucifer, even without a piastre in their purses; even women veiled as usual, wearing anklets, and with their nails stained with henna.

The men salute, and Mustapha replies, while the disguised young American merely bows his head, which he has hidden after the manner of one who mourns.

Thus they advance.

Presently they turn sharply to the left, and enter a dark passage.

"We will wait here a few minutes."

"But why?" asks the impatient doctor.

"You saw the group descending, monsieur?"

"Yes."

"I recognized them as rival couriers. If they saw me, they would glance sharply at my companion. Perhaps for much duros they have some time taken a Frank through Al Jezira at night. That would not count. If they believed I did the same thing, they would spread the news abroad, and I am afraid we would have trouble. Better a little delay than that," and he draws a finger across John's throat to signify the terrible stroke of a vengeful yataghan.

"I think you are right," replies John.

They hear the group go by, laughing and joking, and the passage is again clear.

"Again, forward, monsieur," whispers the faithful courier, and leaving their hiding-place they push on.

They are in the heart of the old town, and a most singular sensation comes over John, as he looks all around to see the white walls, the solemn figures moving about, and hears sounds that never before greeted his ears.

It is as if he were in another world.

While he thus ponders and speculates, his companion comes to a sudden halt. They are at the door of a house a little more conspicuous than its fellows, and Mustapha hastily gives the rapper a resonant clang.

CHAPTER XIII.

His manner gives the man from Chicago to understand that he has cause for sudden anxiety.

"What is it, Mustapha?" he whispers.

"Monsieur did not notice. Two Arabs, one a muezzin, or priest, just passed us. They brushed against you. Perhaps they disturbed the burnoose; at any rate, their heads go together; they appear excited; they stop below; see, you can yourself notice; two more join them; they point this way. Ah! there is trouble, monsieur. Nay, do not draw a weapon; it comes not now, but later. I hear footsteps within, the bolt is withdrawn, the door opens."

What Mustapha says is true; the heavy door, still secured by a stout chain, opens half a foot, and by the dim light a Moorish lad is seen.

To him the guide addresses himself. Whatever he says in the Moorish tongue, it must be directed to the point, for immediately the door is opened wide enough to admit them, after which it is shut and the heavy bolt shoots into its socket.

John follows his conductor. For the time being, he loses sight of Mustapha, and must depend upon his own abilities. Trust a young man from Chicago to be equal to any occasion, no matter how extraordinary.

In another minute he is ushered into a large room, which is decorated in an Oriental way that John has never seen equalled.

Rich colors blend, soft light falls upon the many articles of a connoisseur's collection, and, taken all in all, the scene is dazzling.

He gives it one glance.

Then his attention is riveted upon the figures before him. A couple of servants wait upon the owner of the house, Ben Taleb, the Moorish doctor. He is a venerable man, with white hair and a long snowy beard—his costume is simple black; but beside him sits his daughter, and she presents a spectacle John never saw equalled.

Silks of the loveliest hues, velvets that are beyond description, diamonds that flash and dazzle, strings of milky pearls that cause one's eyes to water. John sees the beautiful dreamy face, and thinks, as he compares it with the rosy-cheeked, laughing-eyed English girls, that these Moors make veritable dolls of their daughters.

Fortunately that Chicago assurance, which has carried him through many singular scenes, does not desert him now.

He has never yet beheld what beauty the miserable yashmak and foutah of the veiled Moorish lady concealed, and is naturally taken aback by the disclosure, but recovering himself, he advances toward those who seem to await some action on his part.

The miserable burnoose he has discarded in the hall, so that, hat in hand, John now appears under his own colors.

Bowing low, much after the salaam of a native in deference to beauty's presence, he addresses the Moorish doctor.

An observant traveller, Craig has a way of assimilating what he sees, and hence speaks in something of the figurative and flowery style so common among the dark-skinned people of all Oriental countries, for an Arabian robber will be as polite as a French dandy, and apologize for being compelled to cut your throat.

Having, therefore, asked pardon for an intrusion at such an hour, he proceeds to business.

The old doctor has, up to this time, said not a word, only bowed; but now he speaks:

"Where do you come from?" he asks.

"America—Chicago," with the full belief that the taleb must have heard of the bustling city upon Lake Michigan.

And he is right, too, for the old Moor frowns.

"Chicago is accursed. I hate it, because it shelters an enemy to one I revere, one who saved my only child from death, when she lay with the fever at Alexandria. Your name, monsieur, and then your ailment, for I take it your case is urgent to bring you here under such a risk."

"My name I have never been ashamed of. It is John Alexander Craig. My disease is one of the heart, and I believe——"

The appearance of the old Moor is such that John comes to a sudden stop—Ben Taleb's eyes are dilated—he stares at the young man in a fierce way, and his whole body appears to swell with rising emotions.

"Stop!" he thunders, and claps his hands in an excited way.

John, remembering his former experience, draws himself up in readiness for defence, nor is he surprised to see several slaves enter the room at the bidding of their master.

"This is the height of infamy, you who bear that hated name dare invade the home of Ben Taleb! I read your secret; you are not sick."

"No, no——"

"You come with another motive; you seek one who has long been lost, one who has suffered for years, unjustly, because of a Craig. May Allah's curses blight your footsteps."

(To be continued).

Children Cry for CASTORIA.

BEE BUZZES.

In all hives there should be three personages—the queen, the worker bee and the drone.

One secret of getting wax of a bright yellow color is to allow it to cool slowly; but always be careful not to burn it.

As long as the bees have plenty of room in the hive surplus boxes are unnecessary and should not be added to the hive.

The only rule in using the smoker is to use it sufficiently to keep the bees under control from the start, taking care not to kill them.

Worker bees being undeveloped females may now and then be sufficiently developed to lay eggs, but their eggs will produce only drones.

The worker bee does all the work of the hive; gathers in the honey, pollen and water, secretes the wax, builds the comb, and ripens and caps the honey.

When returning frames to a hive, adjust them slowly and carefully. Do not slide the frame to its place at one push. Slide it up slowly, just to touch the next frame.

If a colony in the spring has not pollen gathered the previous year, place rye meal near the hive in a protected place where it will not blow away. A little sugar sprinkled over it will help attract the bees. —St. Louis Republic.

Praying by Machinery.

In most of the villages are found a quantity of praying wheels or cylinders, erected by pious Buddhists, and it is an act of religion to turn these wheels in passing. This not only benefits the soul of the founder and helps him to attain nirvana, but also the soul of the traveler, as every act of charity meets its reward in a future state. The lamas usually carry praying wheels, which they are perpetually turning in sign of prayer, while the common people make frequent use of them.

This custom of praying by machinery is thoroughly characteristic of a land where all is weird, fantastic and topsy turvy and in which the newcomer seems to live in a dream of unreality. One can sympathize with the traveler who tells us that he would not have been surprised to learn that in Tibet, as in Gulliver's country of Laputa, some ingenious person had contrived a new method for building houses by beginning at the roof and working downward to the foundation.—Times of India.

A Singular Lake.

A singular lake on Kildin island, near the coast of Russian Lapland, not far from Kola, is composed of both fresh and salt water. The island is a paleozoic rock separated from the granite continent by an arm of the sea, and upon it is a lake which seems to be entirely shut off from the sea by a strip of land, but there must be some subterranean communication, for the tides of the sea are noticed in the lake, though in much diminished effect. The lake contains three different kinds of water. On the surface it is fresh water, coming from a few brooks and from the rainfall; lower down it is salt water, and at the bottom sea water is mixed with sulphurous hydrogen gas. The lake harbors fresh water animals on and near the surface and salt water animals beneath.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Colds.

I have often noticed that persons who suffer most frequently and severely from colds usually insist that they exercise the greatest care to avoid exposure. Thus says a writer in Popular Science Monthly and, continuing, says: "They have dressed in the warmest clothing, wrapped the neck in the heaviest mufflers, remained in the closest rooms and avoided every draft, and yet they continually take cold. The street urchin, on the other hand, with only two or three garments and without shoes and who lives out of doors, suffers less frequently from this affection."

TO SECURE PEACE.

Belgian Government Reiterates Its Desire to Pacify the Public Mind—Socialists Claim Victory.

Brussels, July 5.—In the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, M. Van Denpeereboom, at the opening of the session, reiterated the Government's strong desire to effect a reconciliation and pacify the public mind. He continued: "The Government considers there is ground for entertaining the counter-electoral proposals suggested by various members, and submitting them to a committee on which all parties will be represented. The Government, in the meanwhile, is prepared to consider the necessary steps to accomplish the desired understanding."

M. Van Der Veldt, Socialist, on behalf of the two parties of Leftists, supported the Ministerial proposal, which, he declared, was equivalent to the withdrawal of the Government scheme. The country, he continued, has thus achieved a signal victory, and is convinced that the only solution of the existing party differences is an appeal to the country, either through an early election, a dissolution, or a referendum. In conclusion, M. Van Der Veldt declared the parties of the Left would remain united in order to combat any attempt of the Government to resume offensive tactics, and to prevent any fresh party coup.

M. Woeste declared the Rightists would remain equally united for the defence of constitutional liberties.

A Wrangle at Liege.

Liege, July 5.—The opening of the Provincial Council here yesterday was attended by great confusion. The Governor-General, M. Petry da Thozee, in closing his speech, used the words, "Long Live the King!" whereupon the members of the Left shouted, "Long Live Universal Suffrage!" "Long Live the Republic!" The loyalists made a counter-demonstration, and the sitting was closed amid a tumult.

To Continue the Fight.

Brussels, July 5.—At a large meeting held in the Theatre Flamand last evening the speakers exhorted the populace to continue the fight for universal suffrage. A number of civic guards entered with arms reversed. One of them said: "We had ten cartridges—too many for seven Ministers."

THE PACIFIC CABLE.

Reported That Conference Has Arrived at a Satisfactory Imperial Basis—Colonials to be Advised.

London, July 5.—The Daily News says this morning: "We understand that the Pacific cable conference has arrived at a satisfactory basis. The general principles of the scheme have been provisionally agreed upon and will be communicated to the Colonial Governments. Unless a hitch occurs the cable will be an Imperial affair in the full sense of the word. Probably a board of delegates will be appointed to settle details and take the preliminary steps."

FRENCH GOVERNMENT UPHELD.

Answer to Beauregard's Interpellation Concerning Women's Wages Bill.

Paris, July 5.—In the Chamber of Deputies yesterday M. Paul Beauregard, Republican, representing one of the districts of the Seine, submitted his promised interpellation on the subject of the bill dealing with women's wages and the hours of labor. He disputed the right of M. Millerand, Socialist Minister of Commerce, to deal with the matter by decree, as he proposed to do, until the next session. The speaker was loudly interrupted by members of the extreme Left.

M. Millerand, in replying, disclaimed all intention on the part of the Government to curtail the rights of Parliament.

Other deputies desired to debate the matter, but the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, declined to consent to this, and the Chamber upheld him by 333 to 186 votes. The Premier then read a decree proroguing Parliament for the long vacation, and amid applause from the Leftists and protests from the Right, the House was adjourned.

ARTICLE TEN THROWN OUT.

The Hague Arbitration Committee Modifies Russian Proposals.

The Hague, July 5.—At a meeting yesterday afternoon of the arbitration committee the question whether arbitration should be obligatory or optional was raised, and drew a categorical declaration from the German delegate, to the effect that he had received formal instructions not to accept the principle of obligatory arbitration, otherwise than by special conventions.

In view of this statement article 10 of the Russian proposal was struck out and replaced by a provision, declaring arbitration should be optional except in the case of conventions between the powers.

All the delegates adhered to this, M. Bourgeois, head of the French delegation, declaring he accepted it only as a compromise.

APOSTOLIC DELEGATION.

The Delegate at Ottawa Will Be Archbishop Diomede Falconi of Acerenza and Matera, Italy.

Ottawa, July 5.—The creation of an Apostolic Delegation in Canada, and the appointment of the delegate will in a few days be officially announced.

The delegation was created during the recent visit to Rome of Cardinal Vaughan, Bishop of Westminster, and will be established accordingly at Ottawa. The English Cardinal returned to his own country a fortnight or so since, and upon his departure from Rome the news was allowed to become known to the extensive colony interested in American affairs.

An archbishop has been chosen delegate, and the appointee is a man of considerable experience of American life. He is Monsignor Diomede Falconi, Archbishop of Acerenza and Matera, Italy. He is a Franciscan (order of Friars Minors). He is not young, being close upon sixty years, the first ten of which were spent in the United States. He is an Italian by birth, but his experience has acquainted him thoroughly with western ideas. Monsignor Falconi was called to Rome during Cardinal Vaughan's visit, and the two prelates conferred with the Pope. Upon being requested to accept the Canadian office the Franciscan promptly accepted, and left for his own diocese without delay to bid adieu to his flock, who were strongly bound to him by national ties.

He will return to Rome again and take his final departure for the Dominion about the end of July. Pope Leo, who is said to be greatly interested in the Catholic propaganda in Canada, will personally give the delegate his final instructions.

Monsignor Falconi is reputed to be a man of wide learning and deep theology as well as modern opinions. Upon his arrival in Canada he is likely to spend a month or two in Quebec and Montreal before establishing himself in the Dominion capital.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, July 5.—Receipts of live stock at the Cattle Market here yesterday were fair—60 carloads, all told, composed of 1,000 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 1,900 hogs and 60 calves. The quality of all stall-fed cattle was generally good, while there were a large number of grassers of inferior quality being offered. Trade fair and prices well maintained for all first-class cattle, both butchers' and exporters, but medium to inferior grades were dull and slow of sale. Stall-fed exporters, that have been on grass, being fairly well finished, sold at $4.90 to $5.10 per cwt. The quotations given below are for stall-fed cattle, but it must be remembered that there were a large number of grassers on the market, which sold at 35c to 50c per cwt. less than these quotations, and the market slow at that.

IT'S TOO RISKY

To undergo an operation for itching Piles when Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is a surer, cheaper, easier way to cure.

Cruel, barbarous methods belong to the dark ages of the past. There was a time when a surgical operation was considered the only possible cure for piles. Not so now. Occasionally there is still found a physician who adheres to this dangerous and expensive method, but to every one who still believes in using the knife, ninety and nine recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Dr. C. M. Harlan, writing in The American Journal of Health, said:

"We know that 'Dr. Chase's Ointment' meets all the requisitions of the highest standard of worth, that it will be held in high esteem wherever it is used, and consequently we endorse it to every reader."

By force of merit alone Dr. Chase's Ointment has won its way into this wide, wide world, until it has made the name of Dr. Chase familiar in almost every home, and won for the venerable discoverer the title of "America's Greatest Physician."

Dr. Chase's Ointment has never been known to fail as a cure for piles. It matters not whether blind, itching, bleeding or protruding, Dr. Chase's Ointment is an absolute and perfect cure.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is the discovery of the author of Dr. Chase's Recipe Book, whose portrait and signature is on every box of the genuine. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A CADET CORPS TO BE FORMED

stitute, read the report of the committee as follows:

The special committee to which was referred the question of the establishment of a cadet corps report as follows:—

In accordance with the provisions of section 10 of the High Schools Act, 1896, any High school or Collegiate Institute Board may establish classes in military instruction and shall be entitled to an annual grant of $50, under conditions detailed in above section and regulations as to examination and inspection prescribed by the Education department.

The following are the regulations which contain the condition upon which the grant is to be paid:—

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

1. High school corps may be formed for instructions in military drill and training in the High school or Collegiate institute, but such corps shall on no account be employed in active service.

2. Application for permission to form a company shall be sent to the Minister of Education for transmission to the Minister of Militia and Defence.

3. The following will be supplied to each company free of charge by the Department of Militia on the application through the Minister of Education: Breech loading rifles of the Enfield-Snider or other improved pattern with bayonet complete.

Accountrements consisting of a waist belt with ball bag and bayonet frog.

4. The Board of Education will make itself responsible by a written undertaking for the value of the arms and accoutrements entrusted to it and shall return them in good order to the department of militia when required to do so.

5. The Board of Education shall provide a suitable room, fitted with lock-up arm racks, to be used as an armory, and shall satisfy the department of militia that the arms and accoutrements shall receive proper care.

6. The company shall consist of not fewer than 25 young men, over 16 years of age, actually attending the High School or Collegiate Institute.

7. On or before the first day of October the Board of Education shall send to the Minister of Education for transmission to the department of militia a roll signed by the then existing members of the company. On this roll shall be designated one suitable member of the company as captain and two other suitable members as lieutenants. The Board of Education shall recommend from time to time other suitable persons to fill such vacancies as may occur in the list of officers, and shall maintain a company roll of not less than 25 members.

8. The Board of Education shall see that the members of the company are provided with a uniform, forage cap or other military head dress as may be preferred. If the rest of the uniform is provided it may be composed of a scarlet, blue, grey or rifle green trousers. The uniform or any part thereof shall be subject to the approval of the Minister of Militia. Clothing of any pattern worn by cadets or soldiers in foreign countries will not be approved.

9. The company shall be instructed in the course contained in the section of the authorised infantry drill and rifle exercises detailed in the course of instructions issued by the department. This instruction shall form part of the regular course in the High Schools and Collegiate Institutes and suitable days and hours shall be specified therefor in the regular time table of the schools. Regular attendance and proper discipline shall be enforced by the principal of the school.

10. The Board of Education shall permit the inspection and examination of arms and accoutrements and of the cadet company at any time by an officer who may be detailed for that duty by the Minister of Militia.

QUALIFICATIONS OF INSTRUCTORS.

11. The instructor of each cadet company shall be a regular member of the the High School or Collegiate Institute staff, holding at least a second class B military school certificate or a High School cadet instructor's certificate.

(B) Your committee find on enquiry that a great many schools not only in this province but in other provinces of the Dominion have adopted this system of military instruction and wherever tried good results have followed as the directors of physical training exercise a wholesome influence through this external means. The influence of the course in physical training is clearly seen in the general bearing of the boys and girls. They gain control over their physical system, they develop respect for orderly movements and they find out through physical exercises of different kinds that self control is necessary to skill and power; and these all tend to improve the general school course.

Your committee would therefore recommend that a cadet corps be formed, that the Property Committee be authorized to provide suitable lock-up arm racks, that the chairman of the Board and the secretary be authorised on behalf of the Board to give the necessary undertaking for arms and accoutrements and that the secretary be instructed to make the necessary application to the Minister of Education for permission to form a company.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. HILL,
Chairman.

The report was adopted after a slight discussion, there being no opposition.

It was decided that the schools shall re-open after the vacation on Tuesday, Sept. 5th, in order that there may be no interruption for the Labor Day holiday.

The Board then adjourned.

OUR SPECIAL OTTAWA LETTER

THE YUKON CHARGES, THEIR PRESENTATION AND RESULTS.

Sir Hibbert Tupper Accepted Mr. Sifton's Challenge—The Minister's Reply—Three Government Members Bolted When the Vote Came.

Special Correspondence of the Review.

Ottawa, July 3.—Parliament has been occupied this week with the Yukon scandals. It came about this way. In the debate on the address, when the session began, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper discussed the Government's administration of the Yukon, setting forth the charges made by the Miners' Committee and by others who had lived in or visited the country, including the London Times' correspondent, Miss Flora Shaw. He did not claim to have personal knowledge of these matters, but he gave the statements as common report, and asked that a judicial investigation be held to ascertain whether the facts were as charged. Mr. Sifton, who has charge of the department, replied defending his administration declaring that Mr. Ogilvie, the officer of his department, who had succeeded Major Walsh as commissioner, was holding an investigation that would cover the case. In concluding a somewhat defiant and angry speech, Mr. Sifton challenged Sir Charles to make definite charges on his own responsibility. Mr. Sifton's defiance contained these words:

"I challenge the member for Pictou or any other man in this House to lay upon the table the charges he has to make and declare his ability to substantiate them by evidence, and he will get his investigation, and I will be able to convince the honorable gentleman who makes that charge that discrimination on his part would have been the better part of valor."

The Opposition has frequently been reminded of this challenge, and Sir Charles Hibbert has occasionally been accused of running away from his charges. Meantime Surveyor Ogilvie, Sir Wilfrid's subordinate officer and relative by marriage, was holding his investigation. The first report of Mr. Ogilvie with 260 pages of printed evidence has been recently received. Having examined this report, and decided that the investigation was neither complete or judicial Sir Charles Hibbert, on Tuesday, accepted the challenge of Mr. Sifton and the other Ministers.

THE REPLY.

The charges include the following:

"That the Hon. Cliffird Sifton, Minister of the Interior, has been guilty of scandalous neglect, delay and mismanagement in the administration of his department in the Yukon district.

"That the Government of Canada, appointed on the recommendation of the Hon. Clifford Sifton, certain officials who were incapable, incompetent, inefficient and corrupt, to positions requiring experience, technical knowledge and integrity of character.

"That the Hon. Clifford Sifton, the Minister of Interior, has been guilty of favoritism and partiality in the administration of the laws and regulations applicable to the Yukon.

"That the Hon. Clifford Sifton, gave his express sanction and approval to Mr. Wade, legal advisor for government, holding and becoming financially interested in Dominion lands or mining claims in the said Yukon district, and the said Wade did, with the said Minister's express consent and approval, hold and was financially interested in such property, contrary to law.

"That there has been gross abuses in connection with the liquor permits.

"That Major Walsh, while acting as Chief Executive Officer of the Canadian Government in the Yukon, was guilty of the crime of misbehavior in office.

"That Major Walsh was guilty of acts directly contrary to the design of his office as Chief Executive Officer of the Dominion Government.

"That while chief executive officer, Major Walsh, was guilty of intemperate and immoral acts, which involved him in irregular and improper conduct in the discharge of his duties, and brought contempt upon Canada.

"That the regulations were not regularly enforced, but certain of them were allowed by Major Walsh to be violated.

"That Major Walsh illegally exempted individuals from the law and regulations respecting the payment of royalties.

"That the Gold Commissioner's legal adviser accepted retainers and fees from persons contesting claims before the Commissioner.

"That the Acting Dominion Lands Agent, Clerk of the Court, Crown Prosecutor, has accepted retainers' fees or remuneration to procure grants of Dominion lands and mining claims.

"That officials in the employment of the Canadian Government in the Yukon Territory have been guilty of accepting offers, gifts and promises for their assistance and influence in the procuring of mining claims, contrary to the provisions of the criminal code.

"That officials in the employment of the Government in the Yukon have been guilty of accepting gifts and considerations for assisting or favoring certain individuals in the transaction of business with the Government.

"That officials in the Yukon District have been guilty of fraud and breaches of trust affecting the public.

"That the official record of the Yukon District was kept secret and inspection thereof was not allowed, which practice led to abuses, so that, for instance, after application for a record of a mining claim, if the property were found by or through officials in the mining office to be of value it was staked and recorded in a name other than that of the first applicant, but in a name of some one who represented the interest of an official. It also led to a system known as the 'side door,' whereby officials exacted private fees for official work, and official information, and it was difficult to secure the performance of work during office hours.

"That this 'side door' system prevailed at the post office, and involved abuse and wrong-doing on the part of officials and employees of the Government.

"That bribery among Government officials was rendered nepessary by the inability otherwise to procure them to perform their duties.

"That unfair and fraudulent use has been made by officials of knowledge acquired in the discharge of their duties."

SIR CHARLES HIBBERT'S SPEECH.

These are some of the charges exceeding fifty in all, which were placed in the hands of the speaker in response to Mr. Sifton's invitation. Sir Charles Hibbert asked for the appointment of a commission of Judges to investigate these charges. He devoted the whole of Tuesday's sittings and the afternoon of Wednesday to a review of the evidence taken by Mr. Ogilvie, and to an examination of records and statements relating to Yukon administration. He showed that Mr. Ogilvie had neither the proper training or disposition for holding a court, and that his official and family relations with the Minister of the Interior made it impossible for him to sit as an independent judge to try the department of the Interior. It was also pointed out that Commissioner Ogilvie had not authority to bring witnesses, or even to provide miners with shelter while they were in attendance on the court. As the inquiry was held this spring, and no one was allowed to testify on any matter which occurred later than the previous August the miners who could testify were scattered all over the country. They could not afford to leave their work and such shelter as they had and to walk hundreds of miles to offer testimony to a court that did not seem anxious to find the department guilty. Those who did volunteer to gather in evidence appear to have been treated rather cavalierly by the court.

HE TAKES THE RESPONSIBILITY.

In view of the facts partly shown by the Ogilvie report, and of the necessity of clearing up the good name of Canada, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper offered to take large risks for the sake of procuring a better enquiry. This is part of his formal statement:

"I am prepared, moreover, to place my services gratuitously at the disposal of the Attorney-General for Canada to assist the commission of inquiry in probing this matter to the bottom, whether those services be required at Ottawa, Dawson City, or both.

"In addition to whatever responsibility attaches to the action I have taken in this matter, I am prepared, if the commission is granted on the terms suggested, to abide by the result and to consider that by failure to substantiate the charges made I will have forfeited my right to sit in Parliament or to hold any office in the gift of the Crown."

MR. SIFTON'S REPLY.

The Premier on Tuesday evening insisted that the debate should close the next day. But it was Sir Wilfrid himself who proposed a further adjournment on Wednesday giving Mr. Sifton another day to prepare his reply. It did not take the Minister of the Interior long when he got down to work to let it be known that the judicial investigation would not be granted. The reason for refusal required more time and Mr. Sifton made the rather surprising statement that the charges above quoted, and the other thirty or forty were not of sufficient importance to require such investigation as the member for Pictou required. He boldly declared that there were no accusations against him in all the list which called for an investigation by Judges, or which met his challenge. He made light of some of the charges, contradicted others, ignored altogether a great many, explained certain transactions, denied responsibility for others, and cleverly evaded several allegations.

A SAMPLE.

For instance Sir Charles had intended to charge that a fever epidemic had occurred in Dawson in 1898 in consequence of reckless disregard of sanitary conditions in 1897 and 1898. The typewriter by mistake made it appear that the epidemic had taken place in 1896. Mr. Sifton made a triumphant argument to show that a fever could not have occurred in 1896 in a town that did not then exist, and that it could not in any case have been the Government did two years after the fever broke out. This brought down Mr. Sifton's side of the House. Mr. Sifton closed with another challenge that if Sir Charles Hibbert would make some charges really affecting the honor of the Minister of the Interior he would get his committee in fifteen minutes. He did not explain what kind of charge would meet the bill, but it is supposed that possibly a charge of burglary combined with murder might be sufficient. The minister added that the good name of the country required no vote for the investigation, as the good name of Canada could not suffer while the Liberals were in power.

OTHER SPEAKERS.

The debate was continued until daylight Friday morning by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Louis Davies, Minister of Customs Paterson and the Postmaster General, on the Government side, and by Mr. Foster, Mr. Clarke Wallace, Mr. Powell, Mr. Davin and Mr. McNeill, of the Opposition. The Premier appealed to his supporters to vote down the resolutions, asserting that every member who voted for the Tupper motion thereby affirmed that the charges were every one true. He also appealed to them by declaring his own perfect confidence in Mr. Sifton, and by saying that Mr. Sifton's colleagues "loved him for the enemies he had made."

THE RESULT.

Notwithstanding the appeal of four Ministers the Government was not able to hold all its followers. Three of Sir Wilfrids' supporters voted for Sir Hibbert's motion. It is interesting to note that they all came from the West, and are therefore supposed to be especially under the jurisdiction of the Minister attacked. Mr. Richardson of Manitoba, editor of the Winnipeg Tribune, an old and reliable Liberal journal; Mr. Oliver, of Alberta, editor of the Edmonton Bulletin, and Mr. McInnis, of British Columbia, son of a governor of that province, are the three bolters. The result of this bolt was that Mr Sifton who is supposed to have a majority of seven in the western provinces and territories, would but for his own vote been left without a majority in his own field. His course is thus practically condemned by members from that part of Canada most concerned, from which most of the officials, including Mr. Sifton himself, have come, and which region is most concerned in Mr. Sifton's department, and in Yukon affairs.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hemnick & Co., of Shelby, N.C. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

The Bowmanville baseball team easily defeated the Crescents (Doc Shepherd's team) of Toronto at Orono Saturday for a purse of $40 by this score: Bowmanville, 10 runs, 14 hits, 3 errors; Crescents, 8 runs, 6 hits, 7 errors. Features of the game, Sullivan's work with the sphere and Chambers' home run with two men on bases. Batteries—Bowmanville, Sullivan, Malone and Hamilton; Crescents, Armstrong and Benson.

The Canadian League.

London, July 5.—There was a meeting of the Canadian League magnates at the Tecumseh last night to consider the position of the league as at present constituted, Chatham and St. Thomas having been considered weak spots. As a result the league has finally simmered down to four clubs, viz., London, Woodstock, Hamilton and Guelph, the other two clubs having dropped out. The new league will open at London to-day with the Guelph team as opponents. Woodstock is scheduled to play at Hamilton, but as Hamilton plays an exhibition game with the Toronto Eastern League team, it is likely a double-header will be played between Woodstock and Hamilton on Thursday. The league's schedule will start off with each club marked as having won ten games and lost ten, the idea being to make it more interesting, the percentage of a losing team being small compared with the percentage had they started afresh.

John McKenzie of Bruce Mines Walks Off th Pier Into the Water.

Kincardine, Ont., July 6.—At 3 o'clock yesterday morning John McKenzie, a prosperous farmer, who lived near Bruce Mines, Algoma, fell into the harbor here and was drowned. He was waiting for the steamer Carmona and had fallen asleep. He was awakened when the boat was sighted and walked out over the pier into the harbor basin. It was very dark at the time and efforts were made to rescue him, but without success. The body was recovered at daylight and his relatives at Bruce Mines were communicated with. His little daughter was with him when the accident occurred.

Not the Humber Piggery Man.

Toronto, July 6.—Mr. Isaiah Warner, superintendent of the famous Humber stock farm of the Government, known as the "piggery," states that the finding of his card on the body of a man recovered from the waters at Niagara is not evidence of his death, as some may suppose. Mr. Warner was at the Falls last Wednesday, and while there met a young gentleman from Paris, France, with whom he spent several hours. They took lunch together at the Lafayette and exchanged cards. Mr. Warner has the Frenchman's card at home, and means of identification will thus be provided.

Is He W. L. Beldin?

There were two cards exchanged, Mr. Warner says. One was with a Frenchman, whose card reads "Maurice Corblet, Paris, France," and the other was an Englishman, whose card read: "W. L. Beldin, Hope Exchange Restaurant, London, England." The former left for New York and Mr. Warner thinks Beldin is the man found in Niagara River.

Broke All the Premier's Windows.

Brussels, July 6.—All the windows in the house occupied by the Premier, M. Van Den Peereboom, at Anderlecht, a suburb of this city, were broken by unknown persons last night.

Wm. Boswell Drowned.

Bowmanville, Ont., July 6.—Willie Boswell, son of Thomas Boswell of the Station Hotel, lost his life by drowning last night. He had been missing from home since about 9 o'clock in the morning. Enquiry showed that he had gone out in a canoe about 9 o'clock with Frank Bailey and John Sinclair, two young men of the town. During the afternoon they were sailing about the harbor, and about 6 o'clock a somewhat heavy breeze sprung up, the boat was capsized, and the occupants were thrown into the water. The two young men struggled manfully to save their young companion, but were not successful.

SEMLIN SENDS FOR TUPPER.

Wants Sir Charles Hibbert as Leader of B.C. Government.

Attorney-General Martin Attacks the Premier, and Says Semlin Had Agreed to Step Out When He Decided to Take Premiership Himself—What Mr. Cotton Hopes if Sir C. H. Tupper Does Not Consent to Lead.

Vancouver, B.C., July 6.—The latest developments in the British Columbia Government crisis is that Carter Cotton has egged on the Premier to ask for Joe Martin's resignation, and simultaneously sent for Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper to come to British Columbia as leader. Joe Martin has inspired a long article in his paper, The Vancouver Province, in which it is said that Semlin is only Premier on suffrance, and that that gentleman agreed to step to one side when Mr. Martin decided to take the leadership. If Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper will not lead the Conservatives in the forthcoming elections, which will be precipitated soon without doubt, Mr. Cotton hopes to assume that role himself, when Joe Martin will appeal to the Liberals and the labor party, which he has all along championed.

REV. L. H. JORDAN NAMED.

A Likely Successor to the Late Dr. King in Manitoba College.

Winnipeg, Man., July 6.—President Mellin and Traffic Manager Hannaford of the Northern Pacific have had prolonged interviews with the members of the Provincial Government on matters concerning the Northern Pacific Railway projects in this province. Premier Greenway informed a reporter that negotiations were progressing favorably, but the details could not be given to the public until one or two matters had further consideration. The question under consideration was the construction of the proposed line west of Portage la Prairie. President Mellin was seen subsequently, but he would say nothing further than that the interview was in a manner highly satisfactory.

Rev. L. H. Jordan Named.

Rev. L. H. Jordan, St. James' Square Church, Toronto, is mentioned as the likely principal of Manitoba College.

Will Be a Great Fight.

Hon. Hugh John Macdonald was nominated last night by the Conservatives of South Winnipeg to contest the seat against Provincial Secretary Cameron. Immense enthusiasm was manifested and the mention of Hugh John's name was received with waving of hats and cheers. It will be a great battle.

THE SENATE.

Senator Perley Moved the Six Months' Hoist for Grand Trunk Bill.

Ottawa, July 6.—Yesterday morning the Conservative Senators indulged in the unusual recreation for them of holding a caucus on the Drummond County and Grand Trunk Lease bills. The meeting can scarcely be regarded as having been either harmonious or unanimous, as 16 Senators were in favor of throwing out the Grand Trunk bill and 15 were in favor of passing it with the amendment that the traffic agreement be terminable at any time on one year's notice by the Minister of Railways. As the result of the caucus Senator Perley yesterday moved the six months' hoist to the Grand Trunk bill, and in doing so said that he did it in the interest of cheap transportation. The people in the west wanted cheap freights, but they could not get them unless the C.P.R. got return freights from the east. He pointed to the enormous freight business from the great west, and said it was not fair to make that business suffer by handing over the return west-bound freights to the Grand Trunk and its American connections.

The debate will probably last a couple of days more.

A BRUTAL MURDER.

Mrs. Robert Lane of Brandon, Man., Shot Dead by a Tramp.

Brandon, Man., July 6.—Mrs. Robert Lane, wife of a prominent contractor, was murdered here yesterday afternoon at 4.15 by a tramp. The man called at the door and asked the girl for food. The mistress was called, and when she turned around to instruct the servant to get some food, the man shot her in the back. She died almost instantly. The country is being scoured for the tramp, and if caught he may be lynched by the indignant citizens. The murder was a most cold-blooded one. The man's name is unknown. Up to midnight the murderer had not been caught.

A Doukhobor Wedding in Canada.

Quebec, July 6.—A very interesting sight was witnessed in the afternoon yesterday on the Louise Embankment, when two of the Doukhobors were united in marriage. The ceremony is a most simple one, the services of a clergyman being dispensed with, and the contracting parties merely consenting to be man and wife. The friends of the bride and groom formed a circle around them while the nuptial knot was being tied, after which they were most enthusiastic in their congratulations.

BORDEN THROWS HIS BOMB.

It is to Explode in the House on Friday First.

On That Day He Will Move That the Poll Books of the Brockville and West Huron Elections Be Produced—Wants Them Examined Before the Elections Committee—Debate on The London Times' Criticism of the Government.

Ottawa, July 6.—Yesterday was an eventful day in the House. Besides an interesting debate on The London Times' condemnation of the Government for refusing a judicial investigation of the Yukon charges and the continuation of the debate on the Redistribution bill, Mr. Borden of Halifax threw a bombshell into the Government camp by rising in his place in the House and giving notice that he will to-day move that the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery be ordered to produce, on Friday, the poll books, etc., in the Brockville and West Huron cases, and that he will then move that they be referred to the committee on privileges and elections. In view of the disclosures in the West Elgin and South Ontario local elections, and the fact that the same gang which operated in these constituencies were very much in evidence in Brockville and West Huron, Mr. Borden's motion to open up the last named elections has given the Government "a pain," which not even a liberal dose of pink pills, administered by Mr. Comstock, M.P. for Brockville, can assuage. It is believed that the Government will vote the motion down and burk enquiry as in the Yukon scandals, but after the mass of corruption disclosed in the West Elgin and South Ontario cases and the close affiliation between the shaky Hardy Government and the equally shaky Laurier administration, it is doubtful whether the voting down of Mr. Borden's motion will not do the Government as much harm as a reference of the cases to the committee on privileges and elections.

On the orders of the day being called, Mr. Davin drew the attention of the House to an editorial in The London Times, blaming the Dominion Government for not granting Sir Hibbert Tupper's request for a judicial investigation into the administration of the Yukon, and in order to put himself in order, moved the adjournment of the House.

Premier Doubts the Times.

The Premier admitted the prestige of The London Times, but doubted its competency to pass an opinion on Sir Hibbert Tupper's motion, as the full report of the debate could not have reached The Times office. He said that the charges against the Minister of the Interior had been disproved, and quoted Mr. George of The Klondike Nugget, in defence of Judge Dugas. In conclusion he said that he could only repeat that there was no intention of shielding anyone, and if the Ogilvie investigation proved insufficient, another enquiry would be ordered. Everything would be proved, every delinquent, if there were any, would be punished.

Sir Charles Backs the Charges.

Sir Charles Tupper said the Premier had alluded to the fact that The London Times had been imposed upon by Piggott in the Parnell case, but the Premier had not noted the great difference between Parnell's action and that of the Minister of the Interior. When he was accused, Parnell courted the fullest enquiry, knowing he was innocent, and he had been exonerated. The Government knew the Yukon charges were true, and had burked enquiry, because enquiry would prove the Government guilty. He defended the motives of his son in making the charges.

Landerkin Is Curious.

Dr. Landerkin twitted Sir Charles on being the only Conservative who could be found to defend Sir Hibbert, and said that the Opposition was so ashamed of the Yukon charges that only 20 had voted with Sir Hibbert. He wanted to know where Dr. Sproule and Hon. John Haggart were when the vote was taken.

Dr. Sproule and Mr. Haggart both explained that they had gone home because they did not expect a division would be taken that night. Each said he would have voted for Sir Hibbert's motion.

A FEW QUESTIONS.

In years gone by Liberals were all loyal to the Ontario Government and never for a moment tolerated any doubt of its success in an appeal to the country. But to-day it is a common thing to hear Liberals admit that a change would do good, that the Government will never weather another election, that it is sure of defeat. In this connection the Ottawa Journal, an independent newspaper, which, however, supported the Ontario Government, asks the following pertinent questions:—

Can any thinking person in Ottawa give any reason why the Hardy Government should be retained in power in Ontario if it be a Government which connives at dirty politics?

Any reason, that is, why the Hardy Government should be preferred to some other Government? To a Conservative Government?

Is there any difference as to the tariff? What has a Provincial Government to do with a tariff? And if it had, in what do the Liberal and Conservative leaders differ anywhere now on the tariff?

Has the Liberal Government of Ontario managed finances so brilliantly of late years as to deserve to be kept in power on that account?

Is the License Act so splendidly and effectively administered?

Is the administration of the Education Department so impeccable that it would be folly to try a change?

Has patronage been so honorably administered that the Conservatives would inevitably do worse?

Has the Government shown more sense or courage than any other Government could do to withhold gigantic and absurd railway subsidies or any other old thing from anybody wanting public money or public favors?

Have public supplies been so fairly asked for by tender that Government economy and impartiality have been proved to be better than what anybody else would be likely to show?

Has the Government demanded that public officials maintain a strict impartiality and integrity, more so than new rulers might demand?

Is it possible that a new Government could reap more discredit through the revelation of election trials than the Hardy outfit is doing?

The reader who reads these questions and answers them honorably will have to admit that to be consistent he must vote for a change when the opportunity comes.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The Mail and Empire yesterday gave publicity to a rumor that Hon Mr Hardy intends retiring from the Provincial Premiership to accept appointment on the Supreme Court Bench, and that he will be succeeded by Hon Mr Ross, who will be the head of a re-organized Cabinet. This rumor is not new, and those who should know something about it say that there is a good deal of truth in the rumor. The rumor as it reached Peterborough was to the effect that Mr Hardy and Mr Harcourt were to retire and two new members go in with Hon Mr Ross as Premier.

That all has not been smooth in Government circles since Mr Hardy took the helm is a certainty. The Premier was not as well liked by all his followers as he might have been, but the ability he brought to the Cabinet councils could not be questioned. But there have been ambitious men in provincial politics and they have not received that recognition from Mr Hardy that they felt their talents, as viewed by themselves, entitled them to. Hence have arisen those reports and rumors from time to time of Cabinet changes. But recent events have been crowding the Government. The result of the last general election showed conclusively that the Hardy Administration was not in possession of the confidence of the people. Their majority in the House was wiped out, and, that too, in spite of all that money and "the machine" could do to prevent a fair and free expression of opinion. Then the bye-elections that were won required the most outrageous corruption and fraud to secure a favorable result for the Government. How great this exertion was, how expensive and how corrupt, is best known by the men most interested, and therefore no person knows the weakness of the Government or the certainty of its defeat in another general election better than these men at the head of affairs. Combined with these facts are the series of bungles and mistakes made by the Government in conducting the affairs and framing the legislation of this province. Their blunders have followed one upon the other, and Mr Hardy no doubt has grown weary of the labors that have been his and the lack of perfect harmony among his ambitious following. Mr. Hardy may, therefore, be ready to retire, especially when the disgrace of the West Elgin exposure has to be faced, and the danger that exists of other curtains being pulled aside exhibiting more and more of the rottenness and inefficiency that has accumulated from a too long lease of power. Why Mr Harcourt should retire remains yet to be seen. As provincial treasurer he has been extolled by the Liberals as a financier of marvellous talent, and that any one of equal ability can be found to replace him in the Liberal ranks may justly cause surprise, if one believed all the Liberals have said of him. But, of course, if Mr Hardy and Mr Harcourt go out stronger men should go in. But are they available? As Premier Hon Mr Ross might bring qualities to the position which Mr Hardy does not possess, but it is doubtful if Mr Ross could fill the position to which he aspires. He is not a young man and is not in the best of health, while his administration of the Department of Education is receiving much critical attention at present, and these criticisms have been shown to be well founded. Mr Ross, of course, would continue to be Minister of Education, with probably Mr Gibson as Attorney General. The shift is not likely to prove a great success.

The re-organization does not promise to bring any higher standard, no greater efficiency, no more progressive government, no reform of methods, no annihilation of the "machine system," which is the disgrace of the province. In fact the statesmanship that is above the politician's stamp and which is desperately required in the discredited and disgraced Ontario Government is not in sight. It requires a cleaning out and the entrance of new men, and new men will get no chance with the present ambitious followers of Messrs Hardy and Ross in the field.

However, the people will not give much attention to shifting or re-organization in the Government, for it is generally recognized that their race has been run and has terminated in disgrace. The men who get away from the wrecked and sinking hulk will only show by their conduct the truth of all that has been charged and will acknowledge their recognition of the inability of the "machine" system to weather another general election gale. If the prospects were hopeful neither Mr Hardy or Mr Harcourt would go.

Sifton's Complaint.

Hon. Mr. Sifton complained that the tone of the speeches in the House and the articles in the Opposition press seemed to insinuate that there were some personal charges against him. He had challenged Sir Hibbert Tupper to make a personal charge, and had promised that if one was made it would be referred to the committee on privileges and elections within 15 minutes. He repeated that challenge now. He claimed that he had proved the falsity of Sir Hibbert Tupper's charges, and sneered at the idea of The London Times dictating a policy for the Government of Canada.

The motion to adjourn was withdrawn.

It Depends on His Politics

Mr. Bennett called attention to the dismissal of the postmaster at Humberstone, Welland County, for the alleged reason that he kept a general store, and asked whether another postmaster who also kept a store was to be dismissed also.

The Postmaster-General said no general instructions have been issued. Each case would be disposed of on its merits.

Mr. Borden's Bomb.

Mr. Borden (Halifax) gave notice that he will move to-morrow (Thursday) that the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery be instructed to appear at the opening of the House on the following day with the poll books, voters' lists, etc., of the last elections in Brockville and West Huron, and that he will then move that they be referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

The Redistribution Bill.

The debate on the redistribution bill was then resumed by Mr. McNeill, one of the Conservatives who is "gerrymandered" by the bill, and who naturally criticized the bill and contended that the redistribution of North Bruce in 1889 was fair and equitable.

Dr. Macdonald attacked the redistribution bill of 1892 and claimed that county boundaries should be adhered to.

Mr. Bennett ridiculed the claim of the Government that the redistribution bill was a redemption of a pre-election pledge. He said the country was laughing at the failure of the Government to implement any of its pledges. So far from redeeming any of their anti-election promises, the Liberal Governments would not even redeem some of the postage stamps. (Laughter and applause.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Delegates in Thousands in Detroit and More Coming.

Rev. Dr. Clark, the President, Reports Remarkable Prosperity for the Past Year—The Society Had Held Its Own Even in Spain, and Had Entered Russia—The Financial Report Shows Money in the Treasury.

Detroit, July 6.—Skies which gave promise of probable showers greeted the loads of Christian Endeavor delegates who flocked into the city from every direction yesterday, but for a July day the atmosphere was reasonably cool.

The President's Address.

The annual business convention convened shortly after noon. The president, Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, in his annual address, said: "The past year of Christian Endeavor work has been a year of remarkable prosperity, a year signally marked by the favor of God. Christian Endeavor has now so largely occupied the field that the phenomenal growth recorded in the early years of the movement cannot be exceeded. Nevertheless, the growth has been very considerable, and the accession of a hundred thousand to our ranks within the last 12 months is no small addition.

"I recently made a journey to the West Indies, which was full of encouragement and hope. I found in the Island of Jamaica very deep and intelligent interest in the movement. In Cuba, too, I found the beginnings of Christian Endeavor, and a very hopeful spirit and outlook for the future. In other lands Christian Endeavor seems to be obtaining constantly a firmer foothold. Our British fellow-Endeavorers are looking forward with great anticipation to next year's exodus to London.

"In Germany and France and Scandinavia the work has had considerable advance.

"In Spain, in spite of the distraction of the war and the natural antipathy to things American, the societies have all held their own, and have even increased in number. Russia, which a year ago was the only country without Christian Endeavor, has now been invaded by the movement, and we hear of our society almost within the Czar's household.

"Our efforts in behalf of universal peace and international arbitration have been a great success. It has received the hearty approval of many of the greatest men in Europe, as well as in America, and it has called forth on two or three occasions telegrams and letters of approbation and gratitude from the American Peace Commissioners at The Hague.

"The spirit of brotherhood, of national and inter-denominational fellowship, of seeking after good, and not the things that pertain to office and station, will, I believe, characterize this eighteenth national convention, and I pray God that His spirit may pervade every future gathering of Christian Endeavorers, and the whole movement in all its phases and forms of work the world over."

The Financial Statement.

Treasurer Shaw's report showed expenditures during the fiscal year of $9,678, and $359 now in the treasury.

The report of George B. Graff of Boston, agent of the publishing department, under whose direction The Christian Endeavor World is published, showed cash on hand at the beginning of the fiscal year, June 1, 1898, $1,110; receipts during the year, $67,936, expenditures, $66,628; cash on hand, $2,489. The western office of the publishing department, located at Chicago, reported expenditure of $12,563, and $664 now in its treasury.

After the election of trustees, the present officers of the united society were unanimously re-elected, upon recommendation of the nominating committee, as follows: President, Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark; secretary, John Willis Baer; treasurer, William Shaw, all of Boston.

MAY WORK HIS DOWNFALL.

How the Permanent Apostolic Delegation May Affect Sir Wilfrid's Fortunes.

Montreal, July 6.—There can be no doubt that the appointment of Mgr. Falconi, papal delegate to Canada, is a direct slap in the face to the Canadian Episcopacy and will be deeply resented. It is a victory, however, for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick and Mr. Charles Russell, who have secured the appointment in the face of the earnest protests of at least every French-Canadian bishop save one in the Dominion. As stated before, a leading French prelate advised every Liberal member of Parliament he could see not to sign such a petition to the Pope.

For the first time in the history of the Confederation a permanent apostolic delegate will be installed at Ottawa, and a leading Roman Catholic put the matter in a nutshell yesterday when he said: "The Vatican has refused to listen to the words of warning uttered by our bishops, preferring instead to accede to the request of Ottawa politicians and trickmers. I predict," he concluded, "that this delegate will be one of the causes of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's early downfall."

Lady Aberdeen Vice-President.

London, July 6.—The election of officers of the International Council of Women took place yesterday, and, in accordance with the nominations, Mrs. May Wright Sewall of Indianapolis has been elected president and Lady Aberdeen vice-president.

The Strike Abandoned.

Pittsburg, July 6.—The proposed strike at the Homestead plant of the Carnegie Steel Company has been abandoned. At a meeting of the local lodge at Homestead last night it was decided that the present is an inopportune time to strike. The work of strengthening the organization will be continued.

DESOLATION.

Frightful Damage in the Flooded Texas District — Area Affected 500x50 Miles—Many Lives Lost.

Houston, Texas, July 6.—A correspondent who has just returned from a voyage through the flooded district says:

The half has not been told of the havoc wrought. The disaster is so appalling that description is not possible. After this flood will come sickness undoubtedly, and what a week ago was the fairest part of Texas is now almost a God-forsaken wilderness. The waters of the Brazos have for six days covered its valley to a depth of from six to thirty feet. Where a week ago there were on every hand fields of cotton and corn, and thousands of acres of watermelons and canteloups, to-day there is slimy mud over all the vegetation.

The Flooded District.

Everything is under water from two to seventeen feet. I saw hundreds of houses totally submerged, and as many more were swept from their foundations and destroyed.

The flooded district has a length of over 500 miles, and a breadth of probably 50 miles.

Estimate of the Loss.

The loss of life will never be known perhaps, the bottoms having been populated mostly with negro tenant farmers. To show the damage done the following estimates have been made by men who are in a position to know: Lives lost, from 100 to 300; loss to farmers, including crops and live stock, from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000; damage to railroads and country bridges, $2,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Eight Hundred Lives in Danger.

Dallas, Texas, July 6.—Deputy Sheriff Swearingen of Austin County made the following statement over the long-distance telephone at Sealey yesterday: "Relief has not reached the flood victims in this section. Thirteen dead bodies have been recovered near the town of Brookshire, 13 miles from here. Forty-five persons above Sealey are reported missing and given up for dead. Seven were drowned to-day in a boat seven miles below Sealey. About 400 persons are isolated on a small piece of land in the Brazos bottom, three miles from Brookshire. Several hundred more are similarly surrounded at San Phillips, three miles from Sealey. Unless relief can soon reach these two places, the 800 lives will probably be lost. Many will die, as it is, from hunger, exposure and exhaustion. The water to-day is running through the town of Brookshire, something never known before.

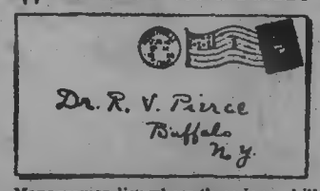
Sixty-Five Lives Lost.

"The 65 lives reported lost here to-day were in a radius of 20 miles and north of Sealey. We are completely isolated at Sealey, but this town is not in danger. Cannot estimate the situation beyond the limits I mention. The whole face of the country here is a sea. The channel of the Brazos River has shifted about three miles, and the water here is 15 miles wide. Logs, houses, lumber and railroad material, merchandise, live stock and other floating objects made it worth the life of rescuers to go to the relief of the endangered people, most of whom are negroes. The railroads are destroyed for miles. An immense washout occurred on the Santa Fe, south of Sealey, this morning. This cuts off our last strand of railroad communication. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas, the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe, and the Southern Pacific are all completely stopped. The weather is cloudy here this afternoon, and more rain is feared."

Women's Council Closed.

London, July 6.—The sessions of the International Council of Women terminated yesterday morning at the Countess of Aberdeen's residence at Watford, where there was a very large gathering of delegates. The latter briefly addressed the Countess, who afterwards entertained the delegates at luncheon.

WRITE A LETTER.



Many women live where there is no skillful specialist in women's diseases, and still more cannot afford to pay the high fees charged. These sufferers should follow the example of Mrs. Anna Willy, of Northville, Spink Co., S. Dak., who writes as follows to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.:

"I am enjoying good health, thanks to your kind advice and valuable remedies. I suffered very much with female ailments for more than two years, when I wrote to you for advice. After carefully following your free advice, and taking six bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I am now a well and happy woman. I have also taken several vials of your 'Pleasant Pellets,' which did me a great deal of good."

Dr. Pierce has probably treated and cured more cases of female weakness, pains in the back, side and abdomen, nervousness, headache, irregularities, ulcerations, tumors and other female troubles, than any other living physician. His wide experience peculiarly fits him to bring about cures when every one else fails. He charges no fee whatever to those who write him for advice, and he invites all to consult him free by mail. His wonderful remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, can be depended upon to overcome nearly every kind of disease that afflicts girls and women. It contains no alcohol, opium, or other narcotics, and does not create craving for injurious stimulants, as is so often the case with other medicines advertised for woman's ailments.

An honest medicine dealer will give you Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and not try to persuade you to take some inferior substitute for the little added profit he may make thereon.

Those who wish may enclose 21 one-cent stamps in their letters, and Dr. Pierce will post free his 1008-page Common Sense Medical Adviser, which is the most complete and practical family doctor book ever published. This includes customs. The same book, cloth-bound, 50 stamps.

LOST—TWO YEARS!

"Yes, sir," said the stock-broker, "I have ceased to mourn the fact that I lost two years of my life."

"How do you make that out?" asked his friend, the insurance man.

"I lived upon milk for two years," said the stock-broker solemnly.

"That's certainly longer than most," returned the insurance man. "I was weaned at six months."

"I mean since I reached manhood's estate," said the broker.

"How was that," asked his friend.

"Doctor's orders," said the broker. "I used to be sort of a self-indulgent fellow in the way of vituals."

"I like a good dinner myself," interrupted the insurance man.

"Yes, well I used to eat everything that came along if it was nice, and I played my stomach out. By and by I found I had dyspepsia and I straightway became a dyspepsia crank."

"I've heard of 'em," remarked the insurance man.

"Well, I was one," said the broker. "I started in to cure myself. Well, sir, if I was to tell you all I took and all I did to get rid of that fiendish disease I would keep you here all night. It was after I had tried about everything, I struck the great milk cure."

"That was where you lost the two years," said the insurance man.

"Yes, I ate nothing for two years. I drank milk till I hated the sight of it."

"Did it cure you?" asked the insurance man.

"It did not," said the broker. "And the worst of it was I found after two years of it I might have been eating good honest beefsteak all the time—yes, or quail-on-toast for that matter."

"How was that?"

"If I'd only known it, a Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal would have digested my food for me, rested my stomach, and cured the Dyspepsia inside a month or so. You can get them at any drug store for fifty cents a box, too."

"That's where ignorance wasn't bliss," said the insurance man.

"It's wise to be wise in regard to Dyspepsia and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," said the broker.

The smallest quadruped in the world is the pygmy mouse of Siberia.

The horse has a smaller stomach proportionately than any other animal, because the horse was created for speed. Had he the ruminating stomach of the ox he would be quite unfitted for the labor which he now so admirably performs.

Russell House in Darkness.

Ottawa, July 6.—A report has been received here that Deschenes electric light power-house has been burned down. It is situated seven miles up Ottawa River. It supplies Aylmer and Hull Railway Company with power. The Russell House here is lighted from there, and in a moment all was darkness at the hotel.

Stabbed Himself.

Ottawa, July 6.—Henri Martin, the 18-year-old son of Telesphore Martin, grocer of Hull, attempted suicide last night by stabbing himself above the heart with an ordinary knife. The father of the boy was within four feet of him when the deed was committed.

The Electric Light

Is a matter of small importance compared with other applications of electricity. By this agency Polson's Nerviline is made to penetrate to the most remote nerve—every bone, muscle and ligament is made to feel its beneficient power. Nerviline, pleasant to take, even by the youngest child, yet so powerfully far reaching in its work that the most agonizing internal pain yields as if by magic. Nerviline relieves neuralgia instantly and for the speedy cure of nerve pains of every description it has no equal. Sold everywhere.

Ladies, a Joyful News!

It is not very often that the ladies of Peterborough have an opportunity of having among them Prof. Doreuwend, of Toronto, the world-known hair goods artist, whose skill in the manufacture of both ladies' and gent's wigs, toupees, wavey bang fronts, switches, etc., is second to none. He will be at the Snowdon house, Peterborough, on Saturday, July 8th, with a full sample line of hair goods styles.

ORIGIN OF NIAGARA.

HOW THE GREAT FALLS OF TODAY CAME INTO EXISTENCE.

From the Breaking Up of a Colossal Ice Gorge During the Glacial Period the Irresistible Flow of the Mighty Cataract Was Formed.

Professor Herman Leroy Fairchild of Rochester university has brought to light some strange and romantic geological facts regarding Niagara's formation in prehistoric days that are worthy of attention. He said:

"The ancient ancestors of Niagara were hundreds of miles from the present location. These extinct rivers have left remarkable gorges across the ridges separating the north and south valleys of Skaneateles, Otisco, Onondaga, Butternut and Limestone, and they lie along a line joining the villages of Marcellus, South Onondaga, Jamesville, High Bridge and Mycenae. To trace Niagara's ancestry back to the time when it is possible to discover any trace of the course of the original waters it is necessary to go back to the glacial period. The last great invasion of ice buried all of New England, all of New York state except a small area near Salamanca, all of the basins of the great lakes and the Mississippi valley as far south as nearly to the mouth of the Ohio river.

"This ice body, some thousands of feet in thickness, uncovered the land it had invaded not by general melting of its surface, but by the slow recession of its frontage. The summer floods from the rainfall and the ice melting carried immense quantities of gravel down the south leading valleys and filled them deeply with the detritus. When the ice front retreated to the north side of the divide separating today the northward drainage of the St. Lawrence from the southward drainage of the Mississippi and Susquehanna, the waters were impounded between the ice front and the north sloping land surfaces.

"The glacier occupied the Laurentian basin and its present low northward and eastward passes, and consequently all the waters were forced across the divide to the southward. When the west end of the Superior basin was uncovered, it held a glacial lake, which we now call Lake Duluth. In the same way a local glacial lake was formed in the southern end of the Michigan basin, known today as Lake Chicago, and in the western end of Erie basin, called now Lake Maumee. The lowest of the three outlets of these lakes was that of Lake Chicago, which formed the channel now utilized by the Chicago drainage canal. Eventually, by the continued recession of the ice front, land was uncovered either side of the Michigan valley, lower than the St. Croix outlet of Lake Duluth or the Fort Wayne outlet of Lake Maumee, and the Chicago outlet robbed the two higher outlets.

"The high glacial waters in the Erie basin were finally extended north and east by the continued recession of the ice dam until they covered all of the Erie basin, the lower Huron basin and the southwestern part of the Ontario basin. These waters are now called Lake Warren. At this time the ice front lay against the high ground southward from Syracuse and therefore blocked the low pass by the Mohawk valley, which was lower in altitude than the Chicago outlet of Lake Warren waters.

"As the ice front weakened and receded in the Syracuse region, the Warren waters, which formed in New York a belt of several miles' width along the ice border and reached southward up the valleys of the present "finger" lakes, crept eastward at their proper level.

"One summer day the critical moment came, and the high water found escape eastward past the ice to the open Mohawk Hudson. At first this may have been an insignificant spilling, but the flow increased, and with the down cutting of the waste weir an irresistible flow was established. The first spillway I cannot precisely locate, but it is certainly one of two east and west gorges in rock, one being two miles east of Jamesville, the other two miles southwest.

"With the farther retreat of the ice front other lower canyons were cut, and a series of great rock cuts were made leading across the ridges that separated the north and south valleys in which the glacial waters were ponded at their successive levels. The most western of the canyons heads on the Onondaga limestone, about four miles north by east of Skaneateles and conveyed the flood of hypo-Warren waters eastward to the Otisco valley, building a huge delta south of Marcellus village.

"From this valley the waters escaped to the Onondaga valley by another splendid canyon east of Marcellus, with an enormous delta at South Onondaga village. From the Onondaga valley three fine canyons led east to the Butternut valley near Jamesville. The lowest and finest of these is the great rock cut utilized by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad in passing from Syracuse over to Jamesville. East from Jamesville are three cuts leading east to the limestone valley at High Bridge, and three more lead on northeast to lower ground at Iroquois level.

"At least three of the canyons are headed by similar cataracts to Niagara. One fine cataract is at the head of the middle one of the three gorges at Jamesville, with Green (Jamesville) lake filling the basin in the amphitheater. Another cataract is northeast of Jamesville 1¼ miles, and a fine one is located two miles southwest of Mycenae. In the latter the pool at the foot of the cararact has been filled.

"Other and subsequent channels are found northward—one at Camillus and one passing through the center of Syracuse. The altitudes of these channels correlate perfectly and show a descending flow eastward in each series. The upper ones have an elevation much above Chicago, because all the land of the Laurentian era has suffered, since the ice removal, an unequal uplifting that has given the old water planes a northward rise, amounting in the Syracuse region to 300 feet differential as compared with Chicago.

"These predecessors of Niagara were not outlets of Lake Warren, for that lake poured its surplus waters to the Mississippi. They were slowly falling waters, which reached a long permanent stage in the glacial Lake Iroquois when the lowest pass to the Mohawk, at Rome, N. Y., was opened. We may call the waters with the eastward leading canyons hyper-Iroquois. One long permanent stage having its outlet by the channel east of Marcellus has left fine beaches along the Seneca valley and has been named Lake Dana.

"The present waters of Niagara probably began their flow when the railroad channel southeast of Syracuse became effective. The channels, having a present elevation under about 600 feet above tide, were only a low fall at Lewiston."—Philadelphia Times.

A LADY OF TENDER AGE.

Ladies, where are your bright eyes glancing?
Where were they glancing yesternight?
Saw ye Imogen dancing, dancing—
Imogen dancing all in white?
Laughed she not with a pure delight,
Laughed she not with a joy serene?
Stepped she not with a grace entrancing,
Slenderly girt in silken sheen?

All through the night from dusk to daytime
Under her feet the hours were swift.
Under her feet the hours of playtime
Rose and fell with a rhythmic lift.
Music set her adrift, adrift;
Music, eddying toward the day,
Swept her along as brooks in Maytime
Carry the freshly falling May.

Ladies, life is a changing measure,
Youth is a lilt that endeth soon.
Pluck ye never so fast at pleasure,
Twilight follows the longest noon.
Nay, but here is a lasting boon—
Life for hearts that are old and chill,
Youth undying for hearts that treasure
Imogen dancing—dancing still!
—"The Island Race," by Henry Newbolt.

TRY A JOGGLING BOARD.

It Will Divert, Rest, Recuperate, Soothe and Sweeten You.

How many Massachusetts folks know what a joggling board is? Not one in a hundred probably.

You needn't look in the dictionary or the encyclopedia, for you won't find it there.

How many South Carolinians know? Ninety-nine in a hundred, for South Carolina is the home of the joggling board.

Whether the south is its birthplace or it was carried captive there from some foreign shore no one knows. One thing is sure. It is there, has been there a long time and is likely to remain as long as children romp and play and older people work and worry and rest.

The joggling board is unique. It suggests the hammock, the rocking chair, the cradle, and yet is utterly unlike all of them—in fact, is unlike any other human contrivance calculated to divert the mind, rest and recuperate the body, soothe the restless spirit, encourage sociability and sweeten solitude. All these the joggling board does quietly, but effectively.

A joggling board is a very simple thing, as are many others of the world's great inventions—only a plank 20 feet long, 10 inches wide and 2 inches thick, with the ends resting on movable supports 23 inches high.

Do you smile? That is because you have never joggled. Could you seat yourself in Aiken, for example, on the center of any one of the numberless joggling boards that are to be found all about this little city, and thus seated under the spreading boughs of some ancient oak or pine, with the mocking bird singing over your head and the violets blossoming at your feet—should you, thus seated, gently joggle yourself, by a slight muscular motion, you would experience a novel and delightful sensation, only comparable to that one feels as he gently rises and falls in some boat on some wave tossed summer sea.

Not only does the joggling board thus irradiate and sweeten solitude; it also enhances the joys of companionship. Seated with a congenial spirit, side by side, equidistant from the extremities of the joggling board, two souls unconsciously merge into one. The intellect is quickened, the heart is warmed, the tongue is loosened.

Unlike the hammock or the swing, the joggling board is not limited in its capabilities to one or two persons. It can receive a whole family. Twenty lineal feet of plank can accommodate a good many people, especially if they be on friendly terms.

Joggling thus by wholesale has cemented the bonds of kinship more firmly than aught else could have done—smoothed the wrinkles of age and kindled the heart of youth.

Order a joggling board and be happy.—Boston Globe.

A Dog and Cactus Fight.

A Portland citizen recently acquired a beautiful cactus, which he established in his household, unmindful of the fact that his dog held the opinion that his master should have no other pets before him. Now he has no cactus and the dejected semblance of a dog. The little animal espied the plant shortly after its arrival and issued a challenge. In default of acceptance he gave battle, but retired at the first shock to reconsider. The enemy had more teeth than a battalion of bull terriers, and all of them were newly sharpened.

He was no quitter, however, and, with rising anger, he renewed the attack. This time his opponent came down, landing on him heavily and with the touch of a barbed wire fence. The two rolled over and over in a death embrace, and the cactus was finally vanquished, torn into shreds and scattered about the room. But it was a costly victory. The conqueror was punctured in more places than his owner can count. He may live to fight another day, but it will not be with a cactus.—Portland Oregonian.

The Cuban Dance.

The Cuban dance is a peculiar one when viewed through American eyes, for it is so totally different from any of our dances. There is only the one step, and that one is a sort of mixture of Indian, Turkish and Chinese. The couple rarely use more than three or four square feet of space and dance continually, with little short intermissions of possibly 15 seconds, during which they merely stand in their places and rest.

Two orchestras play continually, one taking up the music as the other ceases. The music is almost identical with some that I have heard at the dances of our Indian tribes in Arizona and New Mexico, except that there is the continual blare of a cornet. They use tomtoms, kettledrums and some weird, gourdlike affair that they beat most vigorously, emitting a sound quite as musical as a boy would make with a barrel stave as he ran along a picket fence.—Leslie's Weekly.

Strange Chinese Custom.

Of all the strange Chinese customs in the matter of currency that reported by our consul at Hongkong of employing blocks of silver is most unique. The silver is cast in the form of the "sycee," or shoe, and on it is marked the quality. In making purchases a piece is cut off and sold to the local bank for its equivalent in copper "cash." Of this cash it takes 1,800 to equal a dollar, and, as almost all transactions are expressed in cash, you can get an idea of the scale of Chinese expenditures.

A man doing light work needs about 17 ounces of food per day; doing hard work, 30 ounces. For very hard physical labor 45 ounces are necessary.

Troops for South Africa.

London, July 6.—The Pall Mall Gazette yesterday afternoon said the Secretary of War, the Marquis of Lansdowne, in conjunction with the military chiefs, has completed arrangements to dispatch 40,000 to 50,000 troops of all arms to South Africa in the event of matters taking a turn for the worse. It is added that all the necessary arrangements have been made there for the distribution of the troops on their arrival.

MARK-ST S. S. PICNIC.

Good Crowd and Pleasant Time at Their Picnic at Gore's Landing.

On Tuesday, July 4, the Mark-st. Sunday school picnic went by the steamer "North Star" to Gore's Landing, where a very pleasant day was spent. About 125 boarded the steamer and after an enjoyable sail the Landing was reached and dinner was taken. After dinner some went on the steamer to Harwood, while others remained to stroll around and enjoy the cool breezes. Shortly after four o'clock the return journey was begun, and the Peterborough wharf was reached by nine. All present seemed to have a very enjoyable outing, as nothing occurred to mar the day's pleasure.

A QUIET WEDDING.

A Toronto Barrister Married to a Peterborough Young Lady.

A quiet and unostentatious event took place last evening at the residence of Mr John Donnelly, 313 Bethune-st., when his sister-in-law, Miss Margaret S. McDonald, daughter of the late Mr. Duncan McDonald, of town, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Urquhart, one of the well known firm of Urquhart & Urquhart, barristers, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev Mr Bastow, of the Murray-st. Baptist church, and was witnessed only by the immediate relatives of the bride residing in town. The happy couple left on the 9 o'clock G T R train for the west, carrying with them the heartiest congratulations of their numerous friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart will take up their residence in the city after a short honeymoon trip.

CIVIC MATTERS.

Pavements and Streets Discussed by the Aldermen.

No Council meeting was held last evening, the Aldermen spending the time in committee. Pavements, sewers and street work furnished the principal topic for discussion.

It was decided to accept 90 cents a foot for the sewer on Hunter-st. west, as the property owners understood they were only to pay contract price, 79½ cents. The engineer's fees were added, making up the 90 cents.

It was also decided to place the construction of the pavement on Hunter-st. between Park and Belmont-ave. under way at once by day work, with Mr Geo Rose in charge. This work will be a kind of experiment as to the work and the cost that will be realized on this day work.

Mr G W Ranney was appointed inspector for the town on the Sheehy pavement contract.

The other contracts will be placed under tender at once.

Street work was discussed and it was decided to go on with repairs on the principal thoroughfares at once. It is possible that a block of macadam street, properly constructed, may be laid to show what can be done with the stone crusher's material and the steam roller.

The matter of one or two manufactories that are looking for sites was up and talked over, and steps will be taken to introduce these to Peterborough's claims.

THE CASE ADJOURNED.

Hearing of the Kellogg Assault Case at Havelock.

County Magistrate Edmison at Havelock yesterday commenced the hearing of the evidence in the charge against Wm. Chambers, John Daly and John Jackson, of assault with intent in the case of Mary Kellogg and of assault in the case of Walter Kellogg.

Evidence was taken until ten o'clock at night and there being more to follow the hearing was adjourned for a week. County Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution, and Mr. G. J. Sherry, of Norwood, defended the accused.

The chief witnesses for the prosecution were the Kelloggs. They told their story mainly in the same form as when they related it in town last week. They were examined separately, however, neither being allowed to hear the evidence of the other, and there were some discrepancies. They were cross-examined at great length by Mr. Sherry and their story was weakened considerably.

The chief other witnesses for the prosecution was G. H. Lang, night yardman for the C.P.R. He told of hearing the woman scream and going down he found Chambers and Daly between two cars, apparently hiding, while Jackson was standing with the Kelloggs. This was about 1.20 a.m.

For the defence Jesse Cole told how the Kelloggs had slept in his barn the night in question after the affair leading to the trial. Al couple of hotelkeepers swore that both the Kelloggs got whiskey at their houses, perhaps six or seven in all. A man named Company swore that he had been with the accused men that night and that they went home about 12.30, but as they passed near the C.P.R. icehouse they heard a woman screaming.

The evidence taken was very contradictory. It was shown, however, that the Kellogg's had tramped all the way from Smith's Falls by road, that they had been drinking, and that the fracas had taken place as late as 1 o'clock a.m.

The hearing will be resumed next Wednesday.

Bargains in Children's Bonnets at MRS. APPLEBY'S, 426 Water-st.

St. John's Sunday School Picnic.

The St. John's annual excursion will leave to-morrow (Friday) morning at 8.30 sharp. Jubilee Point is the objective point, but it is understood that the boat will cross Rice lake to Gore's Landing after dinner for the benefit of any one who may wish to remain on board. The excursion will not from all appearances be a crowded one by any means and a day's enjoyment may be expected by those who go. Parents or other guardians are expected to accompany Sunday school scholars. There will be no general table, each family being left to bring their own provisions, but hot water, etc., will be provided.

HARDY DENIES IT.

Gives the Report that He Will Retire a Flat Denial.

(Toronto Globe.)

A reporter of the Globe called upon Premier Hardy yesterday morning and asked him whether he had seen the statement in the Mail and Empire as to his intention to resign and go on the bench, and whether there was any truth in the article. The Premier replied:—"As you know, the Mail is not my organ, and if I had any such intentions it would hardly be likely to be the first paper to receive notice of them. I gave a flat contradiction a few months ago to a similar article. I am not in search of a judicial office. The whole article is an invention, pure and simple."

BELMONT IRON MINE

Analysis Show the Ore to be Above Ordinary Bessemer Quality.

The last issue of the Canadian Mining Gazette (Toronto) referring to the Belmont iron mine says:—"Development work has been steadily going on at this time and 100 tons of ore have been shipped to Glasgow as an experiment, besides a few car loads to local furnaces. An order was lately received for 20,000 tons by cable from Germany, and as the ore is of special high grade quality, as soon as the St. Lawrence canals are enlarged, if the high prices of ore continue, the Belmont ore may be profitably shipped to Europe. The quality can be judged by the following analyses made of ore recently mined:—Samples from "Nichol Pit" alongside of the railway track, analysis made by the Crane Iron Works, Pennsylvania, metallic iron, 65.00 per cent. phosphorus, 0.015 per cent.; sulphur, 0.10 per cent. Other samples from "Nichol Pit" analyzed by W. J. Rattle, showed metallic iron, 64.88 per cent. phosphorus, 0.003 per cent.; sulphur, none; silica, 5.11 per cent. Other samples from the new pit back of the blacksmith's shop, 300 feet north of the "Nichol Pit," analyzed by H. C. Mabee, chemist of the Deseronto Iron Co., showed metallic iron, 66.82 per cent.; phosphorus, 0.015 per cent.; silica, 4.82 per cent.; sulphur, 0.051 per cent.; copper none; titanium, none. These analyses show the ore to be much above the ordinary Bessemer quality, and therefore suited to make special high class steel."

A PLEASANT OUTING.

Annual Excursion of the Charlotte-st. Sunday School.

The excusion run under the auspices of the Charlotte-st. Sunday school to Idyl Wyld yesterday was a great success. There was a crowd of about four hundred people on board the steamer, the City of Peterborough. The boat left the wharf about 8 o'clock and reached Idyl Wyld at 12.15. Dinner was enjoyed at the beautiful island and owing to the heat of the day and the short time the party had to stay no programme of sports or races was held. At 3 o'clock the boat returned to Jubilee Point and a stay was made here until 5, tea being had before leaving. The day was a perfect one for sailing and the trip was much enjoyed. Owing to the large attendance the committee was able to furnish free tickets to all the scholars of the school except the Bible classes.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Lacrosse.

The members of the lacrosse team are working hard in preparation for their match with the Excelsiors of Brampton here next Wednesday. They expect to be able to turn the visitors down. There was a good turnout at the practice last night.

Baseball.

The baseball team will leave for Lindsay on the 8 05 train to-morrow morning. They have been keeping in practice and expect a victory in the neighbor town.

The Cuban Giants, of New York, colored champions of the world, played baseball in Bowmanville to-day against the Bowmanville team.

Football.

The Norwood football team is after the Riversides, of Toronto, as the following, from the Globe, shows:—

Norwood, July 3.—I hereby wish to correct several misrepresentations made by the report of the Riversides re the match for the championship of Canada, played in Campbellford on July 1, between the Norwood Football Club, champions of the east, and the Riversides of Toronto, who defeated the champions of the west. Now, in the first pace, Norwood admits that they had the sun on the backs and also kicking with a light wind in the first half, which they consider was a great disadvantage to them rather than in their favor, as it spoiled their close combination in not being able to hold the ball down, but even with this they showered shot after shot on the Riversides' goal, and it was owing to Hatt's brilliant playing in goal that the score was not larger against the Riversides. The first goal was scored by Norwood in 18 minutes by a pass from left wing, the goalkeeper being in the centre of the goal sticks and not out in the feild looking up the ball. It was easily seen that the goal umpire was a Toronto man and thought he could bluff the Norwood team, but it did not work. All the spectators, even Toronto, said it was a clean, fair goal, and certainly it was, but the Riversides could hardly realize that they were up against it, but prayed for half-time and wind. In the first half the Norwood goalkeeper had only one shot on goal and two goal-kicks, which will show which way the ball was travelling. After half-time the Riversides thought they had it in their mit kicking with the long-looked-for wind, but, like somethnig resembling lightning, they saw the ball going back against the wind to their goal, being carried by five little fellows with a combination that they could only break up by tripping just as they were going to shoot on goal, and even as it was they shot repeatedly on their goal. This does not look as if the Norwood team played a defence game, and I distinctly say they did not nor never did, but it was the other way. Norwood certainly had to play against a good team and also the referee, whom, we understand, was picked out by the Torontos for a purpose, and to prove he favored the Riversides there should have been three penalty kicks for Brooks tripping Devitt in centre and Hendren on wing in front of goal, but these he would not give. Norwood played a good gentlemanly game, as there never was a foul or trip called against them during the game, and on the other hand there were five fouls called against the Riversides. The score stood 1 to 1 when the referee called time, but the timekeepers say they played 12 minutes over time. The Riversides scored their goal within eight minutes of time after one of Norwood's best players was laid off, having his knee put out of joint, and if time had been right the score should have been 1-0. We hereby challenge the Riversides to play for the championship of Canada on any good grounds east of Toronto, or we will pay all expenses to play off in Norwood. Signed, on behalf of Norwood team, M. E. Knox, Secretary.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hemnick & Co., of Shelby, N.C. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

THE FASHION PLATE.

The handsomest of the new satin foulards are striped with a line of heavier satin and polka dotted between the stripes.

The newest chenille trimmings of lattice patterned bands, scrolls, bowknot designs, etc., are very attractive as well as becoming.

A favored color combination next season will be pale apple green and soft primrose yellow; also very beautiful tints in pink with deep cream and apricot shades.

The variety of parasols displayed this year is almost as bewildering as the exhibit of varied dress fabrics. The dome shape of medium size is still the favorite.

A fawn colored English serge tailor skirt worn with a gray and violet striped and dotted taffeta silk shirt waist affords a dainty contrast to its modernised eton jacket of serge.

There is great variety in the display of little open jackets—eton, bolero, garcon, Russian, military, etc. They are made up both as separate garments and en suite with the gown.

Fancy vests and the more ample waistcoats are very much in evidence on handsome models for the season before us. On many costumes familiar styles are repeated, like the pique and marseilles varieties, fastened with small, round pearl buttons.

The circular skirt with a tablier or pointed tunic is very graceful, especially for those who need the effect of long lines, and the skirt flounced to the waist for those who wish to avoid them. The top flounce on the latter model is joined to a belt which finishes the round waist.

Most of the gowns for evening wear for the coming season are cut out square or rounding in the neck, and the sleeves are made elbow length. Chiffon can be shirred, tucked or draped to cover the neck if desirable. For those who are tired of silk muslin, chenille dotted net forms a dainty and becoming change.—New York Post.

Shooting a Monkey.

When I picked it up, it still lived, but with life too feeble to attempt any resistance. Like a dead thing, it let itself be taken, its pinched little lips trembled, and its eyes of a child looked into mine with an unforgettable expression of agony, of terror and reproach. Then up rose before me the stupid horror of what I had just done. I held it lying in my arms and caressed with infinite care its dying head. The other two, whose little one I had killed, screamed in the tree above, grinding their teeth, divided between the fear of being also killed and their wish to scratch and bite me. Its forehead resting against my breast, it died, the little monkey, in almost an attitude of confidence, in the position of a small child. And never did I feel with such exasperation that need which often seized me to cast obloquy upon myself. "Brute!" I cried between my clinched teeth. "Oh, stupid brute!"—Pierre Loti in Figaro.

COLD CURE

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

"You mistake——"

"May Mohammed, his prophet, make your life a blank. May your days end in torment, and your nights be sleepless."

"When you are done, most illustrious Taleb, allow me to speak. Even a dog should not be condemned unheard.

"Father, I is right; you are just, you are good; you condemn no man unheard. Let him speak; good may even come out of Chicago," says the lovely houri at the side of the Moor, and John thanks her with his eyes, mentally concluding that, after all, Moorish females, if nonentities on the street, have certain rights under their own roofs.

At this the great doctor frowns, but cannot withstand the angelic, appealing glance which his daughter bestows upon him.

"Perhaps it is so. What have you to say, you who bear that hated name? Since through the kindness of my child you are given the opportunity to speak, embrace it."

The situation is a peculiar one, and John feels that he must make the most of it.

"Illustrious Moor, listen then while I relate the reason for my presence, why for months I have searched country after country for one who ever seemed to be just beyond my reach, like a will-o'-the wisp dancing over the swampy ground.

"The person I seek is known as Sister Magdalen. It is with no unworthy motive I would find her, Ben Taleb, for she is my mother."

At this the sheik and his daughter exchange significant glances. Perhaps something of incredulity may be discovered in their expression. Evidently they have heard but little of the story before, and only know that the troubles of the woman they revere came through a Craig.

John, having become stirred up, proceeds to tell them more of the past, and, while not caring to show emotion in the eyes of strangers, explains his feelings in the matter with a dignity that does him full justice.

While not thoroughly convinced, for he suspects there may be some artifice in this visit, the venerable Moor is inclined to look more favorably upon John.

"Perhaps you may not be so bad as I believed, but do not hope to receive news from me," is his slowly spoken remark.

John's heart sinks, he fears that after all his long search he is now to be frustrated by the stubborn will of an old man.

He even becomes eloquent in his appeal, and, while he fails to bring Ben Taleb to terms, he charms the sheik's daughter, whose lovely eyes glisten as she hears.

At last he wrings one promise from the Moor, to the effect that he will communicate with the lady in question, and, stating the whole case, allow her to decide.

This is certainly fair enough, and Ben Taleb presumes to be a man who desires to do that which is right. Hence he agrees, but will not let John know whether news can be sent to him at the hotel to-morrow or a week later. He must learn to practise the divine art of patience, and bide his time.

This, while a keen disappointment in regard to what he had expected and hoped for, is the best that can be done under the circumstances.

John is something of a philosopher.

When he has done his best, he is willing to trust the rest to fortune.

So he assumes a cheerfulness he is far from feeling, and assures Ben Taleb he will always be indebted to him for his kindness. After this he begs for a piece of paper, and the sheik sends one of his slaves for it. John writes a line upon it, a line that comes from the heart:

"My Mother: I have searched half the world over for you.

JOHN ALEXANDER CRAIG.

If she ever reads that, the meeting will not long be delayed, he believes.

A short time is spent in the company of the sheik and his daughter, and, as the young American admits that he is a doctor, the Moor shows new interest, asking various questions concerning some of the great events in the world of surgery that prove him to be a man far beyond his class, and one who keeps abreast of the times.

Finally, as the hour grows apace, John thinks it time for him to be going.

Where is his courier, the faithful Mustapha Cadi, all this while?

As he mentions him, the sheik claps his hands and the guide appears. He enters into a brief conversation with him in the Moorish tongue. John rightly guesses that the guide is relating the facts concerning their reaching the house, and that he fears they may be attacked, if they leave by the same way they entered.

The old Moor smiles, and after answering, turns to the young man from Chicago.

"There is another way of leaving this place, and one of my slaves will show you. They shall not harm one who comes to see Ben Taleb, if it can be prevented."

Then comes the ceremonious leave-taking, and John manages to get through this with credit. He has undoubtedly made a deep impression on the Moorish beauty, who, catching the crumbs falling from her father's table of knowledge, has aspirations above being the wife of a Moor, who may also have a harem.

At last they start off, with the slave in the lead, and, after passing through several rooms, which John views with interest, arrive at a wall.

Acting under the advice of his guide, John has assumed the burnoose again, for Mustapha carried it on his arm when he appeared.

"We will pass through this door, and reach another street. Are you ready, monsieur?"

John replies in the affirmative. The light is hidden under a basket, and then a sound is heard as of a door slowly opening.

"Pass through," whispers the guide.

Thus they reach the outside, and the wall resumes its innocent appearance. If they are fortunate, they will avoid the trouble that lay in wait at the door of the old Moor.

John no longer trembles in anticipation of what is to come. He has been disappointed, and yet bears his burden well.

His guide is yet cautious, believing that one is not safe until out of the woods. It is possible word may have been sent around among the strolling Moors and Arabs of the old town, that a Frank is wandering about in a burnoose under the care of Mustapha Cadi, and hence discovery, with its attendant desperate conflict, will come.

By degrees they approach the boundary line, and will soon be safe.

John is obliged to admire the diplomatic way in which the Arab conducts the retreat; it would be creditable to a military strategist. They dodge and hide, now advancing, anon secreting themselves in dark corners.

Into the brilliant light of the new Algiers they pass; the danger is behind, safety assured.

Then Craig turns to the Arab, and tells him in plain language what he thinks of such remarkable work, and Mustapha humbly answers that he is glad the monsieur is satisfied.

Secretly, he exults in the eulogy; for even an Arab is able to appreciate praise.

Thus they bring up at the hotel.

John looks at the hour, and finds it ten. He sees the clerk nodding, and, as he repossesses himself of his valuables, accepts the other's congratulations with respect to having gone through such an experience, and lived to tell the tale.

Where are the others?

They do not seem to be about.

The music has ceased on the square, which is less crowded than before, although many people still saunter about, fakirs cry aloud their goods, and the scene is one which has certain fascinations for the traveller's eye, a warmth of color not to be found in American cities.

Here venders of fruit drinks serve their wares in an attractive way, with queer jars and fancy glasses that lend quite an inducement to purchase.

Upon making enquiries of the clerk, he finds that his four fellow-tourists have sauntered out some time since, and as yet failed to return; so John also steps outside.

In a moment Mustapha is at his side, and what he whispers is not pleasant news:

"Monsieur must be careful. The news has gone abroad that he it was who invaded Al Jezira on this night. Some one has spread the report that he is a spy, that his mission is to discover the details of the plot that is always going on among my people, for the rescue of Algiers from French hands. Hence he is watched; they may even proceed to violence. What little I have learned tells me this. Be awake; be always ready for defence, and seek not the dark corners where an assassin might lie. Bismillah!"

This is pleasant, indeed.

John has something of the feeling that comes upon the man who awaits the verdict of the jury.

At the same time he is resolved to take the advice given and be on his guard.

As he saunters around he fails to see those whom he seeks, though soon becoming conscious of the fact that he is watched and followed.

This does not add to his pleasure.

From the hints Mustapha has dropped, he begins to realize that there is some sort of a league in Al Jezira, looking toward an uprising and the coming of the patriot leader, who will take charge of the rebellion.

He has gained the ill-will of these conspirators by this night visit to the old town, and how unfortunate this may be for him the future may prove.

It is while he wanders about the square, keeping in the light, and always on his guard, that John receives something of a shock.

He sees a figure ahead, a figure garbed as a sister. She moves slowly on, her face is veiled, and a mad impulse comes upon him to toss aside that veil, to discover whether this can be Sister Magdalen, the one for whom he searches, or another.

CHAPTER XIV.

This sudden impulse on the part of the young Chicago doctor may be the means of getting him into trouble, for no people are more quick to resent an insult, either fancied or real, to females upon the streets, than those of Algeria, Egypt or Turkey.

Woman is not an equal there, but a highly prized possession, and must never appear upon the street with her face unveiled, so that any man caught tearing the foutah of a lady from her face would be severely dealt with.

John, of course, is only desirous of seeing whether this may be his mother, but the public will hardly take this fact into consideration.

Upon so suddenly conceiving this bold plan of action, John Craig hastens his footsteps, and there is need of hurry, if he hopes to overtake the figure in black before she leaves the square, for, as if conscious that she is pursued, she has also quickened her pace.

He overhauls her just on the outskirts of the Place du Gouvernement, and as he brushes past quickly raises his hand to snatch aside the flowing veil.

Again his heart almost stands still, and the sacred word "mother" trembles on his lips as he bends forward to get a quick glance of the face that must be disclosed by the shifting of the veil.

His quick movement is not without its result. The veil is drawn aside, and John Craig receives a staggering blow as he gazes upon the shrivelled countenance of an old woman.

It is impossible that this can be his mother—perish the thought!—and yet the garb is one seldom seen on the streets of Algiers.

His almost palsied hand drops the veil. Lucky for him will it be if no jealous Moor's eyes have seen the action.

The Sister does not cry out, and call upon those who are present to avenge the insult—even had she been a Moorish lady, the demand for punishment would not come from her, but from those of the sterner sex near by.

Instead, she stands there as if waiting for him to speak—stands there like a statue in black.

John at once apologizes for his rudeness—he is already sorry for what he has done.

"Madame, pardon. I believed you were one very dear to me, one who wears the insignia of your order, one for whom I have searched far and near, half the world over—my mother."

"It was a bold act, young sir, but far be it from me to denounce you. Tell me, how would you know this mother?" she asks, in a thick voice.

"She is known as Sister Magdalen—perhaps you know her—she may even be staying at the same convent as yourself," eagerly.

"I know one Sister Magdalen, a sweet, quiet woman, lately from Malta, whither she went to consult the head of our order."

Her words arouse John.

AT HENLEY.

The Argonaut Eight Beat the Dutch, But the Argonaut Four and All the Singles Were Beaten.

Henley-on-Thames, July 6.—All the Argonaut Rowing Club's entries from Toronto, Canada, participated in the second day's contests of the Royal regatta yesterday, and last evening there was only one boat remaining.

Bright lost to Howell, the champion, in the singles.

Goldman lost to Hemmerde of Oxford in the singles.

Thompson lost to Ashe on a foul in the singles, though the Canadian was first to finish.

The Argonaut four lost to Trinity College, Oxford.

The Argonaut eight beat the Dutch, and are still in it for the Grand Challenge Cup.

In the first heat for the Grand Challenge Cup the Argonauts' (Toronto) eight beat the Dutch crew from Delft by two feet. Time 7 mins. 6 secs.

The Delft students in the Dutch boat started very badly, rowing 34, while the Argonauts of Toronto got away well at 40, and secured a lead of a length before the Dutchmen knew where they were. Above the island the Dutchmen caught the Canadians, and led at Fawley Court, in 8 mins. 19 secs., by the length of their fornward canvas. Thence there was a terrific struggle. The Canadians spurted again and again, and, just as they reached the post, succeeded in getting the nose of their boat in front. The time made is considered very fast. It was the general opinion that the Argonauts had a narrow escape from defeat.

PRIVATE PROPERTY AT SEA.

Hague Conference Relegates the Question to a Special Conference.

The Hague, July 6.—The American delegates scored a great success yesterday in obtaining from the peace conference a unanimous vote in favor of having the question of private property at sea in time of war dealt with at a special conference to be summoned hereafter.

Andrew D. White, the head of the American delegation, made an eloquent appeal to the jurist diplomatists and statesmen of all nations assembled in the conference to take the subject under careful consideration, declaring in the words of Count Nesselrode, that "the addition of this principle to international law would be a crown of glory to the world's diplomacy."

M. Rahusen of the Dutch delegation supported Mr. White, and suggested that the Governments favoring the idea should conclude treaties among themselves.

Sir Julian Has No Instructions.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, head of the British delegation, said that British opinion was divided on the subject, and that he had no instructions regarding it. In his personal opinion, the question was outside the scope of the conference.

M. Bourgeois, head of the French delegation, and Capt. Scheine of the Russian delegation, announced that, in the absence of instructions, they could not vote.

The resolution was then put and carried without opposition, but with reservations on the part of Great Britain, France and Russia.

CASTELLANE SCORES THE PRINCE.

Former Resents Monaco's Sovereign's Interference in the Dreyfus Affair.

Paris, July 6.—Comte Boni de Castellane, who married Miss Anna Gould, has addressed a communication to the Prince of Monaco, sharply criticizing the Prince for his recent letter to Mme. Dreyfus, inviting her and her husband to sojourn at his chateau after the prisoner's acquittal, of which the Prince expressed himself as confident. The Comte, who charges the Prince with "interfering in an affair in which you are in no way concerned," says: "If, as a foreign sovereign you thought you could influence French officers in the grave verdict they are about to pronounce, I beg you to note that we do not stand on an equal footing, as none of us would condescend to call to account a prince who is under tuteiage. You are, perhaps, a relative of Dreyfus by marriage, but in that case it is premature to triumph. If, on the other hand, it is as a protector of gambling houses that you intervene, permit me to tell you that Dreyfus himself would dispense with your services."

Fired at the Ameer.

London, July 6.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Globe says that advices have been received there from Cabul, capital of Afghanistan, that an Afghan recently discharged a rifle point blank at the Ameer, but missed him, the bullet lodging in the shoulder of a general standing near by. The advices also say that the Ameer's brother, Ishak Khan, attempted to bribe a cook to poison the Ameer, and that when the plot was discovered Ishak fled into Russian Asia and the cook was hanged.

Bishop Newman Succumbs.

Saratoga, N.Y., July 6.—Bishop Newman died at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Bishop John P. Newman was born in New York city Sept. 1, 1826. He was educated at Cazenovia Seminary. He became a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was for several years pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. Church, Washington, and chaplain of the United States Senate from 1869 to 1874. He was a member of the Society of Biblical Archaeology and author of "From Dan to Beersheba" and "The Thrones and Palaces of Babylon and Nineveh." He was elected a bishop at the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1888.

CAUGHT IN A MOWER.

Terribly Painful Accident to 11-Year-Old Wesley Nixon.

Port Hope, July 6.—Yesterday morning, between 11 and 12 o'clock, a very painful accident happened to Wesley Nixon, aged 11 years, son of Mr. George Nixon. Wesley accompanied his father to the Athletic Grounds, where the latter proceeded to cut the grass with a mower, attached to a team of horses, the lad following the machine closely conversing with his father. When half way round the field Mr. Nixon noticed his son getting a little too close to the mower, and accordingly called to him to keep out of the way, but it was too late, the boy having taken the fatal step, and the knives (which were hidden in the grass) caught his right foot, and before the team could be stopped had frightfully lacerated the limb. Drs. Corbett and Field were at once summoned, and upon examination it was found that the sharp knives had severed every bone of the foot, the toes hanging by the skin alone.

GOOD HEALTH FOR WOMEN

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food Restores Weak, Sickly Women to Robust Health.

Any irregularities in the monthly uterine action is sufficient cause for women to be alarmed about their health. Whether painful, suppressed or profuse menstruation, the cause can be traced to some derangement of the nerves.

A few boxes of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food will completely build up the exhausted nerves and restore the regular monthly action which removes from the body the clogged matter that would otherwise cause pain and serious disease.

It is as a restorative for pale, weak women that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has been singularly successful. It counteracts the debilitating diseases peculiar to women by feeding the nerves and creating new nerve fluid, the vital force of the human body.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has restored scores of hundreds of weak, sickly women to robust health. 50c. a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Dr. Chase's new illustrated book "The Ills of Life and How to Cure Them," sent free to your address.

Butter and Cheese.

Montreal, July 5.—The Gazette this morning says:—"Receipts of cheese were 17,843 boxes. The market was quiet to-day, with little doing, and while buyers as a result of recent purchases in the country wanted to deal for less money, holders were not free sellers. The attitude of the latter element is easy to understand, owing to the fact that the goods arriving this week cost laid down as much as buyers appear willing to concede. For eastern makes the prevailing idea today was 8 1-4c to 8 3-8c, Townships 8 1-2, and Ontario white 8 5-8c; do. colored, a fraction more.

Receipts of butter were 1,502 packages. Trading in butter was inactive outside of what was done at the auction sale where rather full prices were bid. In a general way the range on creamery to cover all ideas was 17 1-2c to 17 3-4c, and on dairy, 13 1-2c to 14c.

The regular weekly association sale of dairy produce this afternoon resulted in pretty full prices on butter. Potter & Morin auctioned the goods at the Gould Cold Storage warehouse. The offerings were 240 packages of creamery, which sold as follows:—44 pkgs at 18c; 127 pkgs at 17 5-8c; 52 at 17 3-4c, and 17 at 17 1-8c.

The total receipts of cheese to date are 452,932 boxes, against 421,801 for the same period last year, an increase of 31,000 odd boxes. The total receipts of butter are 141,820 pkgs, against 78,454 pkgs, an increase of 63,000 odd pkgs. These figures speak for themselves. They indicate that while the output of creamery is steadily increasing, the cheese industry is also more than holding its own this season.

Ingersoll, July 4.—(Special).—The offerings to-day were 1,240 boxes; no sales; 8 1-2c offered. Market quiet.

New York, July 3.—Cheese — The home trade are principal operators on the docks to-day, paying 8 1-2c to 8 3-4c for fancy colored, large and small sizes. No white offering. In export no business doing, as prices are above their range; the outlook is that country markets will be easier and quotations may be cabled at 8 1-4c to 8 3-8c for large colored and white for export.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

HARVEY COUNCIL.

Proceedings at the Last Meeting of the Harvey Council.

The Harvey Council met at the Clerk's office on July 3rd., pursuant to adjournment. Members were all present. The meetings of the previous meetings were read and confirmed. Communications were read from Mr. Pearse, county clerk, re amount to be levied for county purposes. On motion, Mr. Ventress was allowed to fence across the quarter line road allowance between 20 and 21, concession 17, at the centre between the east and west halves of said lots, provided Mr. Ventress puts up and keeps in repair a gate for the convenience of Mr. Moore; also that Mr. Moore be allowed to take his cattle across lot 20 until such time as the Council requires the road allowance to be opened.

On motion, Mr. Flynn was appointed to meet the trustees on Union School Section No. 5, re the statutory levy, and the clerk was instructed to notify the trustees to meet Mr. Flynn at the school house on Saturday, July 22, at 7 o'clock p.m. On motion, the taxes charged against east part of lot 6, con. 18, assessed to John C. Higgins, were removed from the collector's roll, on account of the gravel taken off the same for roads. On motion, accounts passed and orders were drawn for payment of the following accounts:—Wm. Barcroft, work on 10th con. line, $5; Wm. Irwin, for work on north end of Government road, $10; Samuel Guthrie, do., $5; Morgan Adams, work on road between 24 and 25, con. 19, $10; James O. REVIEWS.

Lippincott's Magazine, which starts on an entirely new career with the July issue, brings out—complete—a Japanese novel, by John Luther Long, the author of "Miss Cherry-Blossom," "Madame Butterfly," etc. "The Fox-Woman" deals with the half-humorous, half-pathetic infatuation of a little Japanese artist for a wilful American beauty, who never realises the tragedy she heartlessly compels.

"The Teller," by the author of "David Harum,' and the only existing fiction left by Edward Noyes Westcott, is a story in which the pathetic incident—the all-mastering tragedy—of everyday life is treated with a power never surpassed and seldom equalled in contemporary literature.

There are also valuable and timely papers contributed by the following well-known writers: Anne Hollings-Wharton's first of two articles on "The Salon in Old Philadelphia"; Sara Y. Stevenson on "What are Women Striving For?" Henry Wilton Thomas on "The Building of a Trust"; Charles S. Clark on "A Practical Submarine Vessel" (The New Argonaut); George J. Varney on "Self-Propelled Street Vehicles," and Ernest Ingersoll on "Small Deer"; Charles M. Skinner writes "The Cited: A Legend of Havana."

James Whitcomb Riley's new poem, "A Song of the Road," has the true flavor of this popular writer's ability to touch the hearts of his readers.

Verse is always contributed by Francis Howard Williams, "On The Maine Coast," and by Lisette Woodworth Reese, "The Cry of Rachel." Unusually strong poems, both.

W. A. Fraser, the new Canadian author, has written a number of East Indian racin gatories for McClure's Magazine, and the first one, entitled "The Luck of the Babe," will appear in the July number. The same number will contain a short war story by Stephen Crane, and a new "Boyville" story by William Allen White. The last will be illustrated with some more of Orsen Lowell's charming pictures of "Boyville" life. Mr. Lowell seems to know the place almost as well as Mr. White, who created it.

McClure's Magazine for July will contain a biographical sketch of Rudyard Kipling, by his friend Professor Charles Eliot Norton. It is the only sketch of his life that has been written by Mr. Kipling's authority.

ANNUAL PICNIC.

The Annual Picnic of Holy Trinity Church, South Burleigh.

The annual picnic in connection with Holy Trinity church, South Burleigh, was held in the church grounds in the afternoon of July 1st, with a goodly crowd in attendance, among whom was the genial Mr. Foster, the new Methodist clergyman. The picnic was a financial success, and the Rev. Mr. Cresswick is to be congratulated on the results, as are also the ladies, who worked so indefatigably in providing the bountiful tea, to which all did ample justice. Swings, erected for the amusement of the children, were well patronized, while the ice cream, so kindly supplied by Mr. J. Harvey, was certainly the right thing in the right place. The drawing contest for the handsome quilt donated by Mrs. W. G. Stone, took place in the evening, our teacher, Miss Maggie Kennedy, being the lucky winner. The fish-pond, the contents of which were given by Mrs. Cresswick, was under the management of the energetic Mr. Pyke, and furnished no end of amusement, for while many of the prizes were pretty or useful, others were—well, rather fishy.

PAUDASH.

Death of an Old and Respected Resident, Mr. John Anderson.

Correspondence of the Review.

It is our sad duty to announce the death of Mr. John Anderson, of Paudash, who died at the residence of Mr. S. Anderson, where he has been since the death of his wife, who died in November last. Mrs. Anderson died from heart trouble. She was within a few days of 70 years. Mr. Anderson was over 77 years. They were old and respected residents of this township. They were about the first settlers of this district and they had seen many of the hardships and trials of back country life. They leave five sons and one daughter, and twenty-seven grandchildren to mourn their loss. Mr. Anderson was a staunch Presbyterian in religion, and a life long Conservative in politics. Mr. Anderson leaves three brothers, Daniel Anderson, of Douro, Alexander, of South Monoghan, and Duncan Anderson, of Dakota. His entire property he left to his son Donald, who is now in Vancouver, and who is to pay all his lawful debts and receive all claims due to deceased.

It is only a step from the cradle to the grave DALLEY'S SYRUP of HORE-HOUND AND ELECAMPANE will arrest that step if used in time.

Gentlemen, Are You Bald?

Over 36,000 gentlemen of every profession in life enjoy the wearing of these art goods to-day.

CALLED DOWN AN AVALANCHE.

A Fatal Rush of Snow Seemingly Started by a Human Voice.

Is it true that the sound of the human voice may start a snow slide? James Perchard, clerk of the state court of appeals, is inclined to answer the question in the affirmative. He has for 20 years past been almost of the belief that a word of farewell which he shouted in one of the mountain canyons cost the lives of two persons.

"I never think of the event without a shudder," said Mr. Perchard. "I was mining at the time in the region above Georgetown. The snow had fallen to an unusual depth that winter and miners moving from one cabin to another were warned to look out for slides. I stopped in one of my trips at the cabin of an acquaintance and took dinner with him and his wife. At the close of the meal my host urged me to stay awhile and take a smoke with him, but I felt nervous and impatient for some reason which it was impossible for me to explain, and declined as politely as possible the kind invitation.

"I arose from the table and without delay started on my journey. Crossing the canyon, I turned to wave a farewell to the friends who had entertained me. The man and his wife were standing at the door of the cabin and a third person was in the house. The air was perfectly still. Not the slightest intimation was given of the awful disaster which was about to happen. I waved my hand and shouted 'Goodby!'

"Hardly had the echoes of my voice died away before a muffled sound struck the ear—a noise like the boom of a cannon—and the whole side of the mountain seemed to be in motion. The snow, ice, trees and rocks started toward the bottom of the gulch and within five seconds the cabin was overwhelmed and the spot on which I had stood one or two minutes before was buried under 50 feet of snow. I summoned assistance as quickly as it could be done, and we frantically dug out two dead bodies. The third person afterward recovered from the injuries inflicted by the slide, but I have never entirely forgiven myself for the word which I shouted on that never to be forgotten day."—Rocky Mountain News.

TWO MIND READERS.

Wonderful Manner In Which They Divined Each Other's Thoughts.

"Don't say a word," exclaimed Bilkins impressively as a gaunt, unshaven man entered his office. "Don't speak; don't utter a syllable. I have acquired the gift of mind reading. A mysterious sympathy is established between us. I read your purpose. You have come here to collect Kent & Blunt's little account. Is it not so?"

"It is. You are quite right," replied the gaunt, unshaven one. "I, too, have been a mind reader in my time. The power is on me now. I know your thoughts; I can tell what the speech will be that you are framing even now. You are going to say, 'I am very sorry, but you will have to call again.' Am I not right?"

"Marvelous!" ejaculated Bilkins.

"I can go further," pursued the prophet in a hoarse whisper. "You will tell me to come in about the middle of next week."

"Miraculous!" cried Bilkins. "Now it is my turn. I can see into your very soul. You will answer, 'I have been coming here for the past two years every week, and it's high time you settled up.'"

"You astonish me."

"Yes, more; you will threaten to bring suit."

"Just what I was going to say. But I can carry my spiritual communion further. You will say, 'Sue and be—blanked.'"

"My dear sir, you are inspired. You ought to be a wealthy prophet."

"Then," continued the gaunt, unshaven party, "I shall try a little moral suasion, and you will waft me gently into the street."

"It is no use fighting against destiny," responded Bilkins, and a few moments later, as the gaunt, unshaven individual collected his remains from the pavement, he was overheard to remark that the mind reading business wasn't what it was cracked up to be.—Exchange.

It is to cost $17,980, fees included, to have brick foundations, brick piers for inside supports, to have two aisles and to have 250 feet more floor space than the old building. The outside walls and roof are to be covered with galvanized iron. Council is asked to provide $17,500.

Cyclone Killed a Man.

Glen Falls, N.Y., July 6.—A cyclone struck this section of the state yesterday afternoon. Large trees were uprooted and other damage was done. Nesbit, a farmer, living east of Lake George, who was driving, was blown with his horse and buggy from the road over a fence and into a field. He was injured so severely that he died. The track of the storm was about half a mile wide.

Pare and Holden Broken Down.

Montreal, July 6.—Pare and Holden, the two celebrated bank burglars who robbed the Napanee Bank of a big sum of money, and who subsequently escaped from the Napanee Jail, arrived here last night from Campbellson in charge of Inspector Greer of Toronto. Later they left for Napanee. Both men, who have been at liberty for over two months, tramping the country, appear altogether broken down.

THE FIRE ENGINE IN MOTION.

Its Progress Through Crowded Streets With Horses Galloping.

The fire engine appears to get through somehow. A man might travel the streets of the city many a day and never see one blocked, even in the most crowded streets. Drivers get out of the way to give the engine a clear track, and the police help in clearing the way, and then the driver of the engine himself, though he is hauling a load of five tons, more or less, is a man that can get there if there is any room left for him at all.

Here was a fire engine coming along a busy cross street toward Broadway on the way to a fire, the horses on the gallop and the whistle sounding frequently. Broadway was simply packed full, as was also, apparently, the cross street. The space at the intersection was filled from corner to corner in every direction with slowly moving teams sifting past one another and moving on their way with the help now and then of the policeman stationed there, and it didn't seem possible that any horse whatever besides those already there could find room to set a hoof except at the gait the rest were going, much less to pass through at a gallop. But the engine kept coming, its whistle sounding with the note it gives when the engine is moving rapidly, and in a moment a man who had halted on a far corner, as others had done around here and there, to see the engine said:

"Here she comes, with three horses!"

And so she did, with three horses on a dead gallop and the big engine shining behind, and then something happened. It seemed as if the engine rolled the teams back as it came along the cross street, something as a boat might roll water back from its bows. But it didn't seem as though it could get across Broadway faster than a walk, even with the friendly help of every driver and of the policeman besides. Nevertheless the engine kept coming all the same, and in half a minute it was seen that it was going to do something more complicated still than going straight across. It was going to turn the corner into Broadway, and this was done on the jump.

How the policeman knew the engine wanted to turn into Broadway was not apparent to the casual observer. Perhaps the engineer told him with the whistle; maybe the fireman running ahead-pointed, but the policeman knew it somehow rods before the engine got to the corner. The policeman at the northeast corner hustled the team going east along the cross street out of the way, at the same time holding up the men who were coming north on Broadway. He also held up a warning finger to two teams coming from the west. He had here in a moment, in the simplest manner, made a clear space around the corner, with room enough for the engine to swing around. At this instant a driver coming from the west and going east drove out from the banked up teams on that side into that inviting open space. It was like somebody running out into the open space in front of the line at a parade. He didn't do any harm. The policeman had his horse by the bridle and sheered off out of the way in very short order, and then that space was clear again, and here the engine did come, with three horses, whirling around the corner and up Broadway on the dead jump.—New York Sun.

When Thackeray Was Not Elected.

It is almost startling to be reminded, as we are by Mrs. Ritchie's introduction to "The Virginians," that at one period the novelist earnestly desired to enter the house of commons. Nay, he actually stood for the city of Oxford, coming in at the bottom of the poll. "And a very good thing, too," says Toby, member of parliament, who is supposed to know something of the house.

In 1857, when he made the attempt, he was 46 years old, far too advanced in life to make his mark at Westminster. He would have been lost in a crowd of mediocrities, would have been nowhere in the race with the glib, blatant Bashmead Artletts of the day. He did much better when, addressing the electors after the poll had been declared, he undertook to "retire and take my place with my pen and ink at my desk." The result was "The Virginians," published in November of this same year, worth a whole session full of speeches addressed to Mr. Speaker.

Thackeray's contest at Oxford is otherwise notable for one of the neatest and most graceful compliments on record. Meeting in the street Lord Monck, one of his opponents, he had a little friendly talk over the prospects of the fight, and on taking leave said, "May the best man win." "I hope not," said Lord Monck, with a courtly bow and a meaning glance at his opponent.

The March of the Waiters.

The old St. Nicholas hotel, that flourished in New York, on Broadway, near Spring street, put on more style than any house of its time. The waiters' march was an evolution of which any military command in the country might have been proud. In those days the head waiter was a master of tactics. When the guests were seated, he snapped his fingers, and in marched the waiters with trayloads of eatables. Keeping perfect step, each marched to his designated table and paused until the head waiter snapped his fingers twice, when down went the trays with a rattle. At a signal of three snaps covers were removed and dishes arranged for the comfort and convenience of the guests. The army then posed statuesquely until four snaps, when it right about wheeled and retreated to the kitchen.

All meats, by the way, were carved in the open dining room. The St. Nicholas carver weighed about 390 pounds. He had grown stout breathing the savory odors of roasts. Inquisitive guests used to linger near to see him manipulate the knife.

Called Him "Prop" For Short.

Among the plantation negroes in the old times the naming of a child was a matter of great moment. Since they all had the same surname the distinction had to be made in some other way. And since there were a hundred or more to be named the Bible, classics, literature and history were culled from very freely by the master or some other member of the family to assist the parents in this matter. Among the various names I recall this was the most original one—Elijah the Prophet Lucius K. Polk Mars Abberth Is. The latter name was a compliment to one of the young masters, and not to have given the little would have been an act of discourtesy. The name, however, was abbreviated to "Prop," and he was so called.

The Word.

"Do you mean to tell me," said the unfortunate litigant, "that the whole property in dispute has been wasted in costs?"

"I said it had been absorbed, my friend, not wasted," replied the lawyer who got the most of it.

Relatively.

Gently led they her aside.

"You look dreadful with gum in your mouth!" they protested.

"Oh, you ought to see me with gum in my hair!" exclaimed the thoughtless young thing. "That's when I'd jar you for a fright, though!"

After all, looks, like virtue, are relative rather than absolute.

ELECTIONS AT OLDHAM.

English Liberals Have Gained the Double-Barrelled Constituency.

London, July 7.—The Liberal party gained two seats yesterday in the bye-elections held in the double-barrelled constituency of Oldham to fill the dual vacancy caused by the death last month of Mr. Robert Ashcroft, Conservative, and the subsequent resignation of his Conservative colleague, Mr. James Francis Oswald, who has just been appointed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, to be Steward and Bailiff of the Manor of North Stead.

The following are the results of the polls: Mr. Alfred Emmet, Liberal and Radical, 12,976; Mr. Walter Runciman, Liberal and Radical, 12,770; Mr. Winston Spencer Churchill, Conservative, 11,477; Mr. J. W. Maudsley, Conservative, 11,449. Messrs. Oswald and Ashcroft at the time of their election polled respectively 12,465 and 12,035 Conservative votes. Yesterday's election, therefore, is a distinct Conservative reverse.

Liberal Home Ruler Still Holds It.

London, July 7.—An election for member of Parliament was held yesterday in the Osgold Cross Division in the West Riding of Yorkshire. At the general Parliamentary election in July, 1895, Sir John Austin received 5,119 votes and M. J. Harding, the Conservative candidate, received 4,054 votes.

THURSDAY'S SESSION.

Mr. Borden, Halifax, Moves for Investigation Into the West Huron and Brockville Elections.

Mr. Borden of Halifax yesterday afternoon made his promised motion to compel the clerk of the Crown in Chancery to appear before the bar of the House and produce poll books, etc., used in the bye-elections of West Huron and Brockville. He cited many precedents for the course he was taking now, among them a motion made by James F. Lister in 1893. He recalled also the fact that Hon. Edward Blake and Sir John Macdonald agreed in 1875 that the House should not be deprived of power to investigate the conduct of returning officers and deputies. He insisted that it was perfectly competent for the committee on privileges and elections to inquire into the conduct of the officials in Brockville and West Huron. "It is not only the right of this House to take action," he said, "it is its obvious duty. If a prima facie case of

WHY WAS IT HUSHED?

INDEPENDENT opinion seems to be united in the belief that the Laurier-Tarte-Sifton combination made a serious mistake in refusing an investigation into the Yukon charges made by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, and supported by that gentleman's statement that he would resign his seat in Parliament if the charges were not substantiated. Mr. Sifton's denial did not "dismiss," wipe out or "smash" the charges made, charges that came not only from Sir Hibbert but have been general in almost all correspondence from the Yukon. The Government has itself to blame if the people conclude that they feared a proper and impartial investigation. The London Times expresses the opinion that the Government made a mistake in the course it took, and unprejudiced people generally will agree with this.

We give a reference to the matter from a Grit independent newspaper, the Hamilton Herald, which reasons the case out in a fair and sensible way. The Herald says :—

Word comes from Dawson that the investigation by Mr Ogilvie of alleged irregularities on the part of Yukon officials has resulted in the withdrawal of some of the charges and the complete exoneration of the officials in regard to the remaining charges.

If this result can safely be taken as proof that serious irregularities have not existed in connection with the Yukon administration, did not the Government commit a tactical mistake in refusing the demand of Sir Hibbert Tupper for a judicial investigation?

Suppose Sir Hibbert had got all that he asked for, and had then failed to prove the truth of the charges for which he had accepted full responsibility—what a splendid triumph it would have been for the Government, especially for Mr Sifton! And what a humiliation for the Opposition, especially for the younger Tupper! Why, such an outcome would mean the political death of Sir Hibbert, for he has solemnly promised to retire from public life if the charges which he has made should be found incapable of proof.

It seems to us that if, as stated, the Yukon administration has been completely vindicated by Mr Ogilvie's investigation, the Laurier Government has shown a strange disinclination to take advantage of a good opportunity to strengthen itself and weaken its enemies—a disinclination all the more strange when you consider that there are some mighty astute politicians in the Laurier Government.

The people will ask "Why was the opportunity not taken advantage of?" and will arrive at their own conclusion after reasoning the case out.

AND poor, innocent Macnish "did not know it was loaded."

MR. Hardy says he is not about to retire. Well, he may think so, but the people will change his mind when they get the opportunity.

"JOE" Martin is maintaining his title to the name of "Fighting Joe." If he is not fighting his political opponents he can work up a fairly lively fight with his friends.

ALTHOUGH he states that he does not intend to retire, does not prove that Mr. Hardy should not resign after the recent exposure of how the discredited combination held office.

A change of Government is the only thing that will purify Ontario politics. The machinery of the Grit combination that rules is in the hands of the criminal gang whose operations have been exposed, and the Government in whose interests they have worked dare not disown them.

THE following is the full text of the telegram sent by Mr. W. T. R. Preston, the Grit organizer, to Mr. Macnish, the West Elgin Grit candidate, on the night of the latter's fraudulent election to the Legislature :—

TORONTO, Jan. 12, 1899.

Donald Macnish, St. Thomas :

Heartiest congratulations. Sorry to the bottom of my heart I cannot be with you tonight.

To be supported by such a noble army of workers should make you the proudest man in Ontario. Shake hands with the boys for me, and hug the members of the much-abused threshing machine for Auld Lang Syne.

PRESTON.

The "much abused threshing machine" will get its hugging when the people have an opportunity of expressing their opinion of the Government in whose interest it was maintained.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Wichita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

ARGOS ROWED GAMELY.

Toronto Eight Beaten by Half a Length in Their Heat With the London Rowing Club at Henley.

Henley-on-Thames, July 7.—In their second heat of the races for the Grand Challenge Cup, the Toronto eight were defeated by the crew of the London Rowing Club by just half a length yesterday. It was a splendid race from the start, and admitted by all to have been the best contest of the regatta. The Londoners had a little the best of it at the start, and led to the finish, but the Canadians never permitted over half a length daylight between the boats.

At Fawley Court the Argonauts were a length and a half behind, but they cut this down by a length before the finish. Everyone admired the gameness that only just failed to win, and the defeated were received with cheer after cheer.

There was a general feeling of disappointment at the result, as the spectators generally expressed the desire to see the Canadians tackle the Leanders in the finals.

The time at the half was 3.38, and the full course was covered in 7.15. In their heat yesterday the Londoners' time was 7.25, while the Canadians' was recorded as 7.06.

The applause for the Canadians as they rowed to their boathouse amounted to an ovation, and was accentuated by the fact that when Ashe, who claimed the heat from "Bush" Thompson on Wednesday on a foul, came out for his heat yesterday he was received with rounds of hisses and uncomplimentary remarks from either bank of the river. His defeat by Blackstaffe was decidedly popular, and the recollection of his unsportsman-like behavior brought a renewal of the hootings.

The London crew acknowledge that the slow water in the latter part of the course favored their chances and won them the race.

Drowned at Hamilton Beach.

Hamilton, July 7.—There was a sad drowning accident at the Beach near the Radial bridge early last evening, Samuel Green, son of Frank Green, the well-known horseman of Stoney Creek, being the victim. It was another case of changing seats in a rowboat. Green was fishing in a boat with Charles McCardel and "Han" Land, when two of the men decided to exchange seats. While doing so the boat capsized and Green sank. The other men held to the boat and were rescued. McCardel was almost dead when brought ashore. He was about 30 years of age

FAMOUS LIBERAL MACHINE

wrongdoing is made out, it is our duty to make the most searching inquiry."

Mr. Borden produced affidavits illustrating specific cases of crookedness on the part of some one. In Ward 3, Goderich, for instance, the count showed 40 ballots to have been cast for Robert McLean, the Conservative candidate. He, the speaker, had in his possession the affidavits of between 50 and 60 electors, who swore that they had deposited ballots for McLean at this same polling booth. At the same poll the agent of McLean swore to having picked up from the floor of the polling booth a ballot marked for the Conservative candidate. The attention of the deputy returning officer was called to it, whereupon the latter tore it to pieces. The fragments were subsequently picked up, and are today in possession of a Conservative member of Parliament, who will produce them in due time. In another polling division McLean received 30 votes, though he had in his possession the affidavits of 43 electors who swore they deposited ballots for the Tory candidate. "This could not occur," declared Mr. Borden, "without the intervention of the deputy returning officer." He mentioned many cases of wrongdoing in the Brockville election. He argued that the Government could not fairly fall back on the plea that the subject should be dealt with by the courts. "Suppose there were no petitions," said he. "Suppose by arrangement between the candidates or some other method no petition was filed, does that relieve this House of the duty of investigating the conduct of its officials? It is a question of the dignity of the House, and surely this Government is strong enough to deal openly and fearlessly with the case."

Mr. Borden read Mr. Macnish's confession in West Elgin, and he contended that the same frauds as were committed in West Elgin could have been made in West Huron and Brockville, because the same parties were "running the machine." Ministers were also responsible for the conduct of their officers, and he read Mr. W. T. R. Preston's telegram to Macnish: "Hug the machine for me." As Mr. Preston was now an officer in the employ of the Dominion Government, he would like to know what action the Government proposed to take.

Sir Wilfrid Accepts It.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that the question raised was one of the most important which could be brought before Parliament, as it involved the honor and dignity of the House. The Liberal party had always maintained that purity of election must be upheld at all hazards. The free will of the people must not be hampered or thwarted. The questions raised were on questions of fact about the conduct of certain deputy returning officers and were susceptible of proof or disproof before the committee. In the West Huron case he frankly admitted that a prima facie case had been made out, and that would be immediately referred to the committee on privileges and elections. The Brockville case was not so clear. Indeed, he thought it was very weak, but that would also be referred to the committee. He thought that Dr. Borden had taken altogether too much time in explaining his motion, and had done so in a manner which created the impression that the Government would not grant the motion, and it had been made with more heat than was necessary. He begged to assure the House that there was not the slightest desire to shield anyone who had done wrong. The Government will make no opposition to either of these motions.

Congratulated by Sir Charles.

Sir Charles Tupper congratulated the hon. gentleman on the conclusion at which he had arrived.

The debate was further continued by Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Casey, Dr. Sproule, after which Mr. Borden's motion was agreed to.

The Gerrymander Bill.

The House then went into committee of the whole on the redistribution bill.

The House remained in committee on the gerrymander bill, discussing clause one the greater part of the debate, which was participated in by some 20 odd members, being devoted to the eccentricities of the Government in framing the bill.

There was also a good deal of talk about increasing the representation of Toronto from four to five members.

The House adjourned at 12.30 a.m.

THE SENATE.

The proceedings in the Senate yesterday were not as interesting as they were expected to be, as there was no division on Senator Perley's six months' hoist motion. Hon. Mr. Mills, however, announced that the Government would propose an amendment, making the traffic clause terminate after notice, but the exact terms of the amendment did not suit some of the Conservative Senators, and, after a short sitting of the House last night, the Senate adjourned and another Conservative caucus was held, which lasted about an hour and resulted in the appointment of a sub-committee of seven to draft a resolution which would be satisfactory to both wings of the party, if possible. The sub-committee met immediately after the caucus adjourned and at 11.30 was still in session. No announcement will be made till the caucus meets again this morning at 10 o'clock.

HAS FOUR BRIDES ALIVE.

Harry Frank St. Clair, Aged 23, Is Said to Have Married a Quartette of Women Within a Few Months.

Rochester, N.Y., July 7.—Harry Frank St. Clair, aged 23, who says he came to Rochester from Toronto, Ont., but that his home is in Butte, Mont., was arrested here Monday on a warrant sworn out by his bride of a week, formerly Miss Agnes Barry, aged 21, of University avenue, charging him with the larceny of a gold watch and chain. When arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning, St. Clair pleaded not guilty to the charge of larceny, and the case was adjourned until to-day, when a charge of bigamy will also be entered against him. The police claim that they are in possession of evidence to show that St. Clair has been married four times within a few months and that all his brides are living. Chief Hayden is in communication with the authorities at Ithaca and London, Ont., and St. Clair will probably be confronted with the two women who it is alleged he married in those cities. The police also say that St. Clair was married on May 23 of the present year to Mabel Coppins of Canandagua. St. Clair married Miss Barry June 26 at Asbury Methodist Church parsonage, this city, and a week later left her, saying he had been suddenly called to Hamilton, Ont., but that he would be back. He took with him a gold watch and chain belonging to his new bride. After waiting until Monday Mrs. St. Clair went to the police station and told her story. St. Clair was located on East Main street and locked up.

POSTOFFICE INVESTIGATION.

Evidence of J. L. Renton, Deputy Postmaster—The Vanluven Affair.

Kingston, July 7.—Yesterday morning Judge Morgan, Toronto, opened an investigation connected with the Kingston Postoffice. The employes have not been able to live at peace and harmony for some time, and more than one scandal found its way into the press. J. L. Renton, deputy-postmaster, was the first witness called. He testified that the clerks openly defied his authority, had called him a spy and sneak, and one clerk had threatened to have him dismissed.

The Vanluven Affair.

The Frontenac County Council has been notified that the Ontario Government cannot consider the appointment of a royal commission to investigate the Vanluven shortages until after the return of the Cabinet Ministers. Then a Frontenac deputation will be heard in the matter.

Another Alaskan Deadlock.

Washington, July 7.—Ambassador Choate and Lord Salisbury are almost deadlocked over the modus vivendi fixing the Alaskan boundary. Neither side will accept the provisional line proposed by the other. The Canadians demand the inclusion of the Porcupine country and the Americans the projection of the boundary line northwesterly from a point two miles above Kluckwan.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Twenty Thousand Members Now in Detroit—Secretary Baer Shows the Great Growth of the Society.

Detroit, Mich., July 7.—It was estimated yesterday morning that upwards of 20,000 accredited International Christian Endeavor delegates have arrived, aside from visitors who are not Endeavorers.

Canadian headquarters at the Central Presbyterian Church are crowded with delegates.

At the first big meeting held last night 10,000 people were in the big tent "Endeavor." Representatives of each country made addresses, Rev. Mr Patterson of Cooke's Church, Toronto, speaking for Canada. Just as he rose to begin his remarks some one in the audience started the National Anthem, and in an instant the entire assemblage had taken it up, and "God Save the Queen" rang out with tremendous power into the night.

The Great Growth.

Secretary Baer's report says that there are now 979 intermediate societies, 1,680 junior societies, 85 mothers' societies and 49 senior societies. Over 100 societies are to be found on ships, merchantmen and men-of-war; many societies in the soldiers' camps, and in unexpected places, such as prisons, schools of reform, workhouses, almshouses, asylums, institutions for the blind, and for the deaf, schools and colleges, among car drivers and motormen, policemen, travelling men, lifesavers on the coast, lighthouse employes, in large factories, etc., to the number of over 200.

"I have a right to the exultant ring in my voice when I say that we have crossed the 59,000 line. The official enrollment is 55,818 societies, with a total membership of 3,500,000. If any Christian has lost his enthusiasm, these figures should be a source of inspiration."

The following gentlemen have been selected to comprise the Canadian Council: G. Tower Ferguson, Toronto; British Columbia, Rev. W. Cumming, Nanaimo; Manitoba, A. H. AN UNKNOWN MAN KILLED.

Terrible Wounds Inflicted Upon Him by a Way Freight Train.

Cookstown, Ont., July 7.—Yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, as the way freight was proceeding northward about two miles below here, it struck an unknown man, killing him instantly. At the time of the accident a furious rainstorm was in progress, which is thought so have prevented the man from seeing or hearing the approaching train until it was too late. When the body was picked up by the train hands it was found that there was a terrible wound in the back, that the right leg had been cut off at the knee and that the top of the back of the head had been broken in, allowing the brains to ooze out. The remains were brought here to await the arrival of Coroner Law from Beeton.

It is thought the remains are those of one Hicklen, whose home was near Dalston, two miles north of Barrie. Hicklen seemed to have been of a roving disposition and was regarded as not having a sound mind. He was not married and was about 45 years of age. It is not expected that an inquest will be held.

Usury Bill Revived.

Ottawa, July 7.—The Senate committee on banking and commerce yesterday morning restored Senator Dandurand's usury bill to the order paper and agreed to report it with several amendments. The chief of these was to make the maximum rate of interest chargeable 20 per cent., and the rate of interest after maturity 6 per cent. The other amendments were of a minor character.

IT ENDED HER TROUBLE.

"I never courted newspaper notoriety, yet I am not afraid to speak a good word for your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' Over a year ago I suffered terribly for nearly four weeks with prolapsus and weakness. After using one bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Pellets,' I was a well woman. I have taken no medicine since and have had no symptoms of my former trouble."—Mrs. E. A. Bender, Keene, Coshocton Co., Ohio.

You were hasty in your longing
To be overcivilized;
Your prospects you were wronging
With your methods ill advised;
Your primitive apparel
Rather handicaps your plan
To come forth and blandly carol
As a haughty banjo man.

When your rustic ways have vanished
And you've known the world awhile,
When your feather clothes you've banished
And you wear the latest style,
Your crudities distressful
Silent pity will not claim,
And you may be more successful
When you try a gold brick game.

AID TO THE INJURED.

THE PROPER THING TO DO FIRST IN CASE OF ACCIDENT.

Some Sound Advice on This Important Subject by Two Prominent St. Louis Surgeons—Treatment Which May Prevent Serious Results.

A worried look was on his face as he walked into the city dispensary. He carried his hand and lower arm in a sling improvised from a badly soiled bandanna handkerchief.

"Dog bit me two days ago, an my whole arm's swellin. I'm scared of hydrophobio," he told Dr. G. L. Kearney, chief assistant dispensary physician, when his turn came to tell his troubles.

He unwound a soiled rag and disclosed an enormously swollen hand with a small wound in the palm. As he did so a matted mass of short, black, curly hair, which had been tied like a plaster or poultice over the wound, fell to the floor. He gathered it up with great care.

"What's that?" asked Dr. Kearney.

"Some of the hair of the dog 'at bit me," and the patient looked surprised at Dr. Kearney's ignorance.

"I sincerely hope that this man's profound medical knowledge may not cost him his arm," said Dr. Kearney to a reporter as he cleaned the wound with a jet from a reservoir containing a bichloride of mercury solution. "People can't get out of their heads that old saw about the hair of the dog being good for the bite."

"I suppose you killed the dog," he continued, addressing his patient.

"Sure thing, but I've got plenty of his hair at home if you want some more."

"You killed the dog because you were afraid he had hydrophobia, didn't you?"

"Umhmh," assented the patient.

"And to keep any one from finding out whether he had it or not you killed him."

"No-o-o, not exactly. I thought maybe he might get hydrophobia afterward."

"And if he got it afterward you would get it, too, because years ago he bit you?"

"Umhmh."

"The diffusion of medical knowledge among some people is marvelous. You would probably have put a madstone on the wound if you had had one," said Dr. Kearney sarcastically, after dressing the wound, as he handed the patient a prescription for a poultice to be placed on the wound.

"Oh, there are thousands of cases of first aid, just like that one!" said Dr. Kearney later. "They put anything on a wound to stop the 'stanch of blood,' as they put it. Cobwebs, tar, manure, tobacco quids, balsam that gets into the wounds so you can't get it out any way you try, salt, vinegar, mustard, pepper, butter, lard, fresh clay, brick dust, whisky, axle grease, the saliva nicotine juice from strong pipes—I've seen them all used. None of these applications has styptic properties, but they all foul the wound and cause the surgeon hours of work and the patient hours of pain, where, had they not been used, a few minutes would have sufficed for the antiseptic cleaning and dressing of the wound.

"To me the most wonderful thing about these cases is that so few of them result in lockjaw, cellulitis, erysipelas or other forms of blood poisoning. People naturally do the wrong thing in emergencies. You notice that when a man falls the first impulse of bystanders is to elevate his head and to lift him to his feet again, regardless of any injury he may have sustained. They do that, I suppose, because they can't find anything that is more wrong to do.

"The most curious case of mistaken first aid that ever came under my observation was of a sewer cleaner who was struck in the neck by a flying fragment of a track torpedo that a mischievous lad had discharged with the blow of a hammer. The victim was coming out of a sewer manhole, and just as his head appeared above ground the torpedo exploded. One fragment hit him in the neck, cutting the carotid artery. The blood came out in spurts with each throb of the heart.

"The proper treatment while waiting for the doctor would have been to have pressed tightly over the wound with the thumb a compress of clean linen. Some bystander, however, knew a little of first aids. He had heard that a tightly constricted bandage between the wound and the heart would stop the flow of blood. A little learning proved a dangerous thing. He put a bandage around the victim's neck and began twisting it till the man's tongue hung out and his face grew purple. The victim was nearly choked to death when he reached the dispensary, and the flow of the blood was unabated."

Here is a resume of the proper emergency treatment in various accidents as given by Dr. A. V. L. Brokaw and Dr. A. C. Bernays, two of St. Louis' most eminent surgeons:

When a person falls on the street from unknown cause, lower the patient's head and loosen his clothing, so that the air passages may not be constricted by it. Give him plenty of air and let him lie till the doctor comes.

For cut which bleeds profusely, if the cut is on the leg or arm, tie a handkerchief about the limb above the wound, put a stick or cane through under the handkerchief and twist it until the flow of blood stops. If the cut is on head, neck or trunk, place directly over the wound a pad of clean cotton or linen material ("freshly ironed, if possible, to sterilize it" —Dr. Brokaw) and put a direct pressure on the wound with the thumb or hand till the doctor comes.

For burns and scalds sprinkle thickly over the injured parts dry, powdered carbonate of soda or baking powder. Wrap in clean cloths, freshly ironed if possible. For a simple contusion give the injured parts rest and consult a physician to determine the extent of the injury.

For dislocation of a joint no attempts at reduction should be made. The patient should be placed in a comfortable position and kept as quiet as possible until the surgeon comes.

For slight fractures the proper treatment is to keep the parts quiet and consult a doctor.

For severe fractures place the injured member and patient in a comfortable position and send for a surgeon. If the bone protrudes and there is severe hemorrhage from the wound, use the same measures as with simple cuts.

For asphyxiation bring the patient out of the noxious atmosphere, lower his head, push his jaw forward, pull his tongue so that it protrudes from his mouth, in order to clear the air passages. Then produce artificial respiration by expanding and compressing the chest regularly 16 times to the minute. "The philosophy of lowering the patient's head is to impel the blood thither by gravity," says Dr. Bernays. "The head dies first and it needs blood to live."

OUTING COSTUMES.

Suits For Wheeling Wear, For Town and Country.

Bicycle riding having now become almost as common a habit as walking, the bicycle costume is an interesting subject to most women, although it is no longer the burning topic that it was at first, when it served as a bone of contention for extremists both pro and con. All women do not wear the same kind of bicycle suit, not simply because there is diversity in taste, but because there are individual points to be considered, such as age, weight and the sort of riding to be done. A woman who bowls along a few miles upon an asphalted pavement in the level streets of a city can clothe herself much more daintily than one who takes long trips over rough country roads, where mud, water and dust are abundant, tumbles a thing to be anticipated and a drenching shower not an impossibility, to say nothing of a great deal of exertion and consequent warmth, prone to wilt frills and furbelows. Frills and furbelows are never, indeed, appropriate to bicycle clothing, which should be always of the tailor made order, trim, close and free from floating ends and fluttering accessories, but white, mastic and pale gray gowns, patent leather shoes and similar attire may be worn by the easy rider, who is contented with a spin around the square, whereas the country excursionist must get herself up in a far more substantial fashion.

The cut shows a bicycle costume of gray cloth, stitched ornamentally with black. The skirt is short, and there is a bolero with two steel buttons, having stitched revers and a crenelated collar. The pocket flap, sleeves and cuffs are also stitched. The skirt waist is of black and white check, the belt of tan leather with a steel buckle. The gray straw hat is trimmed with black. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Hats and Bonnets of the Prevailing Fashion.

Hats and bonnets are of the airiest texture, gauze, mousseline de soie and tulle being immensely employed for them. One of the most novel and delicate millinery trimmings consists of large balls of tulle on a tall wire stem. The balls are made of ruffles of tulle gathered together at the center on the same principle that is exemplified in ball penwipers. Large flowers—often really colossal roses, bluets, etc. —are favorites, and there are toques all of flowers, as well as hats having either the brim or the crown of flowers, while the rest is of something else. Open straw and straw finely embroidered are also much worn and are very light. The old fashion of foliage covered with a white bloom is revived, and great bunches of such whitened leaves are seen on many hats and bonnets alone or combined with flowers.

Bluets are probably more worn than any other flower. Then come violets and afterward a crowd of flowers held in about the same esteem, one as another. Roses and cowslips of all colors and hyacinths have a prominent place. Less frequently seen, but exceedingly attractive, are clusters of hydrangea in the delicate natural shades of blue, pink, green and lavender combined with white. These are a charming decoration for a white or pale gray hat, and some exquisite models are exhibited.

The picture shows a toque of draped straw of a cherry red, which forms a large knot in front, pierced by a long, curling feather, which turns to the right. At the left side is a large bunch of lilies of the valley. The same idea may be carried out in dark blue straw, with a black or brown feather and bluets. JUDIC CHOLLET.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Get the trees set out before the leaves begin to open out.

To give the best results peaches require a well drained, loamy soil.

Better results can be secured with peaches if thorough cultivation is given.

When trees are given plenty of room, they usually take a natural and graceful form.

Dwarf pears should be pruned in pyramid form by pinching back the tops of the young shoots.

Now is a good time to give the trees in the orchard a good washing with strong soapsuds. It will help to rid them of pests.

One of the best ways of manuring grapevines is to supply well rotted manure broadcast and then work it in by cultivation.

It is impossible for fruit trees to bear fruit and keep thrifty for any length of time unless the soil is kept enriched by manures.

Fruit production is a heavy drain on the vitality of a plant, and for this reason the blossoms on newly set strawberry plants should be taken off.

In the care of fruit trees thorough cultivation is important, especially for five or six years after planting, after which the ground may be seeded to clover.

THE ROYAL BOX.

The Prince of Wales ever since the laming of his knee has walked with an old ebony cane once the property of George IV during the latter's regency.

Kaiser Wilhelm we usually call a Hohenzollern; but, as a matter of fact, the real name has been lengthened by the addition of Hohen, upper. He is a descendant of the Count of Zollern, Thassalon by name, who founded the line about the year 800.

The czar has from his boyhood been a keen cyclist, and the czarina, when her health permitted, has occasionally shown her skill as a wheelwoman, but latterly his majesty appears to have given up pedaling, and he has just had made for himself in Paris a petroleum tricycle.

The Princess Louise, marchioness of Lorne, reached her fifty-first birthday recently, whereupon the bells of Windsor were rung merrily and a royal salute was fired in the Long walk. It must be a terrible thing to be a woman and not able to slide over one's fifty-first birthday without having public attention called to it.

WOMEN'S WAYS.

A woman's idea of making home attractive is to fill it full of crazy little tables which fall over when a man looks at them.—Chicago Record.

During the first three months of every engagement the girl makes a confessional of the man. Later she wishes she hadn't confessed so much.—Atchison Globe.

Many a wife dusts the billiard chalk from her husband's coat and sheds tears of sympathy because of the late hours he must spend at his desk close to a white-washed wall.—Chicago News.

A woman wandered about New York streets examining new spring hats until she made herself a nuisance. She had no money to buy one, and when she was ordered to leave the millinery alone she attempted to drown herself in the store fountain. O Mother Eve, what a legacy you have left your descendants!—Boston Traveler.

STATE LINES.

Life imprisonment for debt is possible under the New Jersey laws. The safest way is to keep out of—New Jersey.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Missouri enterprise got in its work this season. A splendid article of pure maple sugar was placed upon the market fully two weeks before the sap began to run.—St. Louis Star.

A Kentucky jury acquitted a colored man and convicted two white men who were engaged in the same game of craps. Things like this show what "the white man's burden" is in Kentucky.—Louisville Commercial.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Wash mirrors in warm suds, then dust on whiting and rub with a chamois.

Ceilings that have become smoked by a kerosene lamp should be washed off with a weak soda water.

It is worth remembering that when brasses have been rubbed to a high state of polish they may be brushed over with a little brass lacquer or shellac that can be had at any varnish store. In this way their fine condition will be preserved indefinitely and much toilsome work obviated.

She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. The West Durham News, Bowmanville, says: "W. C. Tole, Phm. B., left on Saturday last for Peterborough where he has taken a position in the old established firm of Ormond & Walsh, one of the leading drug stores in Peterborough. This firm are to be congratulated on securing the services of a young man of such stirling worth and gilt-edged business ability. His character needs no comment—always manly and honorable and respected by everyone. During the four years he has spent with Messrs. Higginbotham & Son, he was always noted for his close attention to business, never losing an opportunity to further his employer's interests. During his course at college this last year he passed all his exams. with honors and won the degree of Bachelor of Pharmacy, from Toronto University. His many friends in this district would have been pleased to see him in business here, but whether he returns to West Durham or not, we predict for him a brilliant future."

Disgraceful Streets.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—What is the matter? Simcoe-st. leading east from Water-st., is in a most disgraceful condition at present. A pump maker seemingly is allowed to have a wood yard on it. The Gas Company made a ditch along from their gas house some time ago to lay down pipes, and have left the street in a great mess. Cannot they be compelled to leave the road passable? And as for burdocks and noxious weeds on each side of the sidewalk, it looks as if we were travelling from Burleigh Falls to Apsley, and this is allowed to go on in this beautiful town of ours. Surely some one is to blame for this state of affairs existing.

Yours,
DISGUSTED RATEPAYER.

THE NEW TELEPHONE CO.

The Bell Company Seeking to Keep Them Out of Lindsay.

There is something like a telephone war on the tapis in Lindsay and district, as a result of the Victoria Telephone Co., of Woodville, seeking a franchise to enter Lindsay. The Bell Telephone Co. is seeking an exclusive franchise for which it is willing to pay $100 a year, and give the town two free instruments and the use of their poles for a fire alarm wire.

A meeting of the Council and Board of Trade was held on Wednesday night to discuss the matter but the representatives of the new telephone company could not be there.

There was considerable discussion and finally Mr. Scott, of the Bell Co., was heard. He said he dropped in to hear the discussion, not expecting to be recognized, as an officer of the Bell Telephone Co. That company had not proposed paying for a franchise—the request had come from a member of the council, Mr. Scotheran. As for Peterborough there had been a very strong and wealthy rival company there, and they had put up a hard fight, yet a deputation of citizelins proceeded to Montreal to urge the Bell Co. to end the fight by buying out its rival. The company had franchises in nearly every town and city in Canada where they desired to have one. Alderman Crandell had alluded to the Quebec company; he doubtless meant the People's Co. in Sherbrooke. Well, that company had fought hard, yet to-day they were begging the Bell Co. to buy them out at its own price, and so far the request has been refused. Probably Cameron, served by the Bell Co., is as important to Lindsay as any of the other points named as likely to be reached by the new company—well, the total revenue of that station in five months reached the large sum of $7.50, and had been paid principally by commercial travellers and doctors. Little Britain was a lively little village, yet the messages passing over that point to Lindsay averaged but one every three days. His experience had been that these district lines did not develop business with towns. The total revenue of the Lindsay exchange outside of long distance messages had been $2,414.15 last year, while the Lindsay expenditure had been $1,845.50, leaving only about $500 to pay profits, depreciation and other fixed charges. Keeping that statement in hand, the opinion of one Lindsay alderman that the company can afford to pay $1,000 for the franchise was somewhat wide of the mark.

After some further discussion it was decided to adjourn the meeting until Tuesday evening, July 11th, when a full meeting of the Council and Board of Trade will meet the Victoria Co. representatives and Mr. Scott, of the Bell Co.

A SPLENDID OUTING.

Annual Picnic of St. Paul's Sunday School Held to Jubilee Point.

The annual excursion of St. Paul's Sunday school was held yesterday and was one of the most successful and pleasant that have ever been held under the same auspices. Jubilee Point is pronounced by the officers to be the ideal place for a Sunday school picnic. The City of Peterborough left the wharf with a good crowd on board shortly after eight o'clock, and the sail down was a very pleasant one. The day was a beautiful one and the fine view over Rice lake could be seen to good advantage. The afternoon's outing was greatly enjoyed by all, both children and adults and when the steamer reached town about nine at night all were delighted with the picnic.

PROFICIENCY CERTIFICATES.

The Record of the Peterborough Public Library Drawing Class.

The members of the class in machine drawing conducted at the Public Library have done credit to themselves and their class in the recent examinations held by the Education Department of Ontario. In the recent results published by the Department a few days ago it was noticed, probably, that the Peterborough Public Library class succeeded in obtaining five proficiency certificates in machine drawing, while the Hamilton Art school received only three, Galt Public Library two, Ottawa Art school one and Ottawa Technical school one.

Of the five certificates granted to our class four were obtained by pupils who have been in attendance during one session only. The names of the successful candidates in alphabetical order are Messrs Wm Allison, Peter Gillespie, Chester W Laing, C D Mathias and Walter D McClennan. These gentlemen are to be congratulated on their success in passing an examination which was by no means an easy one, and the instructor, Mr W J Francis, deserves great credit for bringing the class to such a high state of proficiency. We are pleased to know that our students are able to hold their own in machine drawing as well as in other subjects that have recently been brought to our notice.

It is understood that the prizes will be awarded after the next meeting of the Public Library Board, and it is promised with the percentages obtained by the pupils at both the local and Toronto examinations.

WHEEL AND HORSE

A Bicycle Wrecked in a Collision Near the Post Office This Morning.

Mr A J Raddon, of the Trent Canal office, had his wheel demolished this morning in a collision on Hunter-st., just near the post office. He was riding west on the north side of the street and claims that he was crowded off the road by a boy driving the delivery waggon of Mr J Weir, Ashburnham, with the result that in order to avoid being run down by this Mr Raadon was forced straight into the horse and buggy of Mr. E. Welsh, which was standing by the sidewalk. He went into the horse with the speed of the light brigade and it jumped and came down with all its hoofs into the bicycle and, running forward drew the buggy over the remains. The wheel was badly smashed up and Mr Raddon had a very narrow escape from being trampled. He was very indignant and claims that the driver was disobeying all the rules of the road.

ENGLISH ARMY BLACKING is the handsomest and the best all-round blacking in the world.

A Dip in the Lake.

While canoeing at Chemong lake yesterday Messrs D Rammings and H Hutchinson, of town, were upset in the lake, about one hundred yards from the boat house. Mr Hutchinson could swim and was in no danger, but Mr Rammings could not and had to be assisted to shore by his companion, it being reached with some difficulty. A warning for boys to be careful in canoes may not be out of place.

A Thrilling Entertainment.

Perhaps the most thrilling entertainment on record was one witnessed in the Romagna, which was as unexpected as it was unauthorized. It was the last day of the carnival, and the theater of Formlipopoli was packed with a crowd of spectators awaiting the rise of the curtain. After a long delay the curtain went up, only to disclose a stage occupied by 100 brigands facing the audience with pointed rifles.

The leader of the strange cast, Il Passatore, one of the most ruthless robbers of any age, bowed profoundly to the horror stricken audience and explained that the theater was surrounded by his men, that the first man who attempted to escape would be shot, and that he and his merry men would proceed to collect any money and valuables they had with them.

The brigand and his men then descended from the stage and stripped the audience of their possessions to the value of $400,000. He then thanked them all in a graceful speech and left the theater. It is comforting to know that he and 100 of his brigands were captured shortly after and that they paid a heavy penalty for their evening's entertainment.

GEORGE-ST. SUNDAY SCHOOL AFLOAT.

The Annual Excursion to Juniper Island, Stony Lake—A Pleasant Day and Successful Trip.

George-st. Sunday school scored its usual annual success yesterday by the trip to Juniper Island, about 450 all told taking in the excursion. The run was made by train to Lakefield and by steamer Sunbeam and barge to Juniper. The day promised rain, but fortunately the rain held off and the weather was delightful. The island was reached at noon, and a general table having been set out in the pavilion, dinner was partaken of and enjoyed. There was ample provision and willing help and the children, young and older, had all they could consume. After dinner the steamer took all who wished to go on a sail around the lake and returned to the island at 4 o'clock when the start was made for home. Lakefield was reached in good time and town at 8 o'clock The committees of the school were energetic in looking after the comfort of all, Messrs A E Dixon and J S Knapman having charge of the several committees. The officers of the school were pleased to see that this year a larger number of the parents attended the excursion than before, thus manifesting an interest in the school. The proprietors of the Sunbeam, Messrs Whyte & Grylls, were very obliging and had made such arrangements that the large number of little ones were perfectly safe while on the boat or barge.

TALK OF OLD LONDON.

LADY BERESFORD ELECTED PRESIDENT OF A CAT CLUB.

The Organization Is for the Purpose of Promoting the Welfare of the Cat, and for Giving Cat Exhibitions Annually in London—Some Idea of the Institution.

Lady Charles Beresford, one of the wittiest women in England, has just been elected president of a cat's club, organized for the purpose of promoting the welfare of the cat and for giving cat exhibitions every year in London.

It is along the lines of the existing cat clubs.

Lady Beresford's sister-in-law, Lady William Beresford, is an honorary member.

For the benefit of such ladies as may wish to organize a cat club on similar conditions, some idea of the cat club of Lady Beresford and of other cat clubs in England may be given.

To organize such a club the members pledge themselves to maintain a certain number of cats in comfort and to discourage the keeping of any that are not up to the required markings. The pedigreed cats are the ones that win the prizes, but it has been recently decided that if any unpedigreed cat will show the required markings she may be admitted to cat shows.

There are books that tell how to judge a cat. These describe the softness of coat, the slant of the eye, the fullness of the nostrils, and the shape of the head. Both the Angora and the domestic cat are admitted.

One of the cat fanciers of England, a friend of Lady Henry Somerset, has built a model cat farm. It is an acre square and she has 300 cats comfortably housed upon it.

The same idea might be carried out in as small a place as the backyard. Each cat family has a small house provided with hay and food cups. At the rear there is a runway where the cats can get the air. They travel contentedly up and down the grassy paths, bordered by wire, and roll in the heap of sand provided for them.

A CAT'S MODEL HOME.

This woman raises Angoras only and reaps a very nice income from her annual sale of pussies.

The cat industry is one that is highly lucrative. A pair of Angoras of pure strain were the foundation for a very flourishing cat family in Kentucky—the home of thoroughbreds—from which the kittens are shipped all over the country.

COLD CURE

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

"It is she. If you would only take me to her. I would at once be rid of all these doubts and fears."

"Would you come?"

John has forgotten the warning of Mustapha, forgotten all former experiences. There is a crowd gathering around them, and this is one of the things he was to guard against, still he pays little attention to this fact, his mind is so bent upon accomplishing his object.

"Eagerly. Once this night I have risked much to find my mother, and I am ready to do more."

"Then, follow me. Better still, walk at my side, for I see ugly faces around. You have made enemies, but I will stand between. My garb is sacred, and they respect it."

"I am ready, lead on."

What is this that plucks at his sleeve? He half-turns impatiently, and looks into a face he ought to know full well, but which he now sees with something of annoyance.

"Ah? professor, is it you? Sorry—in something of a hurry——"

"Hold on; some one wants to see you."

"Have to do later."

"Don't say so, John. Important, I tell you."

"So is this. Good-bye."

The professor is not so easily shaken off, but tightens his hold. John will have to dislodge him by muscular force.

"Are you coming?" asks the Sister.

"Yes, when I have broken loose from the hands of this madman."

He turns upon the professor.

"John, be careful. Cool off; you are excited."

"I'm of an age to take care of myself. When I need a guardian, I'll call on you. Once more I say, release your grasp."

He actually looks ugly for the moment, and Philander does let go, but it is only because, as an advance courier, he has accomplished his mission and not on account of any fear.

As Doctor Chicago turns to follow the Sister, he draws in a long breath, for he finds himself face to face with Lady Ruth.

She has hurried up behind Philander, and near by can be seen the British soldier and Aunt Gwen, also pushing forward as rapidly as the assembling crowd will allow.

"Doctor Craig."

Her presence recalls John to his senses.

"I am going to see my mother, Lady Ruth," he says, as if apologizing for his rudeness.

"With whom?"

"This Sister."

Lady Ruth surveys the other from her veil to the hem of her dress.

"I would advise you not to do so, doctor."

"Why do you say that?" he asks, astonished.

"Because you will regret it, because you are being made the victim of another plot."

"Lady Ruth, do I hear aright? Do you fully realise what it is you say?"

"I am conscious of the gravity of the charge, but that does not prevent me from asserting it. I repeat what I said before, that you are again the victim of a plot. As to this Sister here, can it be possible you do not know her?"

He shakes his head.

"Have you seen her face?"

"It is old and shrivelled—that of a stranger."

At this the Sister throws back her veil, and they see the features John describes.

"After all, I am right," says John, with the air of a man who attempts to justify himself.

At that the English girl laughs scornfully.

"Really, I did not think men could be so easily deceived, and one whom I considered as shrewd as you, Doctor Chicago. See what a miserable deception, a fraud transferred from the boards of a New York theatre to Algiers. Behold! the magic wand touches age with a gentle touch, and what follows?"

Lady Ruth is standing between the two and within arm's length of either.

The Sister has not moved, but, as if confident of influencing John, holds her own. She shoots daggers with her eyes at the English girl, but looks cannot hurt.

As Lady Ruth utters her last words she makes a sudden move.

With a dexterous fling of an arm, she succeeds in tearing from the Sister's face the cleverly made thin stage mask that has contrived to conceal the features of one that did a double act.

The professor laughs.

From the crowd that is still gathering various sounds arise, for no one can even give a guess as to the nature of the peculiar trick which is thus being enacted.

As for John Craig, he holds his breath at the stupendous nature of the disclosed, for little as he has dreamed of the fact, he sees before him the well-known features of Pauline Potter.

This queen of the stage has made even another attempt to get John, and might have succeeded only for the opportune coming of his friends.

He backs away from her.

"So, it is you again, wretched girl?" he exclaims in something of righteous wrath.

She has lost once more, but this is frolic to one of her nature, and she laughs in his face.

"Oh, it's a long road that has no turning, and my chance will yet come! Bah! I snap my fingers at such weak friendship. Good-night, all of you, but not good-bye."

Then she disappears.

Craig feels abashed.

He has almost come to blows with his best friend about this female, and after all, she turns out to be the plotting Pauline.

"I think I need a guardian," he murmurs, as if rather disgusted with himself.

"From the ugly looks some of these chaps are bending on you, I think ditto," declares Philander, nor are his words without meaning, for the natives scowl dreadfully.

"Lady Ruth, I owe you thanks; but, while we walk to the hotel, tell me how you came to know she was masquerading in that style."

"It is easily told, sir. A mere accident put me in possession of the facts, and, thank Heaven, I am able to build two and two together. You are frank enough, Doctor Craig, to give me certain particulars concerning that creature's plotting, and that confidence has now borne fruit.

"Listen, then. I was in the hotel, in my room. Some freak of fortune placed her in the apartment opposite. Knowing what presumably brought her to Algiers, the desire to have revenge upon you, I entertained a feeling of almost contempt for a woman who could so far forget her sex and seek a man who loved her not. If it were I whom you jilted, Doctor Chicago, I would freeze you with scorn."

"Jove! I don't doubt it, Lady Ruth, but please Heaven you will never have the chance," he says, in a half-serious, half-joking way.

"To return to my story, then," she continues, blushing under the ardent look that has accompanied his words, "the queer part of it lies in the fact that a transom over my door was partly open. There was a black paper back of the glass, which gave it the properties of a mirror.

"Over her door was a similar contrivance, and as I sat there in the darkness of my room, pondering over what has happened, my attention was attracted by a flash of light, and, looking up, I saw the interior of her room as plainly as though looking through the door—saw her assume the garb of a Sister—saw her try on that horrible face-mask before a mirror, and realised that the clever actress, Pauline Potter, was about to again undertake some quixotic crusade in the furtherance of her plans.

"Later on, Aunt Gwen came and said we had better go outside to hear the music and see the crowd, so I came out, but all the while I had been puzzling my brain wondering what she hoped to accomplish with that clever disguise, nor did the truth break in upon my mind until we discovered her talking to Doctor Chicago. Then I comprehended all."

"And I am again indebted to your clever woman's wit," he says warmly.

"Who can tell from what dreadful fate I saved you," she laughs; "for this same Pauline seems determined that you shall not remain a merry bachelor all your days."

"So far as that is concerned, I quite agree with Pauline. Where we differ is upon the subject that shall be the cause of my becoming a benedict. She chooses one person, and I chance to prefer another. That is all, but it is quite enough, as you have seen, Lady Ruth, to create a tempest in a tea-pot."

"Here we are at the hotel," she hastens to say, as if fearing lest he push the subject then and there to a more legitimate conclusion, for she has learned that these young Chicago men generally get there when they start: "and I am not sorry for one. Look around you, doctor!"

This he does for the first time, and is startled to discover that they have been accompanied across the square by at least half a dozen natives, who gaze upon John much as might wolves that were kept from attacking the sheep by the presence of faithful guards.

"They don't seem to bear me any good-will, I declare; but I am bound to prosecute my search, in spite of every Arab in Algiers," is the only remark he makes, meeting glance for glance.

They have not yet succeeded in cowing the spirit in John Craig, though the man has a poor chance who incurs the vindictive race hatred of Mohammedan devotees in their own country.

The others enter also.

Sir Lionel, not a bit abashed by the failure of his grand plan for saving the life of Lady Ruth in the harbor of Malta, still haunts her shadow. He knows John Craig has a strong suspicion of the truth, but having read that young man's character before now, feels quite certain that he will not speak of the subject without positive proof, which he cannot secure.

Besides, the Briton came out of the affair with such hard luck, that there is much sympathy for him. He lives in the hope of retrieving his fallen fortunes.

Thus the little party breaks up, to meet again on the morrow.

John Craig's only hope now of success in his quest lies in the Moor, Ben Taleb. If the spirit so moves him, he can bring him and his mother face to face, but whether this will ever come to pass remains to be seen.

John, ere retiring, catches sight of the faithful Mustapha Cadi, who lounges near by, and who makes a signal, as he catches his employer's eye, that brings Craig to his side.

"Where does the master sleep?" he asks.

John explains the position of his room, having some curiosity to know why the courier asks.

"Monsieur should be careful about leaving his windows open; Arabs climb well; vines very handy; yataghan make no shout. There is no disgrace in being prepared."

This is too broad to admit of any misinterpretation, and John again makes up his mind to continual watchfulness.

He retires to seek rest, to dream of a strange conglommeration of gray eyes, and black and brown—that he is compelled to choose between the English girl, the Chicago actress and the Moorish beauty, while death waits to claim him, no matter which one he selects.

CHAPTER XV.

John Craig takes all the precautions that the courier mentions, for he does not care to awaken in the night and find a dark-faced fanatic of a Mohammedan in his room, sworn to accomplish his death.

Perhaps his safety is in part due to this; at any rate morning comes and finds him undisturbed.

When he descends from his room he has a vague hope that some word may have come from Ben Taleb.

In this respect he is doomed to disappointment, for there is no letter. So another day of waiting begins. The doctor is determined by nature, and has made up his mind that he will not give up his mission, until he has accomplished that which he set out to perform, no matter if he spends weeks in the African city at the foot of the hills known as Sahel.

The others join him by degrees.

Such charming weather; a dozen trips for the day are proposed and rejected. All conclude to wait until after breakfast, when they will be in a condition to discuss the matter and decide just what is best to be done.

John is ready to join them and see the sights, for there is a chance that he may in this way run across the one he seeks, if she be moving about the city on errands of mercy, as becomes her order.

Besides, he places considerable dependence upon the promise of the old Moor.

So he enters into the discussion with assumed vigor, being magnetized now by the blue eyes of Lady Ruth.

They ask the advice of Mustapha Cadi, and he promises to show them many queer sights before the sun sinks behind the hills and the boom of the gun in the fortress announces the close of another day.

Thus, all of them prepare for a day's outing, and Lady Ruth looks quite charming in her jaunty costume, especially suited for such business.

John no longer remembers the dazzling beauty of the Moorish girl who sat at the feet of old Ben Taleb on the preceding night; it could not compare with the vivacious intelligence of an educated girl coming from the countries beyond the seas.

First of all, they mount the terraces of Mustapha Superieur and enjoy the magnificent view of the city and harbor. Many modern yachts lie upon the blue waters, side by side with strange vessels peculiar to the Mediterranean, while the incoming steamer from Oran is just entering the harbor.

ARBITRATION IS THE THEME.

A Revised Proposal to Institute a Permanent Court.

The Hague Peace Conference Now Considering Its 56 Articles—Clause 23 Provides That Each Nation Is to Name Four Persons Who Are Recognized as Competent to Deal With Questions of International Law.

The Hague, July 7.—The revised proposal regarding the institution of a permanent court of arbitration, which will be submitted to the committee to-day, consists of 56 articles. Those regarding the constitution of the court itself are substantially identified with Sir Julian Pauncefote's original project. Clause 23 is interesting in that it provides that each signatory power shall designate within three months following the ratification, not more than four persons recognized as competent to deal with questions of international law, who are ready to accept the office of arbitrators. The bureau will keep a list of the nominees who will be entitled to sit as members of the court, and will report to the signatory powers all modifications therein. Two or more powers can designate the same members. Members will be nominated for six years and eligible to re-nomination. In case of the death or retirement of a member of the court the vacancy shall be filled in the same manner as the original nomination.

At a Royal Banquet.

Amsterdam, July 7.—Queen Wilhelmina and the Queen Mother arrived here yesterday afternoon, and, amid a popular demonstration, proceeded to the Palace. The members of the international peace conference arrived from The Hague at 6.30 o'clock in the afternoon by special train and proceeded from the station directly to the Palace, where they were received by the Queens, after which they were entertained at a magnificent banquet in the Palace. At the banquet Queen Wilhelmina proposed a toast as follows: "I sincerely rejoice to see assembled around me to-day the delegates to the conference, and to be permitted to renew my wishes for the success of your work, due to the initiative of the Czar of the Russians. I am glad to offer you the hospitality of my residence. I drink to the health of all the sovereigns and chiefs of the states of which you are the representatives."

SPECIAL OFFICERS.

Britain Sends Them to Organize Residents, Police and Local Forces on Transvaal Frontier.

London, July 7.—The Times this morning says that several officers, including Brevet Col Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, commanding the Fifth Dragoon Guards; Capt. Lord Edward Cecil (fifth son of the Marquis of Salisbury) of the Grenadiers, and Lieut. the Hon. Algernon Henry Charles Hanbury-Tracy (second son of Baron Sudley) of the Royal Horse Guards, have been ordered to proceed to South Africa to organize the residents as well as the police and local forces at various points on the frontier.

"Additional special service officers," says The Times, "are likely to be sent out during the next few days and the commander-in-chief has been engaged in completing the composition and organization of a larger force, which it will be necessary to despatch should the negotiations with the Transvaal fail."

Kruger Gives More.

Pretoria, July 7.—The Volksraad sat in session yesterday. President Kruger and the negotiators from the Orange Free State were present. It is understood that an agreement was reached to grant the franchise immediately to all settlers prior to 1890, and to other classes of residents within seven years, the naturalization clause to be optional. These proposals will be debated in open session to-day.

The Franchise Proposals.

Johannesburg, July 7.—It is reported from Cape Town and Bloemfontein that the franchise proposals accepted by the Pretoria conference will grant the franchise immediately to residents who have been in the country since 1890, and to others after five years' residence from the date of the new law. The proposals will also give Johannesburg five representatives in the Volksraad.

Arms for the Boers.

London, July 7.—A despatch from Naples yesterday says a steamer has left there with arms for the Transvaal Republic.

DR. GAUTHIER ENDORSES

The statement that Mr. Major owes his life to . . . . DR. CHASE'S Kidney Liver Pills

Dr. J. T. A. Gauthier, of Valleyfield, Que., writes: "I, the undersigned, certify that the contents of this letter, in regard to the cure of Mr. Isadore Major, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, is correct."

Here is Mr. Major's letter: "After 20 years of suffering from backache and kidney disease I owe my life to Dr. A. W. Chase. I had tried an endless variety of remedies to no avail, and on the recommendation of a friend began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Two pills that night and two next morning gave great relief, and I continued their use until now I am completely cured. My friends are surprised and pleased to see me well again, for I spent hundreds of dollars in vain trying to get cured. Before using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills my back ached so I could not put on my shoes and couldn't lift 20 lbs. My shoulders were sore, I had headaches and a bad taste in the mouth. These troubles are now entirely gone and what I say I am ready to prove. I have told my friends of my wonderful cure, and many have been greatly benefited by using these pills."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the greatest kidney cure the world has ever known. One pill a dose, 25c. a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

SURF SLIDING IN HAWAII.

An Old Time Incident of the Indulgence In It of Royal Dames.

The old practice of surf sliding—"hee nalu"—upon surf boards was magnificent sport. It has fallen almost entirely into disuse since 40 years ago, when horses became numerous and cheap. Before that date I used frequently to see it at Lahaina as well as earlier at Kailua. I believe some adepts still practice it at Hilo. The board used in surf sliding is from 5 to 8 feet long and 10 to 15 inches wide, rounded at the ends and sharpened at the edges, very much like a paper cutter. The rider swims out with the board under one arm, diving under the rollers until outside where the surf is just beginning to break. There, by an adroit movement, he stretches himself upon the board just in front of a big roller, at the same time violently plying arms and legs to "get a move on," while the roller lifts him from behind. Once in motion the wave does the rest, although great skill is needed to keep the board poised precisely at the proper height and inclination upon the front of the violently breaking roller. The riders will thus shoot several hundred yards to the shore.

By early and long practice great skill was attained in this sport. The more expert would often rise to a standing posture, balancing their boards by their feet at the right point on the wave. I can remember in early boyhood daily watching from my home through the stems of the lofty cocoa palms scores of natives flying in together in the white roaring surf. Some were prone, others crouching on their boards and some standing erect. Both sexes participated, and modesty was much at a discount, except when the venerated missionary was in sight. The males wore the malo or breech girdle when disporting thus in our neighborhood. The females did not stand up on their boards.

Customs in those early days were Arcadian. At about 1834 the writer's young mother at Kailua once received in her thatched cottage a morning call from a bevy of royal dames with their attendants, all fresh from surf play. The maidens carried the garments while their mistresses stalked into the missionary's parlor in stately simplicity and proceeded to dress. All that was utterly innocent, and so in a certain sense was the nearly entire unrestraint of domestic morals in those early days. To infuse some degree of conscience on that point has been altogether the most difficult part of the missionary's task in Hawaii.

WANDERINGS OF PARE AND HOLDEN

THE STORY TOLD BY A MAIL AND EMPIRE CORRESPONDENT.

Where and How They Travelled After Breaking From the Napanee Gaol—An Interesting Story of Their Doings.

The Mail and Empire yesterday published an interesting account of the wanderings of Pare and, Holden, the Napanee bank robbers, since their escape from Napanee gaol. The Toronto daily's correspondent went down and met the detectives and the prisoners returning on the train and gathered the news of their doings. The despatch reads:—

After two months wandering through the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the State of Maine, and the Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the escaped convicts were trapped by a country constable in a small town nearly seven hundred miles from the place of their escape.

STUCK BY HIS PAL.

It seems as if it were the irony of fate, and those seven hundred miles nothing like represent the distance they have wandered since the morning of May 1st, when they made their escape. Time and again they were compelled to retrace their steps to avoid all possible danger of detection. Even the tale of romance was cast into the convicts' lot. Holden's intention was to take ship at Halifax or Campbellton and get out of the country, but as Pare was suffering from a lame leg he would not leave him, and in standing by his pal, was caught along with him.

The Mail and Empire correspondent left Montreal Wednesday and proceeded down the line to meet the party, which he did at some distance from Montreal. Pare and Holden were found in the smoking compartment of the first class coach, closely guarded by Inspector Greer and Officer Duncan, of Campbellton, who accompanied the party to Montreal. Both Pare and Holden caused the officers a good deal of trouble on the way up. They were evidently chafing at their capture after so long a struggle for liberty, and they were surly and disagreeable. As they were securely handcuffed to each other they were incapable of resistance, but there was a dangerous light in Holden's eyes, and both men in their appearances bore evidences of the hard times they had been through since their escape from Napanee. Their clothes were worn and delapidated. Holden was dressed in a drab suit much the worse for wear, with a soft grey hat. Pare wore a dark blue suit which was also worn, and a dark brown soft felt hat. Pare's appearance was much the worse of the two men. He looked tired. He wore a short stubby beard over his thin face. Holden has kept up flesh pretty well, and looked like a giant beside his companion. Pare was inclined to be communicative, but Holden was morose and sullen, and sat most of the time smoking an old pipe. A characteristic incident happened on the way to Montreal. The local newspaper man, who was on the train and who knew Pare in former years, dropped into the smoking car and commenced to speak to Pare in French. Pare proceeded to talk very freely, but was suddenly shut up by Holden, who told him he was talking too much. He threatened to brain the newspaper man if he did not get out, and the latter made his exit.

Holden clearly showed that he was in a desperate frame of mind, and if he had had the power he would have made things lively. Holden had a special grudge against the police authorities at Campbellton, complaining bitterly that they had taken what little money they had from them. "Hang it," he said, "there is no use of them picking our bones; there is a limit to that kind of thing."

THE ESCAPE.

The movements of Pare and Holden from the time of their escape from the Napanee gaol down to the moment of their capture at Campbellton on Thursday last, furnish interesting reading. Their movements are sketched from the story told by the two men to Inspector Greer, and the Mail and Empire correspondent.

It was, as is known, Pare whose active brain devised the scheme of escape, and who, after unlocking his own cell door, released Holden. It was generally understood that there was a good deal of bad blood between the two men owing to Pare's confession, but the detectives are inclined to believe that much of this apparent bad feeling was made-believe, and that there was an understanding between the two men. They now acknowledge that they had a regular system of communication with each other in the Napanee prison by means of knocks on the wall, and Pare, who was an active schemer, was able to make known his plans to Holden, who was expected to assist in their execution. If there was any bad feeling between the two it seems to have been removed. Pare opened Holden's cell doors and the two found themselves outside of the prison walls, once more free men. Then followed a consultation as to the route they should follow, and the means they should take to make good their escape.

Holden was for striking out west and getting in to the States as soon as possible, but Pare, fearing that as a French-Canadian, he would be more liable to detection in English districts, favoured striking for the Province of Quebec, and thence into the States.

STUCK TOGETHER.

Pare's plan was finally agreed upon, and from that stage until the time of their arrest through all their wanderings both men stuck together. The first night and day after their escape they kept to the north side of the St. Lawrence, keeping under cover as much as possible, and finally reached Coteau Junction, where they crossed the St. Lawrence to Valleyfield. Following the south shore down, they worked their way through the Province of Quebec into the State of Maine. It took them several weeks to accomplish this stage of their journey, and all the time they were careful to avoid populous centres, and to appear as simple tramps, subsisting on what they could pick up on the way. Even when out of Canadian territory, and in the State of Maine, they were fearful of detection, and according to their own stories, they tramped the Maine woods and the back country until about two weeks ago, when they struck across to Nova Scotia, and landed near Halifax. They wandered about the country districts for some days, and then retraced their steps to St. Johns, N.B., where they were a week ago last Sunday. From St. John the worked their way up the line of the Intercolonial to Campbellton, where they arrived on Thursday last.

WHY THEY STRUCK EAST.

The object of the two men, according to their own story, had in striking for Campbellton, was that, being a small seaport town, they would likely be better able to get on board some out-going vessel without attracting much attention. But instead of escaping detection, they walked right into a trap. It must be remembered that during the time that had elapsed since their escape the authorities had not been idle. Inspector Greer, of Toronto, who had charge of the case, had sent out a circular letter containing cuts of the two men, and a full description of them. Inspector Greer seems to have been working on the assumption, which the results showed to be well founded, that the men would strike east, probably making for Halifax or some other seaport town. He sent copies of his circulars and wrote personally to the authorities of all the places where the men would most likely strike at.

Amongst those who received a circular and letter from Inspector Greer was Chief of Police Duncan, of Campbellton, and he kept a close watch for the men, for whose capture there had been offered a substantial reward of one thousand dollars by the Ontario Government. On Thursday last two rather suspicious tramps arrived at Campbellton in a box car, and, alighting from the car, made their way to a small hotel kept by a man named Santong.

Officer Duncan, who was on the lookout, noticed the tramps, and followed them up. Thinking there was something suspicious about them, he arrested them, but finding that they were unarmed, and as they claimed to be simply poor tramps, he released them. He had no sooner done so, however, than, remembering the circular he had received, the idea flashed across his mind that they might be the famous bank breakers, and when he consulted the photographs he had in his possession, the suspicion was confirmed. He at once summoned assistance, and with the co-operation of others, he at once rearrested the pair.

Pare took his arrest philosophically, but Holden was desperate, and Officer Duncan and his assistants had considerable difficulty in handling the stalwart, who stands over six feet high, and is built in proportion. Holden subsequently stated that it was a good thing he had not had any weapons on him, or he would have killed five or six of his captors.

It would seem strange that neither Pare nor Holden, knowing what they might expect if any suspicion fell upon them, were not prepared for resistance, but in not carrying arms they had a clever object in view. Being old hands at the business, they knew that the mere fact of their having arms on them would increase suspicion, while if they were found unarmed, they would be regarded as harmless tramps.

The soundness of this idea was proved by the fact that they were at first released, and only rearrested when Officer Duncan had confirmed his suspicions as to who they really were.

After their arrest, the two men, carefully guarded, were removed to the Campbellton lockup, a rather primitive affair. Officer Duncan, however, was determined that his prisoners should not affect their escape while under his charge, and he had extra guards put over them. In the meantime he had wired to Inspector Greer, and received instructions in reply to hold the men safely until they could be identified.

Is a matter of small importance compared with other applications of electricity. By this agency Polson's Nerviline is made to penetrate to the most remote nerve—every bone, muscle and ligament is made to feel its beneficient power. Nerviline, pleasant to take, even by the youngest child, yet so powerfully far reaching in its work that the most agonizing internal pain yields as if by magic. Nerviline relieves neuralgia instantly and for the speedy cure of nerve pains of every description it has no equal. Sold everywhere.

Eyes Which See Big.

The other day a man spoke in my presence about a certain real or fancied peculiarity of some animals which, he said, caused the eye to dilate when the animal was subject to sudden fright, thus transforming the pupil of the eye into a magnifying glass of high power. "Why," he said, "if a wildcat frightens a horse, his eyes enlarge so that the wildcat looks to him as big as a tiger."

I have quit saying I don't believe a thing just because I never heard of it before, but, now, what do you think of this? I can imagine a man of the stone age telling this sort of tale to his offspring, the while their prehistoric little eyes grew wide with wonder and amaze, and then when they ran out of the cave to play I see him looking over at the old lady and smiling.—Forest

FIFTY YEARS OLD

Why let your neighbors know it?

And why give them a chance to guess you are even five or ten years more?

Better give them good reasons for guessing the other way. It is very easy; for nothing tells of age so quickly as gray hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

is a youth-renewer.

It hides the age under a luxuriant growth of hair the color of youth.

It never fails to restore color to gray hair. It will stop the hair from coming out also.

It feeds the hair bulbs. Thin hair becomes thick hair, and short hair becomes long hair.

It cleanses the scalp; removes all dandruff, and prevents its formation.

We have a book on the Hair which we will gladly send you.

If you do not obtain all the benefits you expected from the use of the Vigor, write the doctor about it. Probably there is some difficulty with your general system which may be easily removed. Address, Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass.

DREYFUS ON DEVIL'S ISLAND

Description of the Tortures to Which He Was Subjected.

His Lamp Kept Burning All Night Over His Bed So That Tropical Insects Could Swarm About Him—Made Mad With Thirst by Devilish Keepers—Thrust at Him Through His Wife—Mental and Physical Anguish.

Paris, July 8.—Maitre Labori, one of Dreyfus' counsel, who has just returned from Rennes, has been interviewed regarding the description given by the prisoner of his treatment on Devil's Island. "Yes," said the great French lawyer, "he has told us of the devilish tortures to which he was subjected. It is a long tale of unimaginable cruelty," Labori added sadly. "His guards were the roughest, most heartless ruffians that could be picked out of the Guiana police. They imagined that they would gain favor with the authorities by treating the prisoner with violence and meanness. I cannot tell you all the extreme vexations Dreyfus described to us, but here is an example:

Almost Raving With Thirst.

"One day, when he was in a high fever, he accidentally upset a jug of water near his bed. His punishment was that no water was given him to drink for 24 hours. By noon next day he was almost raving mad with thirst.

"When a letter was sent pretending to warn M. Lebon, then the Minister of the Colonies, that Dreyfus would attempt to escape, although the letter was proved a forgery, Lebon ordered that Dreyfus be put in irons. Notwithstanding he was very ill, he was strapped and chained to his bed. Thus he was left 20 days without medical attendance.

"But this outrage, Dreyfus says, saved him. He was so sick at heart, so ill of body, that he was willing to die. But when he realized there was a plot to kill him he gathered all his energy to resist. So he lived."

There Was No Cage.

"Is it true he was confined in a cage?" the correspondent asked.

"No; the story about the cage is not true," M. Labori answered. "But the torturer, M. Lebon, devised for Dreyfus a palisade-like inclosure, a tall fence, that was little better than a cage. Imagine the refinement of cruelty that shut out even a view of the sea, that kept a man baking in such a trap, scarcely larger than an ordinary room!

Prey to Tropical Insects.

"Another little idiotic measure was to keep a lamp burning over Dreyfus' bed all night long," M. Labori went on, indignantly. "The pretext was that his every movement must be watched. What could the prisoner do in such a lock-up? But the light attracted swarms of the fearful tropical insects that eat a man alive. They turned sleep into a nightmare. Dreyfus dreaded night more than the broiling sun.

"Four years of that!" exclaimed M. Labori, raising his fists to heaven in indignation. "And more! Those hyenas stole Dreyfus' food and fed him for weeks on most revolting messes, telling him his family had ceased to send money to him."

"Did not his wife's, his family's, letters reach Dreyfus?" was asked.

"For months Lebon suppressed letters to him. Then, again, his guards were instructed to pester and harass Dreyfus to make a confession.

"'See, even your family has abandoned you,' they constantly said to him. 'Better own up! Confess!'

Taught to Suspect His Wife.

"The fact is, Dreyfus became the plaything of his coarse, idle jailers. He often heard them making disrespectful remarks about his wife; he heard their persistent intimations that she was anxious to remarry.

"Dreyfus wrote urgent appeals; asked for explanations. His letters were never forwarded. So he was left despairing until, wild, he was his guard's plaything. Why, they even took it on themselves to deny him access to a narrow court where he could exercise by walking. For days they locked him in his cabin and barred the doors and windows, until the heat drove him nearly insane.

"Dreyfus was so exasperated that once he threatened to strangle one of his torturers. But he immediately realized they would welcome the slightest pretext to shoot him. So he afterward submitted to all their infamies.

"And one such infamy," cried M. Labori, himself furious, "was to take from him an unfinished letter to his wife—a letter full of the love he felt—to read it aloud in his hearing, to laugh at his expressions of emotion, to make vile comments on them. But when M. Lebon was overthrown more humane guards were substituted."

"How did Dreyfus exist; how did he pass the time?" the correspondent queried.

Finally Lost Hope.

"At first he read and wrote and tried to bury himself in mathematics," replied M. Labori, "but he has confessed he lost hope as the climate and the tortures undermined his health and he became less capable of intelligent occupation. For months he passed several hours of the day pacing the fenced enclosure like a caged lion. Finally he had not even energy to do that. Panting with heat, he crouched in a corner, moving only as the sun moved, that he might keep in the shade. At the last he had become so brutified that he neglected the most elementary cares of the toilet."

"Did the thought of suicide ever come to his mind?"

"I asked Dreyfus that question.

"'Yes,' he said, 'often during the last two years. But it would have been impossible for me to have taken my life. Since the agitation in my behalf began in France my guards have most dreaded my suicide lest they should be accused of my murder.'

"Dreyfus is now studying his case after a plan I have mapped out. He has all the documents. The trial probably will not take place before August."

"And you are confident of the result?"

"Confident!"

Labori arose, and, with a combative toss of his defiant head, exclaimed:

"If they want fight, now is the time. Let them all come on!"

LINKLATER STILL AWAY.

Consequently the West Huron Election Appeal Was Again Adjourned.

Toronto, July 8.—Mr. Justice Osler and Mr. Justice Rose sat yesterday morning in the Court of Appeal at Osgoode Hall to try the West Huron election case. But John T. Linklater of Wingham, whose absence previously adjourned the trial, was again not present. Their lordships declared they would not proceed till he was on hand. The trial was therefore adjourned.

Lawyer Dickinson filed an affidavit to the effect, though he had tried assiduously, yet he was unable to serve the order of the court upon Linklater. He asked for an adjournment.

Justice Osler said the witness was evidently keeping out of the way. He announced that the trial would continue on Sept. 5, though if the witness was produced, he and his colleague would take the matter up sooner.

The flood damages to railroad property in Texas are now conservatively estimated at $8,000,000.

THE PEACE OF THE WORLD.

Pacific Settlement of International Conflicts.

Text of the Convention Presented to the Third Committee and Which Has Been Referred to Delegates to Procure Instructions Upon From Their Governments—Three Additional Paragraphs Supplied by British, German and Italian Delegates.

The Hague, July 8.—The third committee sitting yesterday morning at the Huis Ten Bosch (the House in the Woods), discussed the scheme for the mediation and arbitration convention drawn up by the Comte d'Examen for the drafting committee. Many of the delegates have only been acquainted with the proposals since Thursday, and they have not had time to consult their Governments. Consequently, it had been decided that when the committee adjourned yesterday it would be until July 17, in order to allow the delegates time to consult their Governments and receive final instructions. The scheme is headed, "Draft of Convention for the Pacific Settlement of International Conflicts." The first part deals with the maintenance of general peace, the second part with arbitration.

Text of the Convention.

The text of the proposed convention is as follows:

Article 1—With the object of preventing, as far as possible, recourse to force in international relations, the signatory powers agree to use all endeavors to effect by pacific means a settlement of the differences which may arise among them.

Article 2—The signatory powers decide that in case of serious difference or conflict, they will, before appealing to arms, have recourse, so far as circumstances permit, to the good offices or mediation of one or several friendly powers.

Article 3—Independently of this, the signatory powers deem it useful that several of the powers not committed to this arbitration scheme shall, on their own initiative, offer, as far as circumstances permit, their good offices or mediation to the contending states. The right of offering their good offices belongs to powers not connected with the conflict, even during the course of hostilities, which can never be regarded as an unfriendly act.

Article 4—The part of mediator consists in reconciling conflicting claims and appeasing resentment which may have arisen between contending states.

When His Functions Cease.

Article 5—The functions of mediator cease from the moment it may be stated by one of the contending parties, or by the mediator himself, that the compromise or basis of an amicable understanding proposed by him has not been accepted.

Article 6—Good offices and mediation have the exclusive character of counsel, and are devoid of obligatory force.

Articles 7 and 8 provide that certain conventions must be entered into in the event of good offices being offered during hostilities, in order to prevent mobilization or hostilities until the acceptance of good offices is decided on.

Verification of Facts.

Articles 9 to 14 provide for the institution of an international commission of inquiry for the verification of facts in cases of minor disputes not affecting the vital interest or honor of states, but impossible of settlement by ordinary diplomacy. The report of an inquiry commission will not force an arbitral judgment, leaving the contending parties full liberty to either conclude an amicable arrangement on the basis of the report or have recourse ulteriorly to mediation or arbitration.

Articles 14 to 19 set forth the general object of and benefits it is hoped to derive from the arbitration court, and declare signing of the convention implies an undertaking to submit in good faith to arbitral judgment.

As to a Permanent Court.

Article 20—With the object of facilitating an immediate recourse to arbitration for international differences not regulated by diplomatic means, the signatory powers undertake to organize in the following manner a permanent court of arbitration, accessible at all times, and operating, unless otherwise stipulated by the parties, according to the rules of procedure inserted in the present convention, in so far as they are not modified by the parties.

SATURDAY, JULY 8, 1899.

THE "finish" of Grit rule in Ontario is in sight,

HARDY might as well retire and take the others with him.

THE "machine" seems to be in a fair way to be "hugged," but it will not be a friendly hug such as Preston wanted.

PRESTON will not be as proud of 'the boys" after their villianous work has been exposed as he was when he telegraphed Macniah the night of the fraudulent election.

AND NOW the work of the Ontario Grit "machine" in Dominion bye-elections is to be inquired into. The "machine" seems to have been operated by the same gang for the Laurier candidates. A proper exposure of the whole system is in order.

THE Kingston Whig claims credit for the Hardy Government for ordering the prosecution of the men "reported" in the South Ontario election cases. The Crown Attorney at Whitby received his instructions from the Attorney General's department, but they only came after the judge, Justice Osler, had inquired why the law was not being enforced. But, even in the face of the judge's inquiry it is understood that the Hardy officials have taken no steps in the matter yet.

THE Toronto World puts the case fairly and forcibly when it says that the people of Ontario have at last come to see that the Hardy Government are only holding office by reason of the employment of an organization which systematically resorted to corruption in the general election and stole most of the seats from the Conservatives in the bye-elections since. The Hardy Government has not, as a matter of fact, the confidence of the people of Ontario to-day. They have been found out and would have failed in the general election but for their resort to systematic bribery and corruption on a scale hitherto unknown in Canadian politics. They not only controlled an immense army of office seekers and office holders, all of them partisans, constantly at work in their interest, but they controlled the issuing of licenses, and in many other ways exercised patronage, which was all pressed into their service. Besides this, they had large campaign funds, raised from persons to whom subsidies and franchises had been granted, and from other corporations who were seeking or had secured friendly legislation. Furthermore, they had the aid of the Dominion Government and the funds at its disposal, and there is more than a suspicion that the promoters of certain railway projects before the Canadian Parliament last session were substantial friends of Mr Hardy in his election. The Hardy Government are in power, and in power only as a result of a long line of acts expressly designed to entrench themselves in office, and by an organized campaign of corruption. Their usefulness is gone, and there remains nothing to be done but to drive them from office and to put other men in their places. The Hardy Government are directly responsible for the corruption and political debauchery which has been recently exposed, and, being responsible for it, are no longer entitled to the confidence of the people or to fill the offices they hold.

ANY BOAT TO CARRY MAILS.

The Ocean Mail Contract With the Allans Expires This Week.

Montreal, July 8.—The Government has finally decided to allow the present contract for carrying ocean mails to expire at the end of this week. Mr. John Torrance, jr., and Mr. Andrew A. Allan have returned from Ottawa, where a long conference was held with Sir Richard Cartwright. The Minister declined to renew the contract, claiming that the service at present was not as good as the Government would like, and for a time any boat that suited would be used for the mails. The last boat in fulfillment of the existing contract sailed from Liverpool yesterday.

Yukon Telegraph Line.

The Department of Public Works has just received a further report from Mr. J. B. Charleson, giving details of the progress of the Yukon telegraph line. In May last the wire was strung for a distance of 54 miles, and now the report says that the line is completed to Lake Lebarge, 15 miles beyond White Horse Rapids and 128 miles beyond Bennett, which place is connected with Skaguay by a telegraph line belonging to the White Pass Railway Company. Mr. Charleson hopes to have the Government line into Dawson City by the 15th of October.

Toronto Man Lost a Leg.

Strathroy, Ont., July 8.—Wm. Walsh of 63 Gloucester street, Toronto, while travelling through on the Pacific express last evening alighted for a moment to take a drink of water at the station, and in the act of jumping aboard again swung himself between the cars, which were then in motion, and fell, the wheels passing over one of his legs, crushing the ankle, necessitating amputation below the knee. The patient was taken to the Queen's Hotel by the medical attendants, and is doing as well as can be expected.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

THE BOUNDARY WRANGLE.

British Foreign Office Admits That the Situation Is Grave.

London, July 8.—The officials of the Foreign Office were shown yesterday the despatch of the Associated Press from Washington, of Thursday, saying there was almost a deadlock over the modus vivendi fixing the Alaskan boundary, neither side being willing to accept the provisional line proposed by the other.

The officials confirm the contents of the despatch, and acknowledge that the situation is grave, and said the present outlook was more unsatisfactory than at any time since February.

CONFIRMATION.

Another Letter, Stronger Than Those Preceding It.

No Question as to the Permanency of Cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills—If Any Ever Existed in Its Impossible Now.

Toronto, July, 7.—This paper has recently printed several accounts of a Dodd's Kidney Pills scrap-book, and of letters sent out by the compiler of it, asking for confirmation of the testimonials clipped from newspapers and included therein. All who were written to have replied. A few stated that they are still taking the pills, though rapidly becoming well, but the great majority state that they are completely and permanently cured of the disease they were taking Dodd's Kidney Pills for. Here is one of the last letters to come in:—

Wickham, Queen's Co., N.B.,
June 22nd, 1899.

Dear Sir,—Yours of the 22nd May to hand and contents noted. Dodd's Kidney Pills in my case have been a wonder and surprise to myself. After twenty years of suffering with my back and kidneys I am well. Not the least painful part of my trouble was the pain, frequency and poor success experienced in urinating. When I tried to uninate I could make but little at a time and had to try often. The pain was so severe that I almost at times feared to try. A number of remedies were suggested by friends, but I had read about Dodd's Kidney Pills and determined to try them. I got a box and used it, and afterwards six other boxes, and am now like a young man, though seventy-six years of age. I enjoy the natural, comfortable feeling in the particulars above referred to. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to you or anyone else who is suffering as I did before I used them. I have recommended them to scores of people here and in St. John, and they have always done what they are advertised to do.

Very respectfully yours,
G. L. WORDEN,
Commissioner of Wickham Civil Courts.

Dodds' Kidney Pills are for sale by all druggists or will be sent on receipt of price by the Dodds Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

lowing manner a permanent court of arbitration accessible at all times, and exercising its functions, unless otherwise stipulated, between the contending parties in conformity with the rules of procedure inserted in the present convention.

Article 21—This court is to have competency in all arbitration cases, unless the contending parties come to an understanding for the establishment of special arbitration jurisdiction.

Article 22—An international bureau established at The Hague and placed under the direction of a permanent secretary-general will serve as the office of the court. It will be the intermediary for communications concerning meetings. The court is to have the custody of archives and the management of all administrative affairs.

Personnel of the Officers.

Article 23—Each of the signatory powers shall appoint within three months of the ratification of the present article not more than four persons of recognized competence in questions of international law, enjoying the highest moral consideration, and prepared to accept the functions of arbitration. The persons thus nominated will be entered as members of the court on a list which will be communicated by the bureau to all the signatory powers. Any modification of the list will be brought by the bureau to the knowledge of the signatory powers. Two or more powers may agree together regarding the nomination of one or more members and the same person may be chosen by different powers. Members of the court are to be appointed for the term of six years. The appointments are renewable. In case of the death or resignation of a member of the court the vacancy is to be filled in accordance with the regulations made for the original nomination.

Selection of Arbitrators.

Article 24.—The signatory powers who desire to apply to the court for a settlement of differences shall select from the general list a number of arbitrators, to be fixed by agreement. They will notify the bureau of their intention of applying to the court and give the names of the arbitrators they may have selected. In the absence of a convention to the contrary, an arbitral tribunal is to be constituted in accordance with the rules of article 31. Arbitrators thus nominated to form an arbitral tribunal for a matter of question will meet on the date fixed by the contending parties.

Article 25—The tribunal will usually sit at The Hague, but may sit elsewhere by consent of the contending parties.

Article 26—The powers not signing the convention may apply to the court under the conditions prescribed by the present convention.

Article 27—The signatory powers may consider it their duty to call attention to the existence of the permanent court to any of their friends between whom a conflict is threatening, which must always be regarded as a tender of good offices.

A Permanent Council.

Article 28—A permanent council, composed of the diplomatic representatives of the signatory powers residing at The Hague, and the Netherlands Foreign Minister, who will exercise the functions of president, will be constituted at The Hague as soon as possible after the ratification of the present act. The council will be charged to establish and organize the international bureau, which will remain under its direction and control. The council will notify the powers of the constitution of the court and arrange its installation, draw up the standing orders and other necessary regulations, will decide questions likely to arise in regard to the working of the tribunal, have absolute power concerning the appointment, suspension or dismissal of functionaries or employes, will fix the emoluments and salaries and control the general expenditure. The presence of five members at duly convened meetings will constitute a quorum. Decisions are to be taken by a majority of the votes. The council will address annually to the signatory powers a report of the labors of the court, the working of its administrative services and of its expenditure.

Article 29—The expenses of the bureau are to be borne by the signatory powers in the proportion fixed for the international bureau of the universal postal union.

Three Additional Paragraphs.

Three additional paragraphs regarding the permanent court were also adopted at the request of Prof. Zorn of the German delegation; Count Nigra, head of the Italian delegation, and Sir Julian Pauncefote, head of the British delegation, as follows: "Members of the permanent court shall enjoy and exercise all the functions of diplomatic privileges and immunities.

"The bureau is authorized to place its offices and organization at the disposal of the signatory powers for the proper exercise of any special arbitral jurisdiction.

"The signatory powers undertake to communicate to the bureau a copy of any stipulation regarding arbitration decided between them and all judgments of the permanent court, and they undertake to communicate to the bureau the laws, regulations and documents setting forth the execution of judgments pronounced by the court."

Most of the so-called protections against burglary, do not protect any more than most of the so-called "remedies" protect from the burglary of the "house of this body" by the crafty burglar—Disease. Like the regular burglar, disease works with as little disturbance as possible.

You think you have that jewel of health you possess in perfect safety. But little disturbances if they were heeded would show the burglar at his work. Loss of appetite precedes loss of flesh. Then comes weakness followed by the more disturbing symptoms of lingering cough, sore throat, bronchitis and bleeding at the lungs. When any or all these symptoms appear, begin the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the best of all medicines. It is non-alcoholic. It helps the stomach and separates the good parts of the food from the bad. It supplies thin, impoverished, run-down blood with the needed rich red corpuscles. It makes solid flesh—the sort that strong people have. If you value your health, don't allow the dealer to sell you something else. Insist upon having Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"I must say Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the most wonderful medicine I ever used," writes Geo. S. Henderson, Esq., of Deland, Lee Co., Florida. "I had a bad bruise on my right ear, and my blood was badly out of order. I tried local doctors but with no good results. Finally I wrote you the particulars in my case and you advised your 'Golden Medical Discovery' which I began to take. EMINENT PHYSICIAN DIES.

Sudden Death of Dr. J. E. Graham of Toronto at Gravenhurst Sanitarium.

Toronto, July 8.—The news of the sudden death of Dr. J. E. Graham at Gravenhurst Sanitarium last night at 5.15 came as a shock to his hosts of friends in the city. Dr. Graham was stricken down with diabetes six months ago. This was followed by tuberculosis, which was the immediate cause of his demise.

James Elliott Graham was born in Toronto at the family homestead, "Richview," June 12, 1847, and hence at the time of his death was 52 years of age. His work in his profession began in 1869, when he became resident physician in the Brooklyn City Hospital for one year. Then on the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war he was appointed surgeon of the Prussian army without rank, and served throughout the whole war. In 1872 he returned to Toronto and began the practice of his profession. In July, 1875, he married Mary Jane, second daughter of the Hon. C. Atkins, Senator. His wife, one son (a medical student), and three daughters, all unmarried, survive him. He had a wide and active medical association, both in Canada and the United States. He was president of the Ontario Association of Physicians.

LOST—TWO YEARS!

"Yes, sir," said the stock-broker, "I have ceased to mourn the fact that I lost two years of my life."

"How do you make that out?" asked his friend, the insurance man.

"I lived upon milk for two years," said the stock-broker solemnly.

"That's certainly longer than most," returned the insurance man. "I was weaned at six months."

"I mean since I reached manhood's estate," said the broker.

"How was that," asked his friend.

"Doctor's orders," said the broker. "I used to be sort of a self-indulgent fellow in the way of vituals."

"I like a good dinner myself," interrupted the insurance man.

"Yes, well I used to eat everything that came along if it was nice, and it played my stomach out. By and by I found I had dyspepsia and I straightway became a dyspepsia crank."

"I've heard of 'em," remarked the insurance man.

"Well, I was one," said the broker. "I started in to cure myself. Well, sir, if I was to tell you all I took and all I did to get rid of that fiendish disease I would keep you here all night. It was after I had tried about everything, I struck the great milk cure."

"That was where you lost the two years," said the insurance man.

"Yes, I ate nothing for two years. I drank milk till I hated the sight of it."

"Did it cure you?" asked the insurance man.

"It did not," said the broker. "And the worst of it was I found after two years of it I might have been eating good honest beefsteak all the time—yes, or quail-on-toast for that matter."

"How was that?"

"If I'd only known it, a Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal would have digested my food for me, rested my stomach, and cured the Dyspepsia inside a month or so. You can get them at any drug store for fifty cents a box, too."

"That's where ignorance wasn't bliss," said the insurance man.

"It's wise to be wise in regard to Dyspepsia and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," said the broker.

The Electric Light

Is a matter of small importance compared with other applications of electricity. By this agency Polson's Nerviline is made to penetrate to the most remote nerve—every bone, muscle and ligament is made to feel its beneficient power. Nerviline, pleasant to take, even by the youngest child, yet so powerfully far reaching in its work that the most agonizing internal pain yields as if by magic. Nerviline relieves neuralgia instantly and for the speedy cure of nerve pains of every description it has no equal. Sold everywhere.

German Emperor Showing Great Friendliness to Frenchmen.

Bergen, Norway, July 8.—Emperor William has invited the officers and 60 cadets of the French training ship Iphegenie, which he visited here yesterday and inspected, and the German cadets of the training ship Gneisenau, to meet at an entertainment last night on board the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern.

The Kaiser to Loubet.

Paris, July 8.—Emperor William of Germany has telegraphed as follows to President Loubet: "Bergen, July 6.—To the President of the French Republic, Paris:

'I have had the pleasure to see on board the schoolship Iphigenie young French sailors whose military bearing and sympathetic demeanor worthy of their noble country made a deep impression upon me. My sailor's heart and spirit of comradeship rejoiced at the gracious welcome accorded me by her commander, officers and crew. I congratulate myself, Monsieur le President, on the happy circumstances which permitted me to meet the Iphigenie and your amiable countrymen. (Signed) 'William.' "

Loubet's Reply.

President Loubet replied:

"His Majesty William II., Emperor of Germany and King of Prussia, Bergen:

"I am deeply touched by the telegram Your Imperial Majesty addressed to me after your visit to the Iphigenie, and desire to thank you for the honor done our sailors and the manner in which Your Majesty was pleased to convey to me the impression made by this visit. (Signed) Loubet."

PARE AND HOLDEN.

A Little More of Their Summer Trip to Trip to the Seashore.

Toronto Telegram:—After lodging George Pare and William Holden safe in Napanee jail, from which they took such an unceremonious departure on May 15t, Inspector Greer returned to the city last night. The men had little to say about their escape and gave no hint that they had outside assistance. They regarded their escape as a good joke on their guardians.

They had $5 or $6 when arrested. Pare said that this was furnished by his sister. The two men picked up a scanty living as ordinary tramps, now and again working with the fishermen and living in their huts, on the Penobscot, Aroostock, St. John, and other rivers.

In the third week in June they stayed at a hotel, 150 miles from Campbellton, and as soon as they left another tramp told the hotelkeeper who they were, Inspector Greer was notified and he forwarded circulars to Campbellton. When the pair reached this place theey were seen by a hotelkeeper, and Chief Constable Duncan took them into custody. He subsequently released them, but quickly changed his mind on again consulting the circulars. He organized a posse, pursued the two, and re-arrested them.

It is said that at the next trial, on September 19, Ponton, Roach, Pare and Holden may be all tried together, but this has not yet been decided.

It is not likely that Pare and Holden will be charged with breaking jail. If they are, it will not be until after the otheer trial in September.

As yet no application has been made to the Ontario Goveernment for the reward, although Constable John Duncan, of Campbellford, will in all probability get it.

Blood Poisoning.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING OF A PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY FARMER.

Hospital Treatment Failed to Benefit Him and His Life Was Despaired of—Again Well and Strong.

From the Belleville Sun.

A reporter of the Belleville Sun recently had an opportunity to investigate a cure made through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People which is little short of miraculous. The subject of the cure is Mr. William H. Conklin, a well known farmer who lives in Ameliasburg township, Prince Edward county. When the reporter drove over to see Mr. Conklin he was under the impression, from what he had heard of the case, that he would find a partial invalid but to his surprise found a stalwart, robust man of six feet, actively engaged unloading logs from a sleigh. On making known the object of his visit the reporter was invited into the house and Mr. Conklin gave his story as follows:—

You can see for yourself that my condition is now one of good health, and yet I have been near death's door. A year ago last summer I injured my hand, with the result that blood poisoning set in. A doctor was called in and the usual treatment given and the hand apparently got well and I started to work. It soon turned out, however, that the poison had not been entirely got rid of and it spread through my whole system. The doctor was again called in, but looking upon my case as critical, advised me to to the hospital at Belleville. This I did and remained there throughout the month of October, 1897. My condition was desperate, and as I was not making any progress toward recovery, I may frankly say that I gave my case up as hopeless. Believing that I could not recover, I asked to be taken home. I then tried various treatments with no better results. I could not walk without help, and I was doubled up like a jack-knife. At this stage I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and sent for half a dozen boxes. After using the first half dozen my appetite returned and night sweats which had been the bane of my sleeping hours deserted me. Knowing that the pills were helping me I sent for a further supply. Meantime a swelling came in my hip, which finally broke, and from that on my progress was more rapid and I am again as sound as ever, and able to do a day's work with any one. I can only add that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brought me to my present state of good health and so long as I live I shall praise the remedy that brought me back from the verge of the grave.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OUTING GOWNS.

Costumes and Accessories For Out of Door Sports.

Black stockings are worn with outing gowns, or stockings the color of the shoes. The hat retains a suggestion of the masculine, feathers, flowers and gauze being rigorously avoided. Ribbon and silk bands, knots and choux, with a quill or two, are the usual trimmings. The sailor and the Tyrolean stand foremost in favor among shapes.

The materials used for outing gowns are covert cloth, mixed goods, cheviots and serges, medium and dark tones being preferred. Medium gray and beige are most useful, mud, dust and rain making little impression upon them, but navy blue, Russian green, dark brown and black are also worn. Subdued plaids and checks are well represented in this class of materials and are really more serviceable than the plain goods.

Red vests of elastic wool, like the old fashioned cardigan jacket, are worn for golf playing, and they nearly always have silk sleeves of the same shade. These scarlet accessories are worn by both men and women players and are attractive bits of color in the field.

A picture is given of three fashionable cravats. The first, worn with a standing collar with turned down points, is of white moire and is called the regate. The second consists of a stock collar and butterfly knot of red taffeta with stitched plaits. The third, which is more elaborate, is a bow of taffeta with guipure points and openwork lines, which is mounted on a stock collar of plaited taffeta, points of taffeta matching the bow appearing above the collar. THE PREVAILING MODE.

Many Rings and Few Gloves In Elegant Society.

Artificial flowers being much worn, not only as a trimming for hats and bonnets, but in the form of boas and ruches and on evening gowns, the latest fancy is to perfume each flower with the odor properly belonging to it.

Supreme fashion prescribes that rings shall be worn upon all the fingers; therefore gloves are discarded at the theater and at evening receptions, and there is likely to be a return to mittens of the first empire style. At present the long sleeves which cover the hands to the fingers are considered a sufficient shield, the multitudinous rings previously mentioned taking the place of gloves, with which they are incompatible. Upon less elaborate and therefore ringless occasions, gloves are worn—that is, for calling and driving—but the gloves are of a fanciful nature, the back being embroidered, not in the ordinary lines, but with a monogram or cipher or some ornamental design. Black silk or gold or silver thread is used for the embroidery.

Bodices differing from the skirt will again be worn this summer, and a skirt of black satin may accompany any light corsage. Bodices of black beaded tulle will be in vogue and are cool as well as pretty.

The girl's gown depicted is of light green printed foulard. The plain skirt is trimmed with narrow white gimp. The blouse bodice has a wide collar of cream taffeta, bordered by two little ruffles, with a cravat to match. The pastoun of white taffeta has pale green bands across it. The collar and belt are of sky blue taffeta—a novel touch—and the collarette is of cream satin. JUDIC CHOLLET.

PLEASANT OUTING.

The St. John's Picnic Was a Delightful Success.

St. John's Sunday school excursion to Rice lake yesterday was not very largely attended, there being only a few over two hundred persons on board. The boat left the wharf at 8.30 o'clock, and reached Jubilee Point about eleven o'clock. Here a stop was made for dinner, after which a sail was enjoyed on Rice lake. Then a programme of sports was run off by a committee composed of Messrs. R. Fair, John Bell, R H Nesbitt and E H T Mitchell. The different events were warmly contested and afforded much amusement. The younger people indulged in swings, while the older people enjoyed walks through the woods or rested in the cool shade. The return trip was begun in good time, and after a delightful sail the wharf at Peterborough was reached at the unusually early hour of 7.15. During the sail up the river an impromptu concert was held on the boat, and all who were on board voted the outing one of the most pleasant and enjoyable they had ever attended.

The list of sports, winners and prizes is as follows:—

Boys' race, infant class—1, F Seymour, purse; 2, Geo Lush, knife; 3, Phil Bennington, organ; 4, Max Bradburn, organ.

Girls' race, infant class—1, Flossie Millbrook; 2, Clemie Robinson; 3, Alice Morris; 4, Emily Horsefield. Prizes, dolls.

Girls' race, under 10.—1, Geraldine Billington. fan; 2, Madge Graham, fan.

Girls' race, under 13—1, Florence Robinson, blouse set; 2, Agnes Horsefield, fan.

Boys' race, under 13—1, Alf Hodgson, frame; 2, Harry Kingscote, purse.

Girls' race, under 16—1, Mabel Seymour, perfume; 2, Ella Byers, garters.

Boys' race, under 16—1, Horace Walkey, pearl set; 2, Eddie Kimball, soap.

Young ladies over 16—1, Daisy Wilkins, vase; 2, Vina Hull, pair vases.

Married ladies' race—1, Mrs Chambers, tea pot; 2, Mrs Godfrey, tea pot.

Men's race—1, Harry Roberts, knife; 2, Walter Hooper, box of soap.

Boys' boot race—1, Howard Clegg, ball; 1, John Wilkins, ball.

Three legged race, boys—1, Willie Morris and Walter Fitzpatrick, cups and saucers; 2, H Walkey and Alf Hodgson, two balls.

Great Indeed

Is the satisfaction the Tate Optical Co. is giving in careful scientific fitting of glasses. Their good work is winning a large patronage.

Of Particular Merit.

The concert given by the 57th battalion band in Victoria park last evening is deserving of particular notice. Mr. Gliddon put on a programme in which popular music was leavened with that of more sterling quality and all the selections were rendered in a style that was truly musicianly. The catchy darky melodies, the marches, the operatic selection and the number descriptive of the fire alarm were all received with indications of pleasure. The audience was an immense one, being without doubt the largest of the season. The concerts of the 57th band are distinctly popular.

WEDDED AT NORWOOD.

Nuptials of Miss Mina Wood, of Norwood, to Mr J W Fry, of Towa.

A very pretty event took place on Wednesday afternoon at the Baptist church, Norwood, when Miss Mina Wood, of that place, was joined in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. J. W. Fry, of Peterborough.

The bride looked very handsome in cream cashmere with satin and Valenciennes lace trimmings. Miss Addie Pallin, of Otonabee, was bridesmaid, and was dressed in blue cashmere trimmed with satin and ribbons. The groom was assisted by Mr. J. W. Rork. The bridal party entered the church, which was nicely decorated, at 2.30 o'clock, while Mendelssohn's wedding march was being played by Miss Webb, of Winchester. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. J. E. Wood. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, while pink carnations were carried by the bridesmaid.

The bride was the recipient of many elegant presents, among which were a beautiful carving set from the groomsman and a beautiful Japanese biscuit jar from the members of the Baptist church choir, of which she was a member. The groom also received several handsome gifts from his Peterborough friends, among which was a couple of beautifully upholstered chairs from the Peterborough Music Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Fry left on the afternoon train for Peterborough, where they have taken up residence at 599 King-st.

DIED SUDDENLY.

One of the Oldest Residents of the District Dead.

One of the oldest residents of Emily, in fact, of the district, died suddenly yesterday morning in the person of Mr. Thos. Jackson. The deceased gentleman had passed the allotted time of man by over a dozen years, and his death was the result of old age or heart failure. He was up and around as usual yesterday morning, and was sitting on a chair about ten o'clock, when he suddenly fell forward and expired.

The deceased was born in Emily, near the place where he died, eighty-three years ago, and had resided there or in Cavan ever since. He was the son of the late Henry Jackson, who was one of the pioneers of the district. About fifty years ago the deceased was married to Miss B. McKee, of Smith, survive. The daughters are Mrs. children was born to the union, seven of them, three daughters and four sons, also survive. The daughters are Mrs. Jos. Gardiner, of Cavan, Mrs. Joseph Stewart, of Manvers, and Miss Elizabeth Jackson, who resided at home. The sons are Samuel Henry, of Carberry, N.T.; Wm. John, of Emily, and Thomas Andrew and David Albert, who reside on the homestead where the father died. The deceased attended the Methodist church, was a staunch Conservative and a citizen who by a life of uprightness and industry had won the respect of the entire district throughout which he was widely known. One sister, Mrs. Moncrief, of Mount Pleasant, also survives.

The funeral will take place from the homestead, lot 20, con. 1, Emily, tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock.

A FINE LAUNCH.

Handsome Craft Turned Out by the Peterborough Canoe Co. for Mr C. B. McAllister.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. has ready for launching one of the handsomest yachts that can be found on Ontario waters. It is a gasoline launch and has been built to the order of Mr. C. B. McAllister. It measures 28 foot keel, 33 feet total length, and 7 foot beam and is a model of grace and strength. The bottom is of oak an inch thick, with pine sides, the oak running to the bilge and pine above. The inside is of butternut and cedar, nicely varnished. The canopy is also of butternut and cedar. The outside is painted red and white and the top is hung with curtains of red and white duck. Altogether it presents a very attractive appearance.

Power is furnished by a 6 horse power gasoline motor, which takes up very little space in the boat and is thus a great improvement over the steam equipment. The gasoline tank, with capacity for material for six days running, is situated in the bow of the boat. It is also fitted with lockers throughout and with refrigerator.

The launch has a carrying capacity of about thirty persons, is calculated to run from six to ten miles an hour and is valued at $800. The "Jennemac," as she is called, is altogether a model craft and a credit alike to makers and to owner, and is a notable addition to the flotilla of the Otonabee river, on whose waters she will be placed.

A DAILY OPPORTUNITY

For a Delightful Outing down the Otonabee River.

Now that the hot summer days have come to stay many people will be glad of opportunities to leave the dust and noise and heat of town and escape for a day or so out into the freshness found where land and water meet under an open sky. To those who cannot leave for an extended holiday, facilities for short and pleasant outings are a great boon. For the accommodation of all such Capt. W. Harris has decided to put the trim steamer North Star on the river route, running daily trips from town to Rice lake, commencing next Monday. The excellent sailing qualities of the steamer are well known, the scenery along the route is unsurpassed, while the air of Rice lake is famous as a tonic. It was expected, therefore, that many will avail themselves of this daily trip. The steamer will leave Peterborough every morning at 9 o'clock, calling at Jubilee at 12, and arriving at Gore's landing at 12.15. Returning she will leave at 4 and arrive in town at 7.45.

The hotel advantages at Rice lake are exceptionally good. There is no finer summer hotel, in point of equipment, furnishings and management, than that at Gore's Landing, and the view from it is a beautiful one. Nobody taking in this trip will be disappointed.

Laying the Pavement.

Mr. Richard Sheehy, who has the contract for the first section of granolithic walks, has commenced work with a big staff of men on Water-st. South of Dublin and is rushing things ahead in good style. Judging by the progress made yesterday and to-day it will not be long before the citizens will be walking on asphalt in the centre portions of the town.

A GLIMPSE AT THE LAKE OF ISLANDS

THE SEASON IS NOW OPENED AT STONY LAKE.

And This Charming Summer Resort is Looking its Prettiest—Some of Those Who Are There Enjoying the Breezes and the Beauties.

Stony lake never looked better than at present. Blue water, green foliage, gay cottages, bright flags, and the water dotted with craft make up an alluring prospect to those who go up the lake in ships. Many who go stay. Hundreds go to have a glance at the pleasant environment and come away wishing that their lives were cast in so pleasant a place.

A week or two has wrought a change. Cottages that stood with shutters closed and silent are now gay with open doors and bright curtains. Comfortable easy chairs are on the wide verandahs. Lazy hammocks swing invitingly in tempting corners. The canoes drawn up on shore tell of water trips and the wide open doors of boat houses invite one to go inside and select his craft. The cottage owner is seen working at his wharf or putting things to rights while the women of his household make remarks approving his industry and extolling his achievements. It is all making in the direction of a summer of rest and pleasure and thoroughly enjoyable.

Interest just now centres on the arrivals, of which there are many. Each morning the boat brings its quota and as well, whole loads of luggage and belongings. One feature of this year's arrivals is the largee number of strangers noticed. A personal mention may be interesting.

Rev. D. Fraser is camping on Mr. Roxburgh's island.

Mrs. Shortly and friends are at the cottage at Boschink.

Mrs. Dr. Fraser, of Lakefield, and a party are at Gryll's island.

Mr. J. D. Collins and family are at his cottage near Juniper island.

Mrs. Tait, of Lakefield, and friends are at "The Heights."

Mr. Sam Hunter, the cartoonist of the Toronto World, with Mrs. Hunter and daughter, are at their cottage, near McCracken's. The presence of the clever cartoonist at the lake accounts for the absence of the cartoons in the World—he is on his holidays.

Mr. Owen, of Toronto, has rented Mr. Grubb's cottage and has moved in for the season.

Mrs. Dunn and Dr. Bell, of Lakefield, have opened their cottages. Several friends are at each cottage.

On Big Otter island Mr. Cole, of Toronto, is installed for the summer.

Dr. Poussette, Mrs. Poussette and Mrs. Sherwood, are comfortably housed on Little Otter island.

Mr. Jonathan Griffin, of Lakefield, is at his cottage on Eagle Mount.

Mr. W. Stebbing and family have opened up house at Eagle Mount.

Mrs. H. P. Lindsay and Mrs. and Miss Lindsay, Mrs. Armstrong, of Denver, Col., and Mrs. Stubbs, are at the cottage at Eagle Mount.

Mr. John Sawers and family are up for the season. With Mr. Sawers are Lieut. Aikenhead, Mrs. Jas. Burnett, Miss Lily Edgar, Miss Allen, and Master Sanderson, the latter the record fisherman of last season with his string of 15 lunge.

Mr. J. B. Oke and family are at Mr. Geo. Coclrane's cottage on Eagle Mount.

Mr. L. M. Hayes and Mrs. Hayes are at Mr. E. H. D. Hall's cottage for the month.

Mr. R. Neill's new cottage, at the entrance to Stony lake is fast getting into shape. It will be, when finished, a very fine cottage, one of the very finest on the lake. Mr. Neill evidently is providing with hospitable intent ample room for friends—of which he has very many.

Mr. H. B. Meharry is camped on Mrs. Roe's island.

Mr. Wynn, of Toronto, is up at Boschink.

Col. Sloan's fine summer residence at "The Americans" has not been opened yet, and it is said that the Colonel or the genial Dr. Race will not be over this season.

"Oakdene" is looking bright and greatly improved as a result of alterations and new paint. This island has been purchased from Mr. Bradburn by Mr. W. G. Morrow, who has improved it greatly. It is now dressed in attractive white and red paint.

Mr. Marshall Wynn and family are

OBITUARY.

Death of Mr. Peter Baptie at Lakefield.

It is our sad duty this week to chronicle the death of Mr. Peter Baptie which event took place on Tuesday morning last, after a long illness. The deceased was well-known and greatly respected throughout the district. He was born in Peterborough in 1837, being sixty-two years old at the time of his death. When he was six years of age his father moved to Smith township. On coming of age he left the family homestead in Smith to learn the trade of carpenter and joiner. In 1862 he came to Lakefield and commenced business as a contractor and builder, and some ten years later established the planing mill now owned by J. F. Lillicrap & Co. In 1862 he married Mary A. Barrie of Dummer township. The deceased always took an active interest in anything that pertained to the advancement of the interests of the village. A widow and a family of two sons and four daughters are left to mourn his loss. The family are Mrs. E. Sellens, Mrs. T. W. Stevenson, Norwich, Mrs. A. Bowen, Miss Maud Baptie, and George and William Baptie. The sincere sympathy of the community in their bereavement. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon to the Lakefield cemetery and was largely attended.—Lakefield News.

FOR THE ALDERMEN

Another Correspondent Seconds the Complaint Made by Ratepayer.

To the Editor of The Review:—

Sir,—The letter on "disgraceful streets" in yesterday's issue is timely. Their condition is absurd in many more parts of the town than those referred to. The road ways are rough, uneven and untidy, while the expensive steam roller remains motionless. Moreover, what about our Streeet Railway? It seems to be more soundly asleep than the roller, and is much more inconvenient. The tracks are a perfect nuisance, especially on Charlotte-st. The Town Council is supposed to guard the interests of the town, and what is it doing in this matter? Will it calmly look on while the company breaks the terms of its charter, spoils our best streets, and makes the town a laughing stock? Our citizens are long-suffering, but there are times when patience ceases to be a virtue, and this would seem to be one. We expect the Mayor and Town Council to gradually improve the appearance of the town. Peterborough has been bountifully endowed by Nature and private munificence, and our opportunities in this direction should be made the very most of, and improved. And yet the only noticeable improvement going on now seems to be the new sidewalks, which we appreciate. There are some small points which might be attended to at once with profit. For instance, why should that great unsightly, cumbersome and seemingly useless bandstand be allowed longer to deface beautiful Victoria park? Can not the lumber be put to some other use in some other place? But this is only one instance. May we hope that our public officials will keep their eyes more widely open for disfigurements and remove them, seizing all opportunities to beautify the town, and that citizens will co-operate with their leaders by private enterprise in the same directions?

Yours, &c.,

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

PETERBOROUGH WON AT LINDSAY.

FIRST MATCH OF THE TEAM AWAY FROM HOME.

Defeat Lindsay by 11 Runs to 9—The Feature of the Game—The Field of General Sport.

Lindsay, July 7.—(Special)—Peterborough defeated Lindsay to-day in one of the most evenly contested games ever witnessed in the old base ball town of Lindsay. At the beginning it looked as if Peterboroughs were going to have a walk over, Lindsay not scoring until the 5th innings. Btu a succession of rank errors on the part of the Peeterborough team allowed the home team to score. The feature of the game were Graham's work behind the bat and Thompson's work in left field, and the work of Sheridan and Donovan at the bat. The score:

Lindsay	.000021231—9
Peterborough	.003034111x—11

Batteries—Miller, Syer, Hamilton and Hindly; McCabe and Graham.

Umpire, Mr. Buck.

Lacrosse

The big league games to-day are: Sherbrooke at Shamrock, Capitals at Quebec. Pretty soft for the Shamrocks and Capitals.

In a lacrosse match at Brampton yesterday between the Brampton Athletes and the Galt club, one of the players was struck by an opponent's stick and a gash three inches long and reaching to the skull was inflicted. Twelve stitches had to be put in.

The Dufferins of Orangeville defeated Seaforth yesterday 6 to 1.

Of the match between Hastings and Peterborough juniors at Hastings on July 1st the Star says: The lacrosse match was a poor exhibition of the national game which resulted in a victory for the home team by a score of 7 goals to 1, with fifty minutes to play. Peterborough leaving the field after an hour and ten minutes play, partly discouraged from the fact that they were not in it and also from a few rough plays on the part of the home team. In a lacrosse match it is take and give and a lot of rough play is indulged in which should not take place. Hastings, however, is not the only team which can play rough on their own grounds as there was hardly a man from here who played in Peterborough on the 28th but what received a cut of some kind. But that is no excuse for our team and lacrosse will never "take" so long as this kind of work is indulged in. The game was all one-sided, Peterborough playing a defensive game, their home at all times helping to block their goal. Hastings' defence had nothing to do while the home played the whole of the visiting team. The goal scored by Peterborough was kicked in while a scrimmage was taking place in front of the goal.

FATAL SMASH NEAR DELHI.

Driver Frank Bowen of Bridgeburg Was Instantly Killed.

Delhi, Ont., July 6.—Westbound freight train No. 89, engine No. 67, was wrecked at 1.45 yesterday morning, about two miles east of this station. Driver Frank Bowen was instantly killed, Fireman Perry and Brakeman Hickinson were badly hurt. Conductor Griffin and the other brakemen, who were in the back coach, escaped unhurt.

The engine cab was completely demolished, and the remainder of the engine was hurled into the ditch upside down. The tender was turned completely over, and four cars were piled up in front of the engine and four behind, all being completely demolished. The track was torn to pieces and the ties were made into toothpicks.

The cause of the accident is unknown, but it is supposed that some part of the engine dropped, causing it to be lifted clear of the track. The condition of the track shows that something had dragged for half a mile. Bowen's body was brought to this station. He lived at Bridgeburg, and leaves a wife and family.

GOBBLED BY THE STANDARD.

Octopus Has Gathered in the Ontario Natural Gas & Oil Co.

Windsor, Ont., July 8.—The tentacles of the Standard Oil monopoly have reached over into Canada and gathered in the Ontario Natural Gas & Oil Company. The latter concern is the one which has controlled the gas fields from which Detroit homes are being supplied with the natural illuminant and fuel. Hereafter the business will be transacted by the new firm.

It has been ascertained that the purchase price was $600,000. There were only 25 shares in the original company, and these sold for $600 each. The price paid by the Standard Company made those shares worth $24,000 each. The same management will have charge under the new company, Dr. King acting as general manager.

Kingston P.O. Enquiry.

Kingston, July 8.—The postoffice investigation was concluded at noon. John Driver, Inspector Merrick, James Pense and R. J. Gowdey of The Kingston Times were examined yesterday morning, and Mr. Pense denied some statements made by Mr. Renton against him. Mr. Gowdey was called with reference to a paragraph in his paper charging that lewd women frequented the postoffice, but Mr. Renton was recalled and emphatically denied the charges made about him in that respect. Judge Morgan said he would not close the investigation permanently, but would find out if the Postmaster-General wished the charges of immoral conduct gone into more fully.

MISS CAPRICE.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBONE

Author of "Doctor Jack," "Doctor Jack's Wife," "Captain Tom," "Miss Pauline of New York," Etc.

Upon this ridge above the city lie numerous palatial residences, now occupied by French and English families, but which were once owned by the pirate kings of Algiers, whose names may often be found upon the gate-post, cut in letters of gold.

From this eyrie they scanned the sea with their glasses, and the appearance of a sail in the dim distance would be the signal for a mad chase to see which piratical felucca could first overhaul the stranger.

Uncle Sam had something to do with breaking up this tremendous pirates' den, and then France has since redeemed it.

Thus a considerable portion of the morning is consumed in this pleasant engagement. They take an omnibus now for the Arab village of Birkadeen, in among the hills, where new and novel sights will be looked upon.

Every female they meet arouses John's interest, and he looks sharply at the half-hidden face. The hope he cherishes is always before him, and when Lady Ruth notices his eager actions, she understands just what it means, and is as anxious in one way as himself.

One thing annoys the American; this is the persistence with which Sir Lionel keeps up as a member of the little company. He makes himself agreeable all around, and as John has had no proof of the Briton's miserable work in the harbor of Malta, he is wise enough to restrain his feelings and hold his tongue, trusting to some future event to tear off the mask and reveal him in his true colors.

At noon they are in the village, and stop to eat their lunch at an Arab tavern, where they fare pretty well, though John is ready to make a vow never to again touch the native dish of Kuskusu which is set before them.

They see strange things at Birkadeen, and from there continue their journey to other villages, Bermandries and El-Biar, at each of which Mustapha has something odd to show them that will ever remain a pleasant memory in the future.

It is a day John Craig will never forget for more reasons than one; a day marked with a white stone because of the pleasure he enjoys in the society of this bright English girl, whom he has ere now learned to love, and a day that must always remain prominent in his mind because it precedes a night that is the most memorable in all his history.

In more ways than one does Lady Ruth, while always acting as a lady, show that she prefers his society to that of Sir Lionel, and though the British soldier appears unruffled on the surface, he is undoubtedly deeply piqued.

So the hours wear on.

The sun is low in the west, and the ever watchful Mustapha declares it is time they started for the city. They have enjoyed a ride on the ship of the desert, as the camel is called, admired the Arabian steeds, which all the money of an unbeliever or Christian dog could not purchase, and looked upon many strange scenes.

Several times during the afternoon they have been temporarily separated. The baronet appears to have a deep interest in the queer things to be seen in the Arab village, for more than once he lingers behind to ask questions as he explains, in the hope of purchasing some article that has particularly caught his fancy.

John never once suspects that Sir Lionel may have another motive in his actions.

When Mustapha announces that it is time they return, they look around for the vehicle which was to take them back, but strangely enough it does not appear.

As the minutes pass Mustapha grows exceedingly impatient. He has arranged matters to suit their convenience, and this delay is annoying. It does not suit him to return at night.

Just as patience ceases to be a virtue, and the guide has announced his intention of finding some other means of transportation, they discover the omnibus coming into view from beyond the thicket of cactus and aloe.

It has been carrying a load of villagers from their homes to the hills of Bouzaveah, to the native cemetery which crowns the summit.

Then they suddenly remember that it is Friday, or the Mohammedan Sunday, on which day great throngs repair to the grave-yards and visit the tombs of the marabouts or saints, gazing upon some ancient relic which the departed wore in his life-time, and which, on account of its disreputable condition, no respectable European would touch.

They have the omnibus to themselves, which, of course, pleases them.

John shakes his head dubiously as he enters the vehicle. He has glanced at its condition, and declares that they will be lucky indeed to reach Algiers without a breakdown.

The driver has been scored by Mustapha for his tardiness, and appears to feel the sting of the reproach, for no sooner are they seated in the old vehicle than he uses his whip with some vim, the horses start away, and they head for the city.

When the road is smooth it is all very good, but after leaving Birkadeen they will strike a rough section that will try the staying powers of the wretched vehicle.

As they whirl through Birkadeen in a cloud of dust, with several mangy curs howling at the heels of the steaming horses, it is just sunset. There is no mosque here with its minaret, from which the muezzin chants his call to prayer, but the faithful do not need such a summons, and can be seen here and there prostrating themselves on the ground with faces toward the holy city.

One grows accustomed to such spectacles when travelling in Oriental countries, where Mohammed is looked upon as the great prophet of Allah, and the novelty inspired by the first sight dies away.

After leaving the Arab village, they strike the rough section of the road.

It would be natural to suppose that the driver has by this time gotten over his anger at being chided by Mustapha, and might moderate his pace, out of respect to his antiquated vehicle, if not the safety of those who occupy it.

Not so.

If anything, as darkness steals over the scene, he uses his whip with greater energy, and his voice urges on the sweating horses.

Now they have it surely.

The ruts in the road cause the vehicle to bounce from side to side, and those inside are tossed about much like rubber balls.

At first they are disposed to treat it as a joke, and laugh over the ludicrous situation, but as it increases, their sufferings begin.

The dust is disagreeable, the jolting actually dangerous, as they are shot from one side of the vehicle to the other with tremendous force.

Besides, John is in momentary expectation of the rickety affair breaking down and spilling them all out on the roadway.

Indeed, he is surprised that this accident has been so long delayed.

He shouts to the driver to slacken the pace, but evidently the fellow fails to hear. Then he puts his head out of the window and once more elevates his voice, but the rattle of the plunging vehicle, together with the noise made by the driver himself, as he shouts at his steeds like a crazy Bedouin, combine to deaden all other sounds.

At any rate there is no result.

John has by this time become excited; they are mounting a little elevation, and temporarily their pace is reduced. Once at the top and a long slant lies beyond, down which they must go at lightning speed.

It is now or never.

He is bound to stop this mad race against time if he has to climb to the top of the swaying vehicle and toss the reckless driver off.

It is with this intention before him that he bids the ladies hold on with all their power, while he seeks an interview with the fellow who handles the ribbons.

Then he seizes the window frame, intending to get hold of something above which will serve as a fulcrum to move his body.

It is just at this interesting moment that the expected event occurs.

There is a sudden, tremendous shock, as they strike some obstacle; shrieks from the women, a swaying of the coach, which immediately falls over on one side.

A wheel has come off.

They are wrecked among the hills, and a considerable distance from Algiers, the lights of which illumine the heavens beyond.

"Is any one injured?" calls out John, with some anxiety in his voice, for the shock has been quite serious.

They are all in a confused heap in the corner that is down, and the professor is the first to crawl out.

Then comes Lady Ruth, excited, but, thank Heaven, uninjured.

They help Sir Lionel out. He limps around, feeling his left leg, and groaning a little as even the bravest of men do on occasions, and hoping the pain he feels is nothing serious.

Aunt Gwen alone remains, and there is heard no sound from her. The usually vociferous voice seems to have been utterly hushed.

"Oh! is she dead?" exclaims the young girl, with horror in her voice, as Doctor Chicago and the professor carry Aunt Gwen out.

"I trust not. I think she has only fainted. Can you lift one of the cushions from the wreck, Lady Ruth, and we will place her upon it here?"

She shows immediate animation instead of going into hysterics, as many girls would do under the circumstances, and flies to the extent of her ability.

Thus Aunt Gwen is soon in a comfortable position, and the doctor starts to bring her to, for he believes she has only swooned.

This he soon accomplishes, and when she is able to declare she is not in pain, only badly broken up by the shock, he feels that it is time he turned his attention to another quarter.

(To be continued).

MAJOR MARCHAND.

The French African Explorer Who Has Just Been Decorated.

Major J. B. Marchand, who was recently decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor at Jibouti, on the East African coast, where he lately arrived safely, is an officer of the French marine infantry. Marchand made his appearance on the horizon of European influence in Africa in January, 1896, when he went with a splendidly equipped expedition, the purpose of which was the occupation of Upper Egypt and the union of the French colony on the Gulf of Aden with the French possessions on the Congo River. It was not until the daring and ingenuous officer arrived at Fashoda and strung up his republic's flag that Britain interfered. Fashoda is dangerously near to Khartoum, and all that part of Africa is politically pre-empted by Great Britain. Then, too, the English claimed a moral right in the Soudan, because of Gordon's death and the massacre of his army by the fanatical Mahdists. The story of Marchand's withdrawal from Fashoda, the diplomatic complications and the backdown of the Paris Government is recent and familiar history.

MAJOR MARCHAND.

IS IT A CHARM?

Lady Churchill Wears a Very Curious Amulet on Her Arm.

Lady Randolph Churchill, who is still one of the most superbly beautiful women of England, despite her grown-up son, is as devoted a victim to fads as she was in the days when she was Jennie Jerome, the petted beauty of New York society.

Of late her ladyship has interested London in a bracelet which she wears upon her right arm. It is a snake, which, when unwound, might be two feet in length. It is of greenish gold, with bronze spots upon it, ragged in outline, so as to give it a startlingly life-like appearance.

The head of the serpent is of green enamel, with ruby eyes and a ruby tongue. Its fangs are of ivory, and in the head there is an emerald shaped like a horn.

This marvellous piece of jewelry attracts attention whenever it is worn, and her ladyship is kept busy answering questions about it. She answers freely all things except its origin, but upon that point she is as silent as the sphinx.

Her Mousetrap.

Prepared for an emergency is the phrase that seems to fit an elderly woman who, says the Washington Post, was going to the Virginia mountains and had the drawing room of a sleeping car.

The porter was helping her to stow away her belongings. "Put that mousetrap under the berth," she commanded, and her voice had the ring of one accustomed to command.

"You specting to catch anything?" grinned the porter.

"Expecting!" she snapped. "I've already caught two mice in sleeping cars in the last eight years. I don't propose to be mutilated by the creatures while I sleep. Put that trap where I tell you and mind your own business!"

Think of a defenseless woman daring enough to say "mind your own business" to a sleeping car porter and yet afraid of a mouse!

CANADA AND THE JAPANESE

Imperial Interests Say We Must Stand by Them.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Says British Columbia's Interests Are Second to Those of the Empire—The Poll Tax on the Chinese, However, May Be Increased From $50 to $500 on Entering This Country.

Ottawa, July 8.—Yesterday, the seventeenth Friday of the session, has not differed from its predecessors in being a quiet day, with a slim attendance at both sittings of the House.

Brockville and West Huron Cases.

At the opening of the House yesterday afternoon the Speaker announced that the clerk of the Crown in Chancery had laid upon the table of the House the poll books, voters' lists and all documents in his possession in connection with the elections in Brockville and West Huron. On motion of Mr. Borden (Halifax) they were referred to the committee on privileges and elections for investigation and report.

The Voters' Lists.

The Premier, in reply to Mr. Bell (Pictou), said that the voters' lists would be printed this year, and that an appropriation would be asked for in the supplementary estimates for that purpose, and for paying the county officers who furnished the lists.

Chinese Labor.

Col. Prior drew attention to the British Columbia acts regarding the employment of Chinese and Japanese labor, and asked if the Government was prepared to make any statement as to whether or not they would be disallowed.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied at some length, admitting there was a strong sentiment of repugnance amongst the English race towards Mongolians, notwithstanding the generally tolerant spirit of Englishmen. This had been manifested by legislation in South Australia and the Straits Settlements, and this sentiment had to be considered. At the same time Canada had contributed largely in the way of steamship subsidies to develop trade with Japan and China. These two facts might appear anomalous, yet facts they were, the former perhaps the dominant consideration, and due consideration should, therefore, be given to the request now before Parliament, in the shape of a bill to increase from $50 to $500 the poll tax on Chinese. He said that so far as Japanese immigration was concerned that question had to be governed by consideration of the Imperial policy, which must appeal to every member of the House as a British subject. As part of the British Empire we have duties to discharge to the Empire which we cannot ignore. After alluding to the possibility of complications in the East which might render the friendliness of Japan of great importance to Great Britain, he concluded by saying: "I will say here and now that we shall do our best to maintain the alliance of Great Britain with the Empire of Japan. We owe it to ourselves and to our position as British subjects that every other question should give way before that reason of Imperial necessity. It will not do for us, as British subjects, only to sing 'God Save the Queen,' and boast of our connections at banquets, demonstrations and celebrations. We must also be prepared to make some sacrifices. I know I do not in this chamber utter sentiments which are mine alone, when I say we should be prepared and ready to make every sacrifice which our Imperial connection may demand at our hands. If we are to share in the glory and participate in the advantages, we must also assume the duties, be ready for them, and abide by them. These are the reasons which have actuated the Government in relation to the question, and the duty which may be encumbered upon us in regard to those provincial statutes we must discharge in the light of the considerations that actuated us in dealing with the statutes which we have already disallowed." (Cheers.)

The debate was continued at great length by Messrs Sifton, Davin, Davis, Wallace, Bostock, Ellis and McGregor, until nearly 11 o'clock, the Doukhobors and Galicians being brought into the discussion.

The Redistribution Bill.

After the motion to adjourn, under which all the discussion took place, had been withdrawn, the House again went into committee of the whole on the redistribution bill.

The Ontario and Quebec clauses were passed, and the Prince Edward Island being reached, a lengthy debate sprung up, which lasted until 12.45, when the bill got through committee and was reported.

The Grand Trunk Bill.

In the Senate the Grand Trunk lease bill was discussed until 6 o'clock, when the debate was adjourned until Tuesday. The Conservative caucus yesterday morning resulted in an amendment being agreed to, which practically binds the Grand Trunk to hand over to the Intercolonial at Montreal all eastbound freight for points on the Intercolonial, to the exclusion of its own line to Levis, and gives the Minister of Railways power to cancel the westbound traffic arrangement at any time on six months' notice.

The Lynden Burglars Sentenced.

Brantford, Ont., July 8.—The Lynden burglars were again brought up for hearing yesterday morning. Wesley Vansickle was sentenced to six years in the Kingston Penitentiary, Thomas Bishop to four months and $100 fine and John Tolmie was discharged.

South Perth's Protest Dismissed.

Toronto, July 8.—The protest against the return of Nelson Monteith, M.P.P. for South Perth, was dismissed by the trial judges yesterday afternoon. The petitioner must pay the costs.

The birth of a third daughter to the Ozarina has resurrected the story that at the time of her marriage a gypsy woman prophesied that she would give birth to seven daughters before a son and heir would come.

The Ontario Department of Crown Lands has been asked to grant a license for a frog manufactory to be located near Napanee. It is the intention of the promoters to breed all kinds of frogs for table use on an extensive scale.

In order that our goods may not fall into the hands of unappreciative people, we require you to collect from each person you leave a sample with, 5 cents, half the selling price of same. After distributing the 25 packages you return us the money. We will then give you for this service, absolutely free, and in addition to the Bracelet, which was awarded you in the first place, a Solid Gold Shell Ring, beautifully engraved, and to all who return this puzzle within three days from when seen first, we will send with the Ring, also free, a splendid Simulating Ruby, Emerald or Sapphire Genuine Tiffany Style Stick Pin. Our business is a legitimate paying enterprise, carried on upon the broadest principles of co-operation, and conducted by men of experience and business ability. Our business is conducted throughout on the highest scale of honor. Regarding our responsibility, we refer you to any mercantile agency. We simply ask you to interpret our Picture Puzzle and send us your address. We will award you the Bracelet and send you, postage paid, the 25 sample packages of Lime Fruit Powder. Distribute them according to instructions and we will give you also the Solid Gold Shell Ring and Pin. Could any proposition be more fair? A SORRY SHOW.

Inspector Howe's Visit to the Lindsay Fire Department.

The Lindsay Post says:—"The whole town is making merry over the sorry exhibition made by our fire department when called out yesterday morning by Mr. Robt. Howe, Inspector for the Fire Underwriters' Association. It was indeed a most remarkable and amazing demonstration of incompetence, but while ludicious in itself, the exhibition was one that is likely to be attended with very serious consequences to property owners. We are in a position to state that in Inspector Howe's judgment yesterday's exhibition was one of the very worst he had ever witnessed, not barring even the small villages, and we fancy that Mayor Walters and Chairman Leanon are in a position to corroborate our statement if they so desire, as the Inspector unbosomed himself to them in very blunt language. As noted above, Inspector Howe's report to the Underwriters' Association will likely have far-reaching consequences for the citizens of Lindsay. He has been put off with promises of fire brigade reorganization for three or four years, and has shown great forebearance considering the interests at stake. Rugged and crude as were some former exhibitions, that of yesterday capped the climax. Our fire brigade has been retrograding instead of progressing toward greater efficiency, and the men appear to have lost whatever modicum of espirit de corps they were possessed of."

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N.C. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

A WOMAN YOU CAN'T SNUB.

Never Trifle With a Skinny Woman if Her Face Shines.

Do you know who is the most exasperating woman in the world? The woman you can't snub. She is two kinds—the meek and lowly sort, that when you smite her turns the other cheek until you're positively too tired to deal her another blow, and the one whose self importance is invulnerable as Achilles' heel. I met one of the last kind early in the winter. On general principles I would avoid this woman, because she's skinny and her face shines. Something is all wrong about a skinny woman; one way or another she's dangerous.

When a skinny woman's face shines, it means she's above using powder and is sure to make a parade, as a virtue, of the very wrong that is to account for the lack of flesh on her bones. I couldn't help the woman calling on me, and I returned her first call rather than run the risk of what she might do to me if I violated this fundamental principle of right social action as prescribed by every etiquette book in the land. When she called a second time, she addressed me as "my good woman." I can forgive almost anything but being called a good woman. Only a menial or mediocrity past 40 is properly termed a good woman. I resolved to snub this creature, and I wanted her to know I was snubbing her. I would never return her visit—never. And how do you suppose she takes it? Every time she sees me she apologizes to me for not having returned my visit—blots my intended neglect of her out of mind and patronizes me with the assumption that it is she who is neglecting me. Mark the wisdom I have uttered.

Never trifle with a skinny woman if her face shines.

AT THE BOOK BARGAIN SALE.

The Kind of Intelligent Saleslad[ies] They Have in New York.

Mr. B. Worm—Have you a cheap edition of "The Iliad?"

Miss Jenkins (first saleslady, shifting gum)—Who by?

Mr. Worm—Homer.

Miss Jenkins—We got a cheap edition of "The Idiot" by a man named Homer, Miss Smithers?

Mr. Worm—Not "The Idiot"—"The Iliad"—Ill-ee-ad.

Miss Jenkins—"The Illy Add." Queer name that. Don't think I ever heard of the book. Sounds Russian. 'Bout Russia, is it?

Mr. Worm—No, I think not; Greek mostly.

Miss Jenkins—Oh! It's a Greek story, Lizzie, I think I've heard of it. Tells about the war they had between Greece and Japan, I b'lieve.

Miss Smithers (second saleslady)—The name of the book you want is "The Idiot." You want it in paper cover?

Mr. Worm—No; I'm sure it's "The Iliad."

Miss Smithers—Well, I think you've got it wrong. It might be "The Kailyard." I've heard of something like that. Who do you say the book's by? Homer? Don't know his full name, do you?

Mr. Worm—No; that is, that's all there is of the name.

Miss Smithers—Oh, I see—nome de ploom. I never heard of him. Must be some new man ain't got his reputation made. We don't keep none but the real pop'lar books. Miss Jenkins, s'pose you look through that pile in the corner.

Miss Jenkins (after three minutes' search)—No; we ain't got a copy of "The Lizard."

The Nightmare of Microbes.

A woman who had purchased a pair of gloves was given three $1 bills in change. "Do it up in paper, please," she said to the salesgirl. The request was complied with, and the wrapped up bills were put in a pocketbook.

"Some persons are microbe mad," said a physician in explaining the incident. Many have it so bad that they will not even pick up a pin, because it has been said that all sorts of disease germs can be collected under their heads. Dread of microbes is a common form of hypochondria. I can sympathize with a person who does not like to see a woman with a bundle of dirty clothes for washing get into a public conveyance, but there is no use in going to extremes.

"Ever since the researches of Koch and Pasteur have attracted attention the number of microbe maniacs has steadily increased. Take any morbid minded person and give him a little insight into bacteriology, and the result is sure to be disastrous. He shakes in terror at the first little symptom of real or imaginary derangement."

An Open and Shut Game.

Two umbrellas are on show in the window of a Chinese general store in Mott street. One of these bears this sign: "Self Closing Umbrellas, Wholesale or Retail." The other has this legend: "Self Opening Umbrellas, Wholesale or Retail." A passerby stopped and tried to think which he would prefer, an umbrella which shuts of itself or one which opens "pop!" like a silk opera hat. He is still weighing the pros and cons and the relative dangers of the two varieties.

Probably the only way to solve the difficulty is to buy two umbrellas and let one do the opening and the other the closing when emergency arises. This, however, has its difficulties also. Suppose he took the self opening umbrella by mistake and tried to make it close itself. Would it turn inside out, or would the holder lose merely his temper? It would be a difficult problem to solve, even if its terms were hats, but with a purely Chinese product like the umbrella nothing short of the abacus will do the sum.—New York Commercial.

OAK HALL

Must Be Cleared Out

BY THE 15th OF THIS MONTH.

Partly because we can't make terms with the landlord—partly because we "don't have to"—and partly because we want to do all our Peterborough business in future under one massive canopy, we have decided to move out of the Oak Hall corner, and move we must by the 15th of the month. That's settled—but we positively will not move a stitch of the Oak Hall Clothing, if deliberate, downright sacrificing of prices will influence bargain-lovers to buy out the stock in parcels.

SATURDAY, JULY 8.

we throw wide open the doors for

AN UNLOADING SALE

For one short week to close up Oak Hall. No hedging or flinching on our part—we "hew to the line let the chips fall where they may."

LAUREL LADDIE.

We give to-day a cut of the handsome collie, "Laurel Laddie," lately imported by Mr. C. B. McAllister. "Laurel Laddie," who has been greatly admired in Peterborough, was the winner of 80 prizes in England.

The following extract from the "Stock-Keeper" (England), tells something of the place "Laurel Laddie" won for himself in the old land:—"The most notable victory in the Ashford-in-the-Water show was the award that gave the collie "Laurel Laddie" the cup for the best dog in the show, and we understand that this is his last appearance in England, as he sails for Ontario on the 8th inst. Laurel Laddie has been a good servant for Mr. Wrigley, having won 80 prizes, including thirty-eight firsts and specials. We wish the dog's new owner every success with him."

Literary Rarities and Curiosities.

Referring to the "Selection of books, maps, engravings and autographs," which is the title under which Mr James Bain, jr., and Mr Robert Jenkins, at the late Historical Exhibition, designated their magnificent collection of literary rarities and curiosities, the Toronto Telegram has the following:—'Pontoach, or the Savages of America,' is No. 2. This is a volume, the authorship of which is attributed to Major Robert Rogers, and the book was published in London in 1766. Pontoic, as the Indian name is always written now, is, it should be understood, a corruption of the name with which this notice commences. Major Rogers hailed from Ticonderoga. With the cession of Quebec by the French and the conquest of Lower Canada by Great Britain, Major Rogers was sent to Forts Toronto (Rouille), Niagara, Detroit and Michilimackinac, now always spoken of as Mackinac, to take possession for the Imperial Government. He was a man of very great energy and determination, and anything that he undertook to do was done with the most complete thoroughness. The late Mr. Armstrong, so well known as an iron founder in this city, and Lieut.-Col. Rogers, of Peterborough, are both connections of Major Robert Rogers."

REVIEWS.

The July number of that most popular monthly, the Pall Mall Magazine, is an excellent one and contains a wealth of matter both entertaining and instructive. One of the leading articles for the month is an exhaustive treatise on modern architecture in Chicago, by Peter B. Wright, a leading architect of that city. Lord Charles Beresford, a capable authority as well as a picturesque figure, discusses approvingly the Anglo-American entente. The fiction is abundant and varied, there are a number of interesting miscellaneous articles and the illustrative work as well as the general literary standard is maintained at a high pitch.

A Romantic Affair.

Considerable excitement was created at the Free Methodist church Sunday evening, June 18th, when Mr. Isaac Spry, of Rawdon, came in and carried off Miss Green, who teaches school in the neighborhood. Miss Green screamed for help and was rescued by some men at the door. It appears the two had been keeping company together and Miss Green signified her desire to be relieved from his attentions and affection, which made Mr. Spry wrathy, and he claimed to have done this to make her apologize. It is reported that Spry has left these parts to escape the law.—Marmora Herald.

WAS IT A FORGED LETTER?

A Montreal Man Says Chief Wilkie Authorized a Forgery for the Carranza Letter.

Montreal, July 10.—The old story of Lieut. Carranza's expulsion from Canada is revived in a manner which reflects very little credit upon the United States. One George F. Bell of 707 Lagauchetiere street swears that the letter submitted by the United States Government to the British Government, which resulted in the deportation of Lieut. Carranza and Senor du Bosc from Canada, was a forgery. And he knows, because he swears that he stole the letter which Lieut. Carranza wrote; took it to Washington, and gave it to Chief Wilkie, who had it translated. It proved to be quite harmless, and, according to Mr. Bell, experts were sent for who distorted the meaning and who then forged a letter, basing the forgery upon the original Carranza letter. Bell swears that Detective Kellert accompanied him to the house; that he took the letter to Washington and gave it to Chief Wilkie of the United States Secret Service; that it was translated and found to be harmless; that additions to and erasures from were made to the original translation, at Chief Wilkie's instigation, distorting the meaning of the letter. That a letter embodying the translation as amended was forged in Chief Wilkie's office. And that this forgery was the one given out by the secret service as Lieut. Carranza's letter.

Denies It All.

Washington, July 10.—Chief Wilkie has authorized a denial of the whole story. He says G. F. Bell was never employed by the department and that his story is made out of the whole cloth.

Consecration Services.

Detroit, July 10.—After listening to various pastors in the churches during the forenoon, attending the Sabbath observance rally in the afternoon, last night an additional touch of solemnity was imparted to the meetings of the Christian Endeavorers. The generalities of religion were in some measure neglected, and the evening worship in 81 Protestant churches of Detroit and Windsor took the form of "consecration services." The capacity of the churches was taxed.

WANT CANADA TO BE IGNORED

Negotiations Over Alaskan Boundary Declared Off.

The Americans Say So—They Also Claim That Canada's Interests Should Be Disposed of by Great Britain and the United States Without Being Consulted in the Matter—Where the Yankees Stick.

New York, July 10.—A Washington correspondent says: Following are the British-Canadian propositions which have been rejected by the State Department:

First—The cession of Pyramid Harbor at the head of the Lynn Canal.

Second—The cession of any other port on the Lynn Canal.

Third—The cession of a strip of territory which would give access to tidewater.

Fourth—A free right of way across Alaska to any United States port.

Fifth—The variation of Hay's provisional boundary line so as to include Kluckwan, an Indian village at the head of canoe navigation leading into the Lynn Canal.

Sixth—The inclusion of the Porcupine district with a near approach to navigable waters on the British side of the provisional boundary line.

Seventh—The proposition to arbitrate the provisional line, precedent to the formation of a modus vivendi, pending a permanent settlement of the question.

Negotiations Declared Off.

This statement was made by a high official of the State Department in describing the status of negotiations on the Alaskan boundary: "The negotiations have been indefinitely postponed, or, to put it otherwise, they have practically been declared off."

These developments leave the boundary line dispute where it was when the joint high commission adjourned on Feb. 18, with the situation not improved.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, Ambassador Choate and Lord Salisbury went as far as to agree that a provisional boundary line, to be followed by a modus vivendi, was the first step. England proposed several lines which were objected to, and eventually Secretary Hay delimited the territory with a line which was apparently agreeable to England. Canada then suddenly was revealed again as the really important factor, and made propositions at various times which were sustained by England.

England's latest diplomatic resort, which developed on Friday, is the astounding suggestion that the provisional line itself be submitted to arbitration. This was promptly rejected by this Government by cable.

Where the Yankees Stick.

The United States is not unwilling to submit the true and permanent boundary line to arbitration and has officially said so. The State Department officials here regard the proposal to arbitrate the provisional line as only another scheme for delay, profitless to this country, and capable of being made advantageous to Canada.

Canada Should Be Ignored.

The State Department makes this point: It is a matter which two sensible and great Governments could easily agree upon without the intervention of any other name. Great Britain's refusal to accept our provisional line precedent to the formulation of a modus vivendi is regarded as distinctly disingenuous and intended to secure through the favor of an arbitrator, probably an European monarch or a South American despot, an advantage to be utilized when the temporary line is arbitrated as a basis for some preposterous claim.

The Boundary Party Back.

Tacoma, Wash., July 10.—The Fairbanks-Foster Alaskan boundary party returned from the north yesterday and interviews with members of the party indicate that the watershed on White Pass, back of Skaguay and Dyea, will be accepted as the international bonndary line at that point. The White and Chilcoot Passes constitute the storm centre of the Alaskan boundary.

Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock.

Southampton, July 10.—The Shamrock had delightful weather and a fine wind for her trial spin on Saturday. She acquitted herself nobly. Sir Thomas Lipton is delighted with her. Sir William Goldsmith, lately captain of Her Majesty's yacht Alberta and the great authority on yachting, said of her: "Never in my life have I seen a finer vessel afloat. She will do the work well for which she is intended." She will take another sail to-day.

Webster Still Talking.

Paris, July 10.—At yesterday's session of the Venezuelan arbitration commission Sir Richard Webster, Attorney-General of Great Britain, presented, in support of the British case, a chronological review up to the year 1816. He will continue this feature of his argument to-day.

Dreyfus' Tormentor Fired.

Paris, July 10.—M. Deniel, Governor of the penal settlement on the Isle du Diable, where Capt. Dreyfus was imprisoned, has been removed, and will be succeeded by M. L. Soucan.

Furious Mob Attack Non-Union Employes on Trolley Cars.

Shots Were Fired—The Conductors Were Armed—Mayor Wilson Calls Out the Regulars to Clear the Streets—The Forest City Is Now Under Martial Law, and More Trouble Is Expected Before the End of the Fight.

London, Ont., July 10.—An acute stage of the Street Railway strike here was reached Saturday afternoon. At noon Saturday it was rumored around the city that the non-union employes of the company were dissatisfied with their wages, and would run their cars into the barns at 2 o'clock. In consequence of this report, a crowd of from 500 to 1,000 people gathered at the corner of Dundas and Lyle streets to watch developments. A squad of police was on hand, and these, aided by the company's special detectives, kept the crowd in motion, and there was no disturbance of any sort. At 2.30 the cars started to run into the barns, and it was evident to the crowd of onlookers that the "scabs" had gone on strike. Each car, as it rounded the corner and made for the barns, was loudly cheered.

Conductor Drew a Revolver.

But a few minutes later, when it was discovered that there had been a misunderstanding, and the cars started to run out again, the cheers were turned to groans and hisses, but no attempt was made to obstruct the cars, until Conductor Fitzsimmons, as his car rounded the corner on Dundas, drew a revolver and levelled it at the jeering mob. This action so incensed the mob that before he had time to make any use of the weapon he was lying a writhing heap upon the road, his head a mass of blood, the result of a dozen or so well-aimed stones.

Other Pistols Were Used.

The trouble might have ended here had not the company's "specials" and the non-union employes foolishly tried to intimidate the mob with pistols, one of the men going so far as to fire three shots, which fortunately were harmless, into the crowd. This action so infuriated the sympathizers that the police were powerless and the company's men were so roughly handled that one of them, Fred. Crystall, was thought for some time to be dead.

Fourteen Cars Smashed.

Fourteen cars which made their appearance in this section of the city were more or less wrecked.

Hissed the Mayor.

At about 3.30 Mayor Wilson and Chief of Police Williams arrived at the corner of Dundas and Lyle streets. They came up Elizabeth street from Queen's avenue. Chief Williams remained at the corner of Lyle street, and Mayor Wilson drove to the corner of Adelaide street, where the crowd was greatest. His arrival was greeted with groans and hisses. Standing up in the buggy, he attempted to speak to the crowd. He was greatly agitated, and it was several minutes before he succeeded in getting a hearing. He said he had been elected to do his duty, and he would do it. They were doing harm to the cause of the strikers. "These men shall have justice, and I will help you get it for them," he said. "I have always been your friend—"

How the Mob Replied.

Cries of "No, you haven't!" "Just at election time!" "You've been bought by the company!" "How about your stock in the new Electric Railway?" "You haven't done your duty" continually interrupted the speaker.

Told to Disperse.

Continuing, the Mayor asked them, for their sakes, and for the sakes of the strikers, to disperse and go home quietly, until Tuesday, when the men's cause would be in the hands of the committee, but the mob's only replies were hisses and groans, and a continued fusilade of stones and bricks shattered the cars.

Ald. Parnell and Joseph T. Marks also addressed the crowd, and entreated them to disperse and commit no further damage. The crowd paid little or no attention to these entreaties, and seemed only too anxious to continue the destruction of the company's property. Later on in the

The Daily Review.

MONDAY, JULY 10, 1899.

THE Sheriff in West Elgin still holds his job and no investigation into the disgraceful frauds of the recent election has been ordered. Incidentally it might also be mentioned that the Hardy Government still continue to hold the reins at Toronto.

THIS year a circular entitled "The Kawartha" lakes was published and widely circulated. The result has been a large increase in the number of foreigners or strangers who have visited the beautiful back lake country this year, although the season is still young. Those who engaged in the lake trade are satisfied that to the advertising secured through the circular can be attributed the presence of these new visitors. That this is correct will not be doubted, and it only goes to show what might be accomplished by a judicious and systematic advertising of Peterborough and its adjacent summer resorts.

THE Review gives the Yukon charges in opposite form in another column so that all may read them. When they are read and it is remembered that similar charges by Yukon correspondents have brought disgrace upon Canada and its Government, the reader will hardly fail to ask how could a Government refuse investigation, especially when Sir Hibbert Tupper offered his services free of charge at Dawson City or Ottawa and stated he would retire from public life if they were not substantiated. Mr. Sifton must have feared the results of a fair investigation or else he would have strengthened his Government and his party by disproving the charges and vindicating his administration.

THE Toronto Star, Liberal, gives the Globe, the elder Grit organ in the city, a home thrust when it says:—

The Globe seeks to divert attention from the attack on the Ontario Government for its neglect to investigate the West Elgin frauds by a defence of the Government on its general record and its administration of Ontario's affairs, and on the same page praises the Ottawa Government for its readiness to order an inquiry into similar charges in connection with federal bye-elections. The Globe is scarcely consistent. In the federal cases only the barest charges have been made, while in the provincial cases the offences have been admitted in part. Surely if the Ottawa Government's prompt assent to an investigation is to be praised, the Ontario Government's failure to act when its affairs are involved calls for censure.

The Star makes the Globe's inconsistency quite clear, and also brings out strikingly the failure of the discredited Hardy combination to do its duty.

THE class of immigrants which Mr. Sifton bringing to Canada at great public expense has raised considerable question and discussion as to the wisdom of planting colonies of Doukhobors, Galicians or any of these European peoples in the Canadian Northwest, where assimilation with the sturdy and moral Canadian and a conversion to Canadian customs and sympathies is bound to be slow, if ever attained. Events, that non-partisan publication at Ottawa that discusses all questions on their merits, has this interesting reference to Canada's latest additions to its population as a result of the Liberal immigration policy:—

The negro question is a puzzling one for our neighbors and the Globe published the other day a thoughtful article dealing with it. But if some of the things I have been told recently of the peculiar peoples with whom Mr Sifton is peopling our Northwest be true, Canada will in time have puzzling racial questions of her own. My informant is a commercial man who has recently been up where the peculiar peoples are settled, and he says that from what he saw himself and from what he was told by settlers, he has come to the conclusion that the assets for prairie would be infinitely profitable to the settlers Mr Sifton is procuring at so much trouble and expense. The Doukhobors he considers to be quite as undesirable as the Galicians, and he declared that they are at once filthy, immoral and dishonest. Much of what my informant told me is quite unprintable and it describes such a state of affairs among the new colonists, that, if true, a stop should be put to bringing in any more colonies of the kind.

But Mr. Sifton has already been having some of these people rushed on the voters' lists in Manitoba, so that they are going to serve Liberal interests in some way at least.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts a bottle, every bottle guaranteed. FOR A NATIONAL MUSEUM.

The Plans Show a Structure That Will Be a Credit to Canada.

Ottawa, July 10.—The supplementary estimates will include an appropriation of $50,000 towards the construction of a national museum in the grounds surrounding the Parliament buildings. The plans for the museum provide for a structure which will be a credit to the Dominion, and which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the capital. As provision will be made for art galleries as well as for the exhibits of geological and other specimens affecting the material growth of the country. It is said that the building when completed will cost in the neighborhood of $500,000.

The work of completing the supplementary estimates has been somewhat heavier than was anticipated, and the statement will not be brought down till late this week.

That Yukon Road Claim.

Ottawa, July 10.—It is reported the supplementary estimates will include a grant to Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann to compensate them for their outlay in connection with the contract for the Yukon Railway, which Parliament refused to sanction. The sum, it is understood, is a large one.

RIOT ACT READ AT LONDON, O.

afternoon the crowd began to thin out, and the company seized the opportunity to run the rest of the cars in.

Again Riot Reigned.

Several cars reached the barns safely, but the crowd began to swell, and riot soon reigned again, and each car was greeted with a volley of stones and eggs. About this time No. 96 came along at a rapid rate. When it reached Adelaide street the stones and eggs started to fly from all directions. When it drew near Lyle street, missiles came so thick and fast that the motorman left his post and cowered down under the seats. He did not reverse the motor, and a switch turning into the barns was closed, the car shot past and went east in the direction of the Fair Grounds. On arriving at the loop the motorman and conductor jumped from the car and ran through the Fair Grounds and escaped.

Derailed the Car.

A portion of the crowd who followed it plugged the tracks, turned on the power and ran the car off the track. The wheels cut so deep that they were embedded in the earth up to the axles. Every pane of glass was soon shattered, and the furnishings were demolished. Somebody started to make a fire in the centre of the car with a pile of the broken seats. Detective Rider and Sergt. Jenkins put in an appearance, poured water and put the fire out. Little or no trouble followed after the officers arrived. The car was got into the barns at about 5 o'clock Sunday morning. A gang of the company's men worked on it for hours before it could be moved.

Motorman's Nose and Ribs Broken.

The next car to arrive in the East End was No. 96, which also overran the switch for a short distance. It was also bombarded with eggs and stones. Motorman Rigney was struck with several missiles. His nose and two or three of his ribs were broken and his cheek was cut open and he suffered several scalp wounds. He was taken into the car barns, where Dr. Drake dressed his wounds. Rigney is now in the hospital.

Conductor Fired Three Shots.

Conductor Crittle of the same car took refuge under a seat, and, pulling a revolver, fired three shots at random. The police took his weapon from him. In the meantime Motorman Nielson and Conductor Juke, two of the strikers, volunteered to run the car into the barn. Juke climbed on the roof and held the trolley pole until the car reached the barn. Both men were loudly cheered.

Crew Deserted the Car.

The next car to arrive from up town was No 93. It stopped on Dundas street, midway between Lyle and Adelaide. The windows were broken and the crew deserted the car under police protection. Close on its heels came car No. 89 at such terrific speed that the motorman, in his excited condition, lost control of the brakes. His car crashed into No. 90, smashing the fender and staving in the vestibule of 89, and shattering every window. No. 94, the last car to put in an appearance, nearly repeated the error of No. 89, pulling up within a few feet of the latter. The three cars, Nos. 90, 89 and 94, were stalled in the middle of the block and the police undertook to run them into the barn. The three were coupled together and P. C. Harry Humston, who was a street railway conductor before the strike, took charge of the lever, Sergt. Maguire holding the trolley rope. They reached the barns in safety. All the cars being out of the way the disturbance ceased for the time being.

The actual violence was done by a small proportion of the crowd, the great majority being merely passive spectators, several of whom were hit by flying stones. The antipathy of the unruly element was directed against the cars and their crews, but the police were let severely alone. The bluecoats made no arrests, but were busy taking names.

Cars Were Targets.

The conductors and motormen now started to desert their cars at the corner of Richmond and Dundas streets, and at 5 o'clock six cars were lined up on Dundas street near Richmond, and there the crowd gathered, and the cars, up to about midnight, were targets for a continuous shower of bricks, stones and other missiles.

The Riot Act Read.

At about 9.30 p.m. Mayor Wilson, after many threats, read the Riot Act twice at the corner of Dundas and Richmond, but the mob refused to disperse, and the police were powerless in their efforts to control them.

Kept at Bay With Arms.

Thomas Smallman, one of the directors of the company, had a close shave from being roughly handled when crossing from the company's office to the police station, and it was only with drawn revolvers the crowd was kept at bay.

Regulars Called Out.

At about 1 a.m., after most of the crowd had dispersed, Mayor Wilson sent a request to Wolseley Barracks for a company of soldiers. Thirty-two men, under command of Col. Buchan, Major Dennison, Lieut. Layborn and Lieut. Burnham, marched with fixed bayonets down to the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets. Mayor Wilson placed himself at the head of the militia. Sheriff Cameron, who had been sent for, read the Riot Act for the third time.

The Streets Cleared.

The police with drawn batons cleared the streets of the few hundred boys and youths who remained and without further difficulty the soldiers escorted the cars to the barns.

Militia Also Called.

Colonel Holmes yesterday ordered detachments from the battalions at Galt, Guelph, Woodstock and Windsor, in all about 200 men, to report, equipped for active service, in this city this morning.

The First Hussars have also been ordered to report for duty at 8 a.m. this morning.

City Under Martial Law.

The Mayor says that these steps have been taken to prevent any further rioting and that the city will remain under martial law until perfect order is restored.

Joseph Poneana, a laborer of Fort Erie, Ont., piled several ties on the Grand Trunk tracks near the curve and fixed them so that any train that struck them would surely be derailed. The obstruction was discovered just in time to prevent a train carrying a big crowd from the race track at Fort Erie to Buffalo being wrecked. Poneana was arrested and sentenced to two years in penitentiary.

On Friday evening Bert Fletcher and Albert Green of Newmarket were both seriously injured by the accidental discharge of a gun. Fletcher was getting through a fence on William Lansley's farm, and dragged the gun after him, when the trigger caught against a rail. THE LEVEL CROSSING AGAIN.

Six Out of a Family of Seven Killed on Sunday.

Columbus, O., June 10.—All but one of the seven members of the family of William Reinhard of this city were killed, and the remaining one was badly injured by a Big Four passenger train yesterday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Reinhard and their five children were out for an afternoon drive in a surrey. They started to cross the tracks just as the westbound passenger train, due here at 3.15 p.m., came along. The vehicle was knocked into splinters and Mr. and Mrs. Reinhard and Arthur and Karl were killed outright. Edward and William, jr., were so badly injured that they died after being removed to a hospital. Clarence sustained a fractured collarbone and other lesser injuries, but it is believed he will recover.

HYPNOTISM

Some men are said to possess such wonderful animal magnetism that they can put other persons to sleep by passing the hands before the eyes. This is called hypnotism—an influence about which very little is known—and it is not a difficult matter to find a few people who have been put to sleep in this manner. You can find hundreds and thousands of women, however, whose sleep has been made peaceful and restful by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It soothes the nerves by curing the disorders commonly called "female troubles." It is indorsed by an army of women in every State in the Union, who have been brought back to health after suffering untold misery from disagreeable drains upon the system, irregularities, prolapsus, backache, "bearing-down" pains, nervousness, despondency and hysteria. "Favorite Prescription" is a vegetable medicine, and contains no alcoholic stimulant or dangerous narcotic to create morbid cravings. Its action is confined altogether to the distinctly feminine organism, which it heals, soothes and strengthens. It helps to make existence pleasant before baby comes, and on the occasion of the little one's advent, danger is avoided and the pain reduced to almost nothing.

Mrs. Anna Willy, (Michigan House), of Northville, Spink Co., S. Dak., writes: "I am enjoying good health, thanks to your kind advice and valuable remedies. I suffered very much with female weakness and other ailments for more than two years, when I wrote to you for advice. After carefully following your advice and taking six bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery' I am now a well and happy woman. I have also taken several vials of your 'Pleasant Pellets' which did me a great deal of good."

Accept no substitute, which a dishonest dealer may urge as "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

THE FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

RAIN INTERFERED WITH THE BASEBALL MATCH AT UXBRIDGE.

There Was a Good Crowd Present at the Lindsay Match on Friday—Lacrosse Games Played on Saturday—Miscellaneous.

Baseball.

The Lindsay Post says: "Our citizens turned out in large numbers Friday afternoon to witness the baseball match between Peterborough and home teams. The visitors had a very strong aggregation, hence the game was a hot one from the start to finish. They were outplayed at almost every point, but won out by reason of their superior battery. Danny McCabe, the one-armed Peterborough pitcher, is a ball player from the ground up, and created a very favorable impression. The game ended 11 to 9 in favor of Peterborough, and an innings. The winners spent the night at the Simpson house, and left for Uxbridge on Saturday morning's train."

After their match in Lindsay on Friday the Peterborough baseball team proceeded to Uxbridge, where a game had been arranged for Saturday afternoon. Only four innings were played, the rain pouring down during that time and for the rest of the afternoon. For the four innings Uxbridge scored 11 runs and Peterborough 1. It was impossible to play ball in the rain, the team going on the field simply to secure the guarantee money.

Lacrosse.

The Shamrocks defeated Sherbrooke in a big league game at Montreal on Saturday by 10 straights. The Sherbrookes are proving themselves too weak for the league in which they travel at every match they play.

At Quebec the home team defeated the Capitals of Ottawa by 7 goals to 3. The result was something of a surprise.

At Galt, in the intermediate series of the O.L.A. on Saturday, Galt defeated the Fergus Thistles by 2 to 0.

The Tecumsehs of Toronto, are playing an exhibition match in Brampton to-day. Brampton plays here on Wednesday. Owing to it following so close upon the game which they play at home to-day the Bramptons wanted Wednesday's match postponed but as arrangements had been made and as prospects were good for a big gate the home team could not see it that way and refused the request.

Bud Bogart is in town again and will turn out with the team for practice to-night in preparation for Wednesday's match.

The match arranged between the Victorias for Saturday afternoon was not played owing to the rain.

TROUBLE BREWING.

A Few Cases That Will be Heard in Police Court This Week.

Police Magistrate Dumble is spending a few days at Stony lake far from the madding crowd, but the Chief is accumulating material for the magistrate's little axe and reports a grand field day for Thursday. On that day three charges will be heard for selling liquor without licenses, one of the parties accused being a hotelkeeper and the others well known characters around town. They are charged with having dispensed lager and other such refreshment at the Nicholls park on the afternoon of July 1st, on the occasion of the picnic of the Toronto civic employees there.

There was a big row in the Italian colony on Elm-st. yesterday in the Minicola family, and a charge has been laid against a man for assaulting his wife.

There have also been laid a couple of charges of cows running at large contrary to the statute relating thereto.

SENATOR SANFORD WAS DROWNED.

THE BOAT UPSET WHILE FISHING AND THE FATALITY RESULTED.

A Young Lady who Was With Him was Rescued—The Drowning Occurred at Muskoka Near His Summer Residence

Windermere, Muskoka, July 10.—Senator Sanford, of Hamilton, was drowned this morning by being upset from a boat while fishing in company with a young lady visitor near his own island. Two young girls near by heard the cries for help and arrived in time to save the young lady, but when the Senator's body was got ashore and help called it was found that life had departed.

Wm. Eli Sanford was born in New York in 1823, so that he was sixty-one years of age when his sad and lamentable drowning occurred. He came to Canada when young and was identified with the early history of Manitoba. He accumulated wealth, and was one of the best known of the Ontario Senators. He was called to the Senate in 1867, being a Conservative in politics. He was president of the Sanford Manufacturing Co., president of the Hamilton Ladies' College, and a member of the Board of Regents of Victoria University. He was a gentleman who was respected and esteemed wherever known, and his demise will be received with sincere sorrow in all parts of Ontario where he was known.

It is said that Fred Loughead is desirous of getting into the racing game again and that he may enter the races at Buffalo on July 15th.

THE PRINCIPLES OF ORANGEISM

ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE OF THE ORANGEMEN OF PETERBOROUGH.

A Big Gathering at Charlotte-st. Church—Principles of the Order Expounded by Rev. Mr. Crossley.

The annual church parade of the Orangemen of Peterborough and vicinity was held last evening to Charlotte-st. church, when the sermon was preached by Rev. D. O. Crossley. The brethren assembled at their hall, corner of Simcoe and George-sts., and headed by the Sons of England band, marched down by way of George and Charlotte-sts. The turnout was a large one. Those in line were No. 89 L. O. L., No. 49 L. O. L., No. 321 L. O. L., and deputations from Nassau and Smith lodges. The parade was viewed with interest by many. The congregation at the church was a large one.

Rev. Mr. Crossley first expressed the pleasure he felt in welcoming the Orangemen to Charlotte-st. church. He hoped they would have as much pleasure from the service as he had in greeting them.

He took his text from I Peter II, 17:

"Honor all men; love the brotherhood; fear God; honor the king."

He pointed out that anybody following this text cannot fall short of being what they ought to be and that they will meet with the approval of God and of the best men. Insofar as men build their characters on the Bible they come up to the standard set by God. There is a very wide range of character between the depraved and those that are truly good, and men are found on all levels. Nobody should be satisfied merely with being better than the worst, but all ought to aim and strive to be equal to the best. They ought to realize that the average of to-day is very much too low, and should, therefore, try to come up to God's standard.

The text chosen, Rev. Mr. Crossley remarked, presents of Godliness—to give honor where honor is due and tribute to whom tribute is due. This is all that religion asks of any man. All the claims of religion are contained in the text, simply the recognition of the relationships with those around, with God and with the king. So far as he could ascertain the speaker believed that the fundamental principles of Orangeism were contained in the words of the text. The society has been falsely accused when it has been called narrow and bigoted. The man who honors all men cannot possibly be a bigot. The speaker read from the constitution of the society to show that it is liberal in its tenets. There is, he pointed

THE ELEMENTS

Farmers to Make a Demand on the Dominion Government.

If the farmers whose lands bordering on the Otonabee were flooded by the work of the Dominion Government at Hastings do not get compensation it will not be for want of trying. They will drown the Government with appeals and they drowned one another about once a week with the oft repeated statement of their claims. Another meeting was held in the Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon. There was quite a gathering of the property owners. Mr. Jas. Kendry, M.P., was also present. The meeting decided to make a straight demand on the Government for compensation and drew up a statement for that purpose. It is expected that it will be sent down about the middle of this week.

PERSIAN MISSIONARY

To Speak at the Christian Endeavor Meeting at St. Andrew's To-Night.

At St. Andrew's to-night Mr. D. O. Eshoo, a young Persian, will speak. Mr. Eshoo is a native of Persia and is studying in Canada to fit himself for a medical missionary. He intends to go back home to labor among his fellow countrymen and seek to spread the Gospel light in his benighted country. He will appear in the native costumes of both lady and gentleman and will tell something of the manners and customs of his people. Mr. Eshoo comes well recommended, so an interesting talk may be expected. Collection at close. Hearty welcome to all.

MR. WILL MOORE WAS DROWNED.

HIS CANOE WAS SWAMPED ON STONY LAKE THURSDAY LAST.

The Sad Fatality Was Not Known Until To-day When the Body Was Found—The Canoe Still Missing.

Wm. Henry Moore, eldest son of Mr. W. H. Moore, was drowned at Stony lake on Thursday last, but the sad fate which had overtaken the young man was not known to his friends until to-day. The fatality in all its particulars is exceedingly sad, and comes as a most severe shock to his parents, relatives and friends.

Yesterday word was telephoned from Burleigh that Mr. Moore had left his camp on Thursday and had not been seen since, and as his absence, at first not arousing any anxiety as it was supposed he had gone to visit friends on some other part of the lake, was prolonged his comrades became alarmed and made enquiries which failed to explain his whereabouts. His father was therefore communicated with yesterday, and, with Mr. Adam Hall left for Stony lake early this morning, driving to McCracken's. All day friends in town were anxiously enquiring if any news had been received, all clinging to the belief that Will would be found safe and sound. Shortly before four o'clock this afternoon, however, a telephone message from Lakefield announced that the worst fears had proved correct, that the young man had been drowned, his body being found on the south side of the lake below Boschink.

With Messrs. Fred and Victor Ferguson Will Moore was enjoying camp life on Eagle Mount, their tent being pitched near Ald. Sawers' cottage. On Thursday last a high wind was blowing over the lake, but Will, who was a capital hand in a canoe, was not daunted by the wind or waves. He put some stones in the bow of his boat for ballast and left Eagle Mount for Boschink to visit some friends at "The Syndicate." This was the last seen of him alive, and how the accident that ended his life occurred is not known, as it was not witnessed by any one. It is supposed, however, that the heavy wind and high sea was too much for the frail craft and that it swamped, the stone ballast carrying the canoe to the bottom of the lake, as no trace of the craft has yet been found. This would lead to the conclusion that the canoe swamped and sank.

His absence from camp did not cause alarm as it was supposed that he had remained with friends. But when he continued absent and enquiries showed that he had not arrived at Broschink serious fears were aroused, and the search made to-day resulted in the discovery of the body.

The body was brought to Lakefield on the boat and prepared for burial. It will be brought to town this evening and the funeral will take place from the north end of Water-st at eight o'clock.

The deceased was about twenty-four years of age, and a fine, stalwart young man, who would make a great battle for life before sinking in the waters of the lake. He had been in the Northwest Mounted Police for a time, and was also engaged in ranching in the Northwest, returning home a short time ago. He was popular among all his friends. His death will be a sad shock to his family.

His mother is at present visiting in Rochester. The entire community will sympathize with the sorrowing family at this time.
